Severally —Where a right to relief in respect of the same act or transaction is alleged to exist in two or more persons severally they may join as plaintiffs in one suit or they may at their option bring separate suits. The rule does not necessitate one suit. A Hindu priest raises a masonry structure upon a certain platform round a sacred tree on which every member of the community has an individual right to perform religious rite. Here every member of the community has individually a cause of action and any one member may therefore sue the priest for the removal of the structure. But it is not necessary that all the members should join as plaintiffs in one suit. They may so join if they choose but the law does not say that they should all so join (y). The same rule applies when two or more persons are entitled to the same relief in the alternative see notes below under the head in the alternative. The rule however is different when two or more persons are jointly entitled to the same relief in respect of a transaction.

Jointly —Where two or more persons are jointly entitled to the same relief in respect of a transaction they must all join as plaintiffs in one suit. Thus if A, B and C are joint owners of a property they must all be joined as plaintiffs in a suit to recover the property (z). So in a suit to recover joint family property all the members of the joint family must as a general rule be joined as plaintiffs (a). In a suit to recover trust property all the trustees must join as plaintiffs (b). In a suit to recover the estate of a deceased person all the executors who have proved the will of the deceased must be joined as plaintiffs (c). If any one of them does not consent to join as plaintiff he may be joined as a defendant [r 10 sub r (2)]. The proper course is first to ask him to join as plaintiff and if he refuses to join him as defendant. But the suit should not be dismissed merely because he is joined as defendant without being first called upon to join as plaintiff (d).

A Hindu dies leaving a widow, an adopted son and a separate brother. A dispute arises between the widow and the adopted son on the one hand and the brother on the other as regards certain lands. The widow and the adopted son allege that the lands form part of the estate of the deceased. The brother, on the other hand, alleges that the

In such a case it has been held by the High Court of Madras that a suit by the widow and the adopted son as co plaintiffs to recover the property from the brother is defective on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs for the plaintiffs having antagonistic claims it cannot be said that the right to relief exists jointly in them (f)

In the alternative —If in the case put above the adoption is disputed not by the widow but by the brother a suit may be brought by the widow and the adopted son as co plaintiffs against the brother claiming in the alternative to recover the property from the widow if the adoption is not valid or for the adopted son if the adoption is valid (g) Here there is no misjoinder of plaintiffs for the validity of the adoption is not disputed by the co plaintiff as in the preceding case but by the defendant See O 1 r 4 (a) below

acts or transactions is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, where if separate suits were brought against such persons any common question of law or fact would arise

Misjoinder of defendants—This rule is the converse of rule 1. It deals with joinder of defendants. See notes to O 1 r 1. Misjoinder of defendants. Rule 4 of this Order is to be read with this rule.

Relation of this rule to O 2 r 3—O 2 r 3 is to be read subject to the provisions of this rule (k).

Jurisdiction—This rule contains a provision as to joinder of parties. It assumes the existence of a suit in a proper forum, the Court having jurisdiction to try the suit. If the Court has such jurisdiction then this rule may come into play. Hence if in a suit brought against two defendants A and B the Court has jurisdiction against A but none against B this rule does not confer jurisdiction upon the Court to try the suit against B altogether merely because the conditions of this rule are satisfied (l).

All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist whether jointly, severally or in the alternative in respect of the same matter.

In some cases under that section it was said that the expression same matter was equivalent to same cause of action, in others that it was equivalent to same act or transaction.

New Rule—Under the present rule all persons may be joined as defendants against whom any right to relief in respect of the same act or transaction is alleged to exist where if separate suits were brought against such persons any common question of law or fact would arise. A plaintiff is entitled under this rule to join several defendants in respect of several and distinct causes of action subject to the discretion of the Court to strike out one or more of the defendants on the analogy of O 1 r 2 if it thinks it right to do so (m). Whatever the law may have been at the time when Smurthwaite v Hannay (n) was decided joinder of parties and joinders of causes of action are discretionary in this sense that if they are joined there is no absolute right to have them struck out but it is discretionary in the Court to do so if it thinks right (o). As a general rule where claims against different parties involve or may involve a common question of fact bearing sufficient importance in proportion to the rest of the action to render it desirable that the whole of the matters be disposed of at the same time the Court will allow the joinder of defendants subject to its discretion as to how the action should be tried (p) [see ill (3) below]. See notes to O 2 r 3. Joinder of defendants and causes of action.

A sues B and C for damages for personal injury charging the defendants jointly with joint negligence and alternatively charging separate negligence against each defendant. The suit is not bad for misjoinder of defendant because the injury to the plaintiff arose from the same transaction or series of transactions.

4 The mere fact that the relief claimed against the several defendants differs in detail is no ground for objection that the suit is bad for misjoinder of defendants provided that the suit against the defendants is in respect of the same act or transaction A applies for shares in a Company on the faith of a prospectus The shares are allotted to him and he pays up Rs 5 000 thereon A then sues the Company and the directors alleging that the prospectus was false and calculated to mislead claiming as against the Company cancellation of the allotment to him of his shares and the return of Rs 5 000 with interest and as against the directors Rs 5 000 by way of damages Here the relief claimed against the Company is rescission and repayment of the purchase money with interest and that claimed against the directors is damages The fact that the relief claimed against the two sets of defendants differs in detail does not render the suit bad for misjoinder of defendants for the suit is in respect of one transaction namely the issue of a false and fraudulent prospectus In substance the shareholder has one grievance call it a cause of action or what you like and in substance he has one complaint and all the persons he sues have according to him been guilty of conduct which gives him a right to relief in respect of that one thing which they have done namely the issuing of a prospectus. The remedy is different as against the several defendants but not so much in substance as in form (w) See r 5 below

5 A is an exporter of frozen meat. B is the owner of a line of steamers. By a contract between A and B B agrees to carry from Argentina to Europe frozen meat in steamers belonging to him or in other suitable steamers. It is subsequently agreed that frozen meat should be shipped by A on a steamer called the Deion procured by B and belonging to C. It is accordingly shipped on the Deion and the master of the Deion signs a bill of lading in respect of it and hands it to A. A sues B and C in respect of damage to the meat alleged to have been caused by the unseaworthiness of the Deion claiming against B on the terms of the before mentioned contract and against C upon the bill of lading. The suit is not bad for misjoinder of defendants (x)

6 A sues B, C, D, E and F for the recovery of certain documents of title and the goods covered thereby and in the alternative for damages. It is alleged in the plaint that the goods belonged to A that B obtained from A the documents of title relating thereto by fraud and made them over to C that C knowing that B had no title either to the documents or to the goods wrongfully dealt with them and sold the goods to D and E that D and F wrongfully claimed to retain the goods and the documents of title and, lastly that one of the documents of title namely a railway receipt was pledged by B to F though the goods covered by it were in the possession of D. The suit is not bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action (y). The foundation of the case on which the rest of it depends is the alleged fraud of B. If such fraud is proved the question is did the defendants who all claim under B obtain any title? If the plaintiff fails to prove fraud on the part of B the case fails against all the defendants. If he proves fraud it may be that the defendants may have a different answer by way of defence but that does not make the case any the less one of a common question of law and fact. The same act or transaction which concerns all the parties is the alleged fraud of B and this involves a common question of law or fact. All defendants have derived title from a person who is alleged to have obtained the goods by means of fraud. By reason of this the possession of all is alleged to be wrongful. Should it however be convenient the Court may (Umabai v. Lalal (1)) direct the successive trial of the issues separately affecting different defendants. The question of the alleged fraud of B touching all the defendants may be tried first. If it fails there is an end of the case (z).

No misjoinder where some reliefs merely ancillary.—Where the relief claimed against some of the defendants is merely ancillary to the relief claimed against others the suit is not bad for misjoinder provided the suit is not in respect of distinct causes of action. A and B are co-shrivers of certain lands in the occupation of C and D. A is entitled to two thirds of the lands and B to one third. A sues B, C and D claiming as against C and D that they may be ejected from his share of the lands and as against B that the lands may if necessary be partitioned between him and B. The suit is not bad for misjoinder for though the relief claimed as against C and D is for possession and as against B is for partition the latter relief is auxiliary to the primary relief which is for possession. The inclusion of B in this suit is merely as that of a proper party to the proceeding in the circumstances of the case and not as a litigant against whom a separate claim having no necessary connection with the claim of C and D is made. B in fact is a necessary party to the suit for the determination of C and D is made. B in fact is a necessary party to the suit for the determination of C and D is made. B in fact is a necessary party to the suit for the determination of C and D is made.

Costs where relief is claimed against defendants in the alternative—Where a suit is brought by A against B and C in the alternative and a decree is passed against B with costs but the suit as against C is dismissed the Court has jurisdiction in a proper case to order B (the unsuccessful defendant) to pay in addition to the costs payable by him to A (the plaintiff) the costs of C (the successful defendant) The rule has thus been stated by Vaughan Williams LJ The proper way is not to join any defendant unreasonably if the facts are such that it is reasonable to put them both and reasonable to be in a state of uncertainty as to which of the two is really guilty one then it is part of the reasonable costs of the action that the costs of the unsuccessful party you have launched against one of the defendant and who has succeeded in defeating himself should be borne by the man who is to blame (1) In Child v Manning (1911) 11 Ch. Several liability on a contract—This rule is confined to suits on contracts. The liability on a contract may be either (1) several or (2) joint and several or (3) joint. A and B each for himself agrees to pay Rs 5000 to C. Here A and B are severally liable on the contract. C may therefore bring one suit against A and B or he may bring a separate suit against A and a separate suit against B. These suits may be brought simultaneously or they may be brought successively one after the other. But if the suit is brought against A and a decree is obtained against him and the decree is satisfied C cannot subsequently sue B on the contract. But if the decree remains unsatisfied C is not precluded from suing B.

Joint and several liability on a contract—The legal consequences of a joint and several liability on a contract are the same as those of several liability. Thus if A and B give a bond to C for Rs 1000 and the bond provides that A and B shall jointly and severally pay the amount to C, C may sue A and B jointly or he may sue them separately, as in the case where the liability is several.

Joint liability on a contract—The present rule does not provide for the case of a joint liability arising on a contract or negotiable instrument. The reason is that so far as liability on a contract is concerned s 43 of the Indian Contract Act 1872 makes all joint contracts joint and several. It allows a promisee to sue one or more of several joint promisors as he chooses and excludes the right of a joint promisor to be sued along with his co-promisors (r). A partnership firm consisting of two persons A and B purchases from C goods worth Rs 5000. The liability of partners is joint and A and B are therefore jointly liable to pay the price to C. But under s 43 of the Contract Act C may sue either A or B at his option. It is not incumbent upon C to join both A and B defendants. If C sues A alone and a decree is passed against A he cannot according to English law afterwards sue B even though the decree against A remains unsatisfied. The reason is that there is in the case of a joint contract a single cause of action which can only be sued on once. The same view has been taken by the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the effect of s 43 of the Indian Contract Act 1872 is to make all joint contracts joint and several. Therefore where C obtained a judgment against A upon a joint bond executed by A and B and afterwards as the judgment was not satisfied sued B for the same money the Allahabad Court held that the suit against B was not barred. See Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract Act notes to s 43. Effect of decree against some only of joint promisors.

It may be added here that if in the case put above C sues A alone A may apply under O 1 r 10 (2) to have B joined as a defendant and the Court may make such order as it thinks proper. In England it has been held that in an action on a joint contract against one only of the joint contractors the Court has jurisdiction without obtaining the consent of the plaintiff to make an order requiring the plaintiff to add the other joint contractor as a co-defendant and that where the defendant has set up a reasonable case of joint contract he has in the absence of special circumstances negating it a prima facie right to an order requiring the plaintiff to add the other contractor as co-defendant (s).

Parties to bills of exchange—A draws a bill of exchange upon B payable to C or order. The bill is accepted by B. C then endorses the bill to D. D endorses it to E and E to F. If the bill while in the hands of F is dishonoured, F may at his option sue A (the drawer) or B (the acceptor) or C (the endorser) or D (the endorser) or E (the endorser) or F may bring one action against all or any of them (t).

7 [New R S C, O 16, r 7] Where the plaintiff is in doubt as to the person from whom he is entitled to obtain redress, he may join two or more defendants in order that the question as to which of the defendants is liable, and to what extent, may be determined as between all parties

When plaintiff in doubt from whom redress is to be sought

Scope of the rule—This rule applies only where the plaintiff is in doubt as to the person from whom he is entitled to obtain redress. It does not enable a plaintiff to join separate causes of action against different defendants in one action in a case where he could not do so under r 3 above (u). Thus if damage is caused to A's house and he is in doubt as to whether it was caused by excavation works carried on by a County Council or by Water Company, allowing water from its mains to weaken the soil in front of the house A cannot join the Council and the Company in one action for these are two distinct torts. It does not matter that the resulting damage is the same in each case for it is not the damage that constitutes the cause of action but the injury or the wrong done by a tortfeasor (1). In such a case the present rule does not apply. The following however is a case to which the rule has been held to apply. M purporting to act as agent for C enters into a charter party with B for loading B's vessel with a cargo. The cargo is not loaded and B sues M for damages alleging that M had no authority to enter into the charter party as agent for C. Subsequently B finds upon discovery of documents that it is probable that C did give authority to M to bind him [C] with the charter party and applies to add C as a defendant. The case is one within this rule and C may be added as a defendant (w).

Object of the rule—This rule is an exception to the general rule that all persons interested in a suit ought to be made parties thereto (x) Convenience requires that in suits where there is a community of interest amongst a large number of persons a few should be allowed to represent the whole (y) so that trouble and expense may be saved (z)

Application of the rule—The provisions of this rule apply only if (1) the parties are numerous (2) they have the same interest and (3) the necessary permission is obtained and notice given

Representative suit—A suit filed by one or more persons under this rule on behalf of themselves and others having the same interest in the suit is called a representative suit. The provisions of Explanation VI to s 11 [res judicata] apply to such a suit But that Explanation is not controlled by O I r 8 and if the Court allows a suit to proceed in a representative capacity for the benefit of numerous parties all those parties will be bound by the decree although the procedure prescribed by the rule was not followed (a) See notes below Decree in a representative suit

Numerous parties—Fluctuating body—Thirty defendants were held to be numerous (b) The High Court of Madras has held that a suit cannot be brought under this rule on behalf of the general public (c) Following this decision the High Court of Calcutta held in one case that this rule did not apply unless the parties were capable of being ascertained and a suit could not therefore be brought under this rule on behalf of the Hindu community as the whole Hindu community is incapable of ascertainment (d) This decision has been dissented from by the same High Court in later cases where it was held that it was not necessary to the application of this rule that the parties should be capable of being ascertained (e) In this connection it may be observed that property may be owned by a fluctuating body of persons like the inhabitants of a village (f) or the Dhobi community of Varanasi (g) and a suit may be brought on their behalf under this rule It has also been held that a person may render himself liable to a community like the Vaisya community of Vagarala by agreeing to pay a certain sum of money to it and a suit to recover it may be brought by the community in the name of one or more members of the community under this rule (h)

Same interest—It is essential that the parties should have the same interest in the suit Thus where there are numerous legatees under a will any one legatee may sue the executors on behalf of himself and the other legatees for a discovery of the estate of the deceased come into their hands as they have all the same interest in having the will proved (i) Similarly where a person dies leaving numerous creditors any one creditor may sue on behalf of himself and the other creditors as they all have the same interest in representing the estate of the deceased to be as large as possible (j) On the same principle of the community of interest any one rayat of a village may sue the proprietor of the village for himself and the other rayats for a declaration of their general rights against the proprietor (k) Similarly a villager may bring a suit on behalf of himself and his fellow villagers for a declaration of a right of way and for an injunction against the defendant for obstructing the way (l) Likewise any one tax payer may

It does not enable a plaintiff to join separate causes of action against different defendants in one action in a case where he could not do so under r 3 above (u). Thus if damage is caused to A's house and he is in doubt as to whether it was caused by excavation works carried on by a County Council or by Water Company, allowing water from its mains to seep into the soil in front of the house, A cannot join the Council and the Company in one action for these are two distinct torts. It does not matter that the resulting damage is the same in each case for it is not the damage that constitutes the cause of action but the injuria or the wrong done by a tortfeasor (v). In such a case the present rule does not apply. The following however is a case to which the rule has been held to apply. M purporting to act as agent for C enters into a charter party with B for loading B's vessel with a cargo. The cargo is not loaded and B sues M for damages alleging that M had no authority to enter into the charter party as agent for C. Subsequently B finds upon discovery of documents that it is probable that C did give authority to M to bind him [C] with the charter party and applies to add C as a defendant. The case is one within this rule and C may be added as a defendant (w).

(1) Where there are numerous persons having the same interest in one suit, one or more of such persons may, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued, or may defend, in such suit, on behalf of or for the benefit of all persons so interested. But the Court shall in such case give, at the plaintiff's expense, notice of the institution of the suit to all such persons either by personal service or, where from the number of persons or any other cause such service is not reasonably practicable, by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct.

(2) Any person on whose behalf or for whose benefit a suit is instituted or defended under sub rule (1) may apply to the Court to be made a party to such suit

Object of the rule—This rule is an exception to the general rule that all persons interested in a suit ought to be made parties thereto (x) Convenience requires that in suits where there is a community of interest amongst a large number of persons a few should be allowed to represent the whole (y) so that trouble and expense may be saved ( )

Application of the rule—The provisions of this rule apply only if (1) the parties are numerous (2) they have the same interest and (3) the necessary permission is obtained and notice given

Representative suit—A suit filed by one or more persons under this rule on behalf of themselves and others having the same interest in the suit is called a representative suit. The provisions of Explanation VI to s 11 [res judicata] apply to such a suit But that Explanation is not controlled by O 1 r 8 and if the Court allows a suit to proceed in a representative capacity for the benefit of numerous parties all those parties will be bound by the decree although the procedure prescribed by the rule was not followed (a) See notes below Decree in a representative suit

Numerous parties—Fluctuating body—Thirty defendants were held to be numerous (b) The High Court of Madras has held that a suit cannot be brought under this rule on behalf of the general public (c) Following this decision the High Court of Calcutta held in one case that this rule did not apply unless the parties were capable of being ascertained and a suit could not therefore be brought under this rule on behalf of the Hindu community as the whole Hindu community is incapable of ascertainment (d) This decision has been dissented from by the same High Court in later cases where it was held that it was not necessary to the application of this rule that the parties should be capable of being ascertained (e) In this connection it may be observed that property may be owned by a fluctuating body of persons like the inhabitants of a village (f) or the Dhobi community of Haraina (g) and a suit may be brought on their behalf under this rule It has also been held that a person may render himself liable to a community like the Vysia community of Mogarala by agreeing to pay a certain sum of money to it and a suit to recover it may be brought by the community in the name of one or more members of the community under this rule (h)

Same interest.—It is essential that the parties should have the same interest in the suit Thus where there are numerous legatees under a will any one legatee may sue the executors on behalf of himself and the other legatees for a discovery of the estate of the deceased come into their hands as they have all the same interest in having the will proved (i) Similarly where a person dies leaving numerous creditors any one creditor may sue on behalf of himself and the other creditors as they all have the same interest in representing the estate of the deceased to be as large as possible (j) On the same principle of the community of interest any one rayat of a village may sue the proprietor of the village for himself and the other rayats for a declaration of their general rights against the proprietor (k) Similarly a villager may bring a suit on behalf of himself and his fellow villagers for a declaration of a right of way and for an injunction against the defendant for obstructing the way (l) Likewise any one tax payer may bring a suit against a Municipality on behalf of himself and the other tax payers to restrain the Municipality from misapplying its funds (m)

In Templeton v Russell (n) a case under the corresponding English rule it was held that the rule applies only to persons who have or claim some beneficial proprietary right which they are asserting or defending in the suit. But this meaning of the word interest was disapproved by the House of Lords in Bedford (Duke of) v Ellis (o). In the last mentioned case Lord Macnaghten said. It seems to me that there is no reason whatever for so restricting the rule. Given a common interest and a common grievance a representative suit was in order if the relief sought was in its nature beneficial to all whom the plaintiff proposed to represent. To limit the rule to persons having a beneficial proprietary interest would be opposed to precedent and not I think in accordance with common sense. Take the case of a creditor's suit which perhaps was the earliest instance of plaintiffs being allowed to sue in a representative character. It can hardly be suggested that a creditor has a proprietary interest in the real or personal estate of his deceased debtor. Thus the disciples of a mutt have sufficient interest within the meaning of this rule to maintain a representative suit to declare alienations made by the Mahant invalid and to have the property alienated handed over to the Mahant for the time being (p). Similarly worshippers of a temple have sufficient interest to maintain a representative suit for a declaration that a permanent lease of temple property granted to the defendants in possession is invalid (q) or for recovering temple property from a trespasser (r).

The expression same interest must be distinguished from the expression same transaction. What is required under this rule is that the parties should have the same interest it is not sufficient that their interests arise from the same transaction. Therefore where goods of several persons are shipped under separate bills of lading the mere fact that the goods of all the persons are lost by the same cause does not entitle any one or more of them to bring a representative suit on behalf of themselves and others against the owner of the ship (s). But they may all join in one suit under O 1 r 1.

When the meeting of a caste at which plaintiff was appointed to file a suit was irregularly convened and numerous members of the caste were opposed to the suit O 1 r 8 was held not to be applicable (t). But if the plaintiffs have been validly appointed to represent the community the fact that some members of the community subsequently side with the defendant will not affect the representative character of the suit under this rule (u).

Different interests—Where the parties have not the same interest they must all be on the record. Thus in a partition suit all co parceners must be brought before the Court (v). Similarly in a suit for contribution brought by a promisor all the co promisors bound to contribute must be brought before the Court (w). Numerous persons interested in equity of redemption should all be joined as party defendants (x).

Clubs and other associations—The secretary of a club or other association cannot sue alone in respect of a matter in which the association is interested even if he is authorised so to do by a resolution of the members of the association. The suit must be brought by all the members of the association or by the secretary on his own behalf and on behalf of the other members under this rule (y) So if the treasurer of an association misappropriates the funds of the association no one member can sue alone to recover the amount misappropriated though he may be authorised so to do by a resolution of the association The suit must be brought by all the members or by any one member on his own behalf and on behalf of the other members ( ) The secretary of a club cannot unless he has expressly accepted a personal liability be sued personally on a contract entered into by him on behalf of the club nor can the members of a club collectively be sued through the secretary (a) The same remarks apply to an unregistered company (b) A suit to eject tenants from property belonging to the caste cannot be brought by the president of the managing committee of the caste though he may be authorised to do so by a resolution of the committee The suit must be brought by him on behalf of all the members of the caste (c) But no suit can be brought under this rule at all if the caste or association is divided into two parties one party being for the suit and the other against it In such a case it cannot be said that on behalf of all the members of a caste the members of the caste have the same interest in the suit within the meaning of this rule (d) See notes above Numerous parties

Trade Union—A trade union may be sued in its registered name or some of its members can be sued under this rule (e)

Fraudulent transfer—A suit to set aside a deed of gift or of trust on the ground that it is in fraud on creditors must be brought by or on behalf of all the creditors. Such a suit cannot be entertained if it is brought by only some of the creditors (f)

Suit by a member of a community in his own right—This rule is an enabling rule. It does not debar a member of a community from maintaining a suit in his own right though the act complained of may also be injurious to the whole community. Thus if Mahomedans belonging to a particular sect are not allowed to use a mosque for prayer any member of the sect entitled to use the mosque may sue as plaintiff to enforce the right. It is not necessary that the suit should be brought by him on behalf of himself and all other members of the sect entitled to use the mosque. A Mahomedan entitled to worship in a mosque may sue for a declaration that certain property alienated by the mutawalli is wakf property and for possession thereof from the alienes (g). Similarly any member of a community may bring a suit to set aside unauthorized alienations of endowed property or of property belonging to the community or for the removal of encroachments upon such property (h) or for maladministration of property belonging to the community (i).

When rule does not apply—The rule does not apply to an action of libel (j)

At what stage of the suit leave should be obtained—The proper course is to obtain permission before the suit is instituted but if that is not done the rule does not forbid leave being granted afterwards. Permission under this rule may be granted even after the institution of the suit (k)

Whether the leave should be express—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the leave to sue need not be express it is enough if it can be inferred from the proceedings (l). On the other hand there is a dictum of Stuart C J in an Allahabad case (m) that the leave to sue must be express. A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has held that the suit may be a representative suit although the procedure prescribed by this rule has not been followed (n)

Leave must be granted to definitely named persons—Where this was not done the suit was dismissed by the High Court of Calcutta (o). The other Courts would probably grant fresh leave in such a case. See notes above. At what stage of the suit etc.

May be sued.—This rule applies not only to the case of numerous plaintiffs having the same interest but also to the case of numerous defendants having the same interest. Thus where the inhabitants of a village assert a right of way over land belonging to the plaintiff the plaintiff may with the permission of the Court sue any one or more of the inhabitants on behalf of them all (p). The consent of the defendants on the record is not necessary for this purpose (q).

May defend.—When there are numerous defendants having the same interest any one of them may be sued on his behalf and on behalf of others. But where this is not done and all the defendants are on the record any one defendant may defend the suit on behalf of himself and the rest with the permission of the Court.

Who should apply for permission—(1) Where a plaintiff intends to sue on behalf of himself and others it is the plaintiff that should apply for leave. (2) Similarly where a plaintiff intends to sue one defendant for himself and others it is the plaintiff that should apply for leave. (3) Where numerous defendants having the same interest are all sued and they are all on the record and if any one defendant is appointed by the other defendants to defend the suit on behalf of all it is that defendant who must apply for leave (r).

In Walker v Sur (s) Vaughan Williams L J said. The rule as it stands does not purport to leave it to the mere will or choice of the plaintiff or of the defendants nor to give a right in either case of selection at the choice of a plaintiff who wishes to sue representative members of an unincorporated society. It lies with the judge to give the authority and if he thinks it a case in which the plaintiff may properly sue the persons that he proposes to sue as people proper to be authorized to defend in such cause or matter on behalf of or for the benefit of all persons so interested then the order may be made.

Notice of suit. Where a person sues or is sued or defends a suit on behalf of himself and others any decree that may be passed in the suit is binding upon them all (s 11 Explanation VI) unless the decree has been obtained by fraud or collusion (Evidence Act 1872 s 44). It is therefore necessary that notice of the suit should be given to all the parties who would be bound by the decree for otherwise a person might be concluded by a suit of which he was unaware.

and when notice was not given the Patna High Court held that a decree could only be passed against those defendants who were on the record (t) But reference must be made in this connection to the Madras case of Sonachalam v. Kumaravelu (u) which holds that the representative character of a suit is a matter of substance rather than of form It is however open to any one of the parties whose name does not stand on the record and who would be bound by the decree under the provisions of this rule and sec 11 to apply to the Court under sub rule (2) to be made a party to the suit and the Court may add him as a party provided his interest will be seriously prejudiced if he is not so joined (v) See note below Adding parties.

Court shall give notice by personal service or by public advertisement — These words show that it is the duty of the Court to cause service of the notice or cause an advertisement to be published It is the duty of the plaintiff however to move the Court for that purpose But if he omits to do so the suit ought not to be dismissed on account of the failure of the Court to perform the duties imposed upon it by this rule The appellate Court should in such a case remand the case to the Court of first instance so that it may issue the notice (w)

Title of suit — When the plaintiff sues or defendant is sued on behalf of himself and others under this rule that fact should be stated in the title of the suit and not merely in the plaint (x) The title of the suit where the plaintiff sues in a representative character is as follows [see Appendix 1 I leadings (1) Titles of suits] —

Suit in name of wrong plaintiff — A brings a suit under this section on behalf of himself and other creditors of Y It turns out that A is not a creditor of Y Thereupon B an admitted creditor of Y applies to be added as a plaintiff under Order 10 (1) Has the Court power to grant the application? The question arose in a recent Madras case but it was left open (y) The Madras case was not one of a bona fide mistake and it is submitted that if the suit was instituted by A by such a mistake the amendment may be allowed on terms

Compromise of representative suit — A plaintiff suing in a representative character cannot compromise without leave of the Court nor can he give up or alter any right of the others without their consent or the leave of the Court (z) Similarly a person authorized by the Court to defend a suit on behalf of others having the same interest cannot even if there is no defence consent to judgment against them the proper course in such a case is to submit to judgment on their behalf (a)

Adding parties — The Court will not compel the plaintiff to add the persons on whose behalf he sues as co plaintiffs Thus where an action was brought by a plaintiff on behalf of himself and the other owners of a ship against the defendants for freight and dues for the use of the ship and the defendants applied to add the names of the other owners as plaintiffs in order that the defendants might have the liability of the other owners as plaintiffs for costs it was held that the plaintiff could not be compelled to add the other owners as co plaintiffs (b) Where a plaintiff sues on behalf of himself and others and one of the persons on whose behalf he sues objects to the plaintiff so doing he may apply to have himself added as a defendant (c) If one of the persons on whose behalf the plaintiff purports to sue is dissatisfied with an order made in the suit he may apply to be added as a defendant but he cannot appeal from the order (d) The application to be added as a defendant must be made without unnecessary delay (e) Where in a suit by a creditor for the administration of the estate of the deceased debtor on behalf of himself and other creditors one of the creditors applied to be joined as a party it was held that he should not be so joined unless the Court was satisfied that his interests would be seriously prejudiced if he was not so joined (f) See note above Notice of suit

Addition of plaintiffs after decree—Where the plaintiffs on record neglect to execute the decree passed in a suit brought under this rule the Court may add other persons having the same interest as the plaintiffs to enable them to execute the decree (g)

Decree in a representative suit—The general rule of law is that in suits where one person is allowed to represent others as defendant in a representative capacity any decree passed binds those others only with respect to the property of those others which he can in law represent and although the party on record eo nomine may be made personally liable no personal decree can be passed against the others This is the principle to be applied to suits brought under this rule (h) It has accordingly been held that an injunction in a decree passed in a representative suit brought under this rule is not binding on those who are not actually parties on the record (i) See s 11 Explanation VI and notes above Representative suit

Costs in a representative suit—As to costs in a representative suit see the observations of Marten J in the undermentioned case (j)

Abatement of suit—Where a suit is brought under this rule by A on behalf of himself and 20 others and one of the twenty nine who had never applied to the Court to be made a party under sub r (2) dies pending the suit his death does not cause the suit to abate (k)

Abatement of appeal—A suit is brought by A and B under this rule on behalf of themselves and 387 others against C and a decree is passed in the suit for the plaintiffs C appeals from the decree Pending the appeal 3 out of the 387 who had never applied to be made parties under sub r (2) die C does not apply to bring on record the legal representatives of the three deceased Does the appeal abate? No because the three deceased were not parties to the suit eo nomine (l)

Forty persons institute a suit against B in their own names (and not under this rule) and obtain a decree jointly against B B appeals from the decree and applies for and obtains an order from the appellate Court when the appeal is admitted that 4 out of the 40 respondents may be permitted under this rule to defend the appeal Pending the appeal one of the 36 respondents dies but no steps are taken to bring his legal representative on the record. Does the appeal abate? Yes because the decree was obtained by the plaintiffs for themselves and not in a representative capacity Even if the procedure prescribed by this rule is applicable to appeals by the operation of s 107 the order passed by the appellate Court under this rule did not relieve B from the

Representative suit and res judicata.—See notes above Representative suit and Decree in a representative suit

9 [S 31, R S C, O 16 r 11] No suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or non joinder of parties, and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it

Misjoinder of parties.—A misjoinder or non joinder of parties is not fatal to the suit (n). Where there is a misjoinder of parties the name of the plaintiff or the defendant who has been improperly joined may be struck out under r 10 sub r (2) below and the case may be proceeded with. See s 99 above

Non joinder of parties.—As regards non joinder of parties a distinction has been drawn between the non joinder of a person who ought to have been joined as a party and the non joinder of a person whose joinder is only a matter of convenience or expediency [see O 1 r 10 (2)]. A suit by executors trustees co owners of immovable property partners etc for recovery of property in which they are jointly interested belongs to the former class. As to this class of cases it has been held that if the suit is brought by some only of the persons interested e.g. by some of the executors and not all and if the defendant objects on the ground of non joinder the plaintiffs may apply for an amendment to join the absent parties as co plaintiffs in which case the Court should allow the application and not dismiss the suit. But if after the objection has been raised the plaintiffs proceed with the suit without bringing on the record the persons whose non joinder has been objected to the suit it has been held must be dismissed. This is because O 1 r 9 is a rule of procedure which does not affect substantive law and as the persons not joined are not bound the decree cannot be effective. In the latter class of cases that is cases in which the joinder of a person as a party is only a matter of convenience the absent party may be added or the suit may be tried without him (o). The same principle applies in the case of defendants (p). See notes to O 1 r 10 Limitation Act see 22

stage of the suit, if satisfied that the suit has been instituted through a bona fide mistake, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person to be substituted or added as plaintiff upon such terms as the Court thinks just

(2) The Court may at any stage of the proceedings, either upon or without the application of either party, and on such terms as may appear to the Court to be just, order that the name of any party improperly joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, be struck out, and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added

(3) No person shall be added as a plaintiff suing without a next friend or as the next friend of a plaintiff under any disability without his consent

(4) Where a defendant is added, the plaint shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, be amended in such manner as may be necessary and amended copies of the summons and of the plaint shall be served on the new defendant and, if the Court thinks fit, on the original defendant

(5) Subject to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, section 22, the proceedings as against any person added as defendant shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of the summons

SUB RULE (1)

Sub rule (1) is the equivalent of s 27 of the Code of 1882 It corresponds to P 5 C O 16 r 2

Scope of sub rule (1)—Sub rule (1) contemplates cases in which a suit is brought by a plaintiff and he subsequently discovers that he cannot get full relief without joining some other person as co plaintiff (g) or where it is found that some other person and not the original plaintiff is entitled to the relief claimed In the former case the application (which must be made by the original plaintiff) will be for adding and in the latter for substituting that other person as plaintiff But the Court must be satisfied before the application is granted that the amendment has become necessary through a bona fide mistake on the part of the original plaintiff. The mistake may be either one of fact (r) or of law (s). Where the point is doubtful it is in itself evidence of a bona fide mistake (t). Again where the Court of first instance takes one view of the law and the Court of Appeal takes another that in itself is evidence of a bona fide mistake (u).

Amendment allowed—(1) The Official Assignee of Madras constitutes A B Official Assignee of Bombay his attorney to institute a suit on his behalf in Bombay A B instead of suing as constituted attorney of the Official Assignee of Madras sues by mistake as Official Assignee of Bombay. The plaint may be amended under sub rule (1) by substituting the former description for the latter. Sardarmal v Arandamal (1897) 21 Bom 205.

(2) A partner in a firm carrying on business out of British India and to which O 30 does not apply files a suit in the name of the firm. He was allowed to amend by adding the names of all the partners but the case was treated as one of substitution and not misdescription and he was required to pay costs of the action up to the time of amendment. Tyankatesh Oil Mill v Elmahomed (1928) 30 Bom L R 117 109 I O 89 (28) A B 191.

(3) A Hindu appoints A guardian of the property of his minor son under his will but appoints no executor. A believing that his appointment as guardian has the effect of constituting him executor of the will by implication sues B to recover certain property belonging to the estate of the deceased. The Court finds that A is not executor by implication. The plaint may be amended by substituting the son as plaintiff. Seshamma v Chennappa (1897) 20 Mad 167. [In this case the amendment was allowed in second appeal.]

(4) A sues B for work done under a contract. B contends that the contract has been assigned by A to C and A therefore has no right to sue. A admits the assignment but says that the assignment is not absolute but by way of charge only and that he has therefore a right to sue. It is found that the assignment to C is absolute and that there was a bona fide mistake on the part of A in believing that the assignment was by way of charge only. The plaint may be amended by substituting C as plaintiff. Hughes v Pump House Hotel Co [1902] 2 K B 485.

In the last mentioned case B objected to the amendment on the ground that as the assignment was found to be absolute A had no cause of action at the time the action was brought but the objection was overruled. Cozens Hardy L J said. It is said that the rule does not apply when it is shown that the plaintiff has no right of action but there are abundant authorities to the contrary effect. The cases cited in the judgment in that case clearly show that the plaint would have been allowed to be amended if that was the application by adding C as plaintiff. This interpretation of O 16 r 2 of the English Rules which corresponds in wording with sub rule (1) of this rule would seem to be opposed to the view taken by the High Court of Bombay. It would seem that the Bombay Court would not allow an amendment if the original plaintiff had no right of action at the time the suit was brought (v). But this view it is submitted is not correct and one of the cases cited by that Court in support of its view affirms the contrary (w). In a recent case the High Court of Madras expressly held that the fact that the original plaintiff has no cause of action does not take away the jurisdiction of the Court to order the substitution of another person as plaintiff (x).

Amendment not allowed—It would seem that no amendment should be allowed under sub rule (1) if the rights in dispute between the new plaintiff and the defendant would not be the same as those in dispute between the original plaintiff and the defendant. A suit is brought by an importer of Roskopf Patent watches for infringement of trade mark alleging that he has got the exclusive right to use the trade mark in India. The trade mark belongs to the manufacturer and not to the importer. The importer is subsequently advised that he cannot sue on the manufacturer's trade mark and he thereupon applies that the manufacturer may be either added or substituted as plaintiff. If the manufacturer is made a party his claim will raise questions as to how far he is entitled to the trade mark in the country of its origin and consequently in India. That would be a case wholly different from that of the importer. Can the manufacturer be made a party under these circumstances? The question arose in a Bombay case (y) Batty J. said that the point was one on which there seemed to be considerable room for doubt. Eventually the application was refused on the ground that it was made too late.

Upon such terms as the Court thinks fit—Liberty to amend may be given upon the terms that the plaintiff should pay to the defendant his costs of the suit upto and including the order of amendment and that the new plaintiff should only be entitled to such relief as he could have claimed if the suit had been commenced at the date on which he was added as a party (z).

Consent—No person can be added or substituted as plaintiff under sub rule (1) without his consent. Thus a company cannot be made a plaintiff in a suit without its consent (a). See sub rule (3).

Limitation—Section 22 of the Limitation Act provides that when after the institution of a suit a party is substituted or added as a plaintiff or defendant the date of substitution or addition is to be deemed as regards that party as the date of institution. It has been held that this provision of the law relates only to the addition of parties under sub rule (2) and not under sub rule (1). The result is that a party may be substituted or added under sub rule (1) even after the period of limitation. Thus where an agent sued in his own name and subsequently at a time when a new suit would have been barred by limitation his principals were substituted as plaintiffs it was held that the suit being the same the change of parties did not affect the question of limitation (b).

SUB RULES (2) to (5)

Sub rules (2) (3) and (v) correspond to s 32 of the Code of 1882 and to R. S. O. 10 r 11. Sub rule (4) corresponds to s 33 of the Code of 1882.

Old section—Under the old section 32 there was a distinction between the power of the Court to strike out parties and the power to add parties. Under that section the power to strike out parties could only be exercised on the application of a party and that too if the application was made on or before the first hearing. But the power to add parties could be exercised by the Court at any time and even without any application. Under sub rule (2) the power to strike out as well as to add parties may be exercised by the Court at any stage of the proceedings and even without any application by a party.

At any stage of the proceedings—The power to strike out or add parties may be exercised at any stage of the proceedings. Thus fresh parties were added in one case after a decree had been passed and a reference made to the Commissioner to take accounts and sell the property (c). In another case fresh parties were added after a suit had been reinstated under s. 108 of the Code of 1882 [now O 9 r 13] (d) In a Calcutta case a fresh party was added in a suit for partition after the preliminary decree had been passed and the Commissioner had made his report but before the drawing up of the final decree (e) A Court can add parties after the suit has been remanded to it by the Court of appeal (f) Under the corresponding English rule it has been held that the Court has jurisdiction to allow amendment even after final judgment so long as anything remains to be done in the action though it be only assessment of damages (g)

Parties when added—Under this rule a person may be added as a party to a suit in the following two cases—

(1) when he ought to have been joined as plaintiff or defendant and not so joined or

(2) when without his presence the questions in the suit cannot be completely decided

There is no jurisdiction to add a party in any other case (h) Thus a person should not be added as a defendant merely because he would be incidentally affected by the judgment (i) The Secretary of State is not a proper or necessary party in every suit in which a statute is challenged as ultra vires (j)

Parties cannot be added so as to introduce quite a new cause of action—A purchased goods from B by sample. The bulk did not correspond with the sample and A thereupon sued B for damages. B contended that he had purchased the goods in question from X by sample and applied that X should be added as a party to the suit as the question between him (B) and X was the same as the question between him (B) and A (1) whether the goods were according to the sample) so as to relieve him (B) from the necessity of bringing a fresh suit against X in the event of the Court holding that the goods were not according to the sample. Held refusing B's application that X was not a person who ought to be joined as a party to the suit nor was his presence necessary to decide the questions involved in the suit. In this case A had nothing to do with Y and to add Y as a party would be to introduce a new cause of action which existed only as between B and Y. The Court would then have to inquire into the circumstances under which B's agreement with Y was entered into an inquiry with which A had nothing to do (k)

Parties cannot be added so as to alter the nature of the suit—A sued for his share of the estate of a deceased relative. On an application to have other persons interested in the said estate added as parties to the suit it was held that the Court could not add them as parties as to do so would be to alter the nature of the suit by converting it into a general administration suit (l) It has similarly been held that parties should not be added in a suit for rent so as to change it into a suit for title though questions of title may be incidentally investigated in a suit for arrears of rent e.g. where the tenant disputes the extent of the title of the plaintiff to the arrears claimed by the plaintiff (m)

Transposing defendant as plaintiff—The Court has power under sub r (2) to transfer a defendant to the category of plaintiffs. Thus where A and B are trustees of certain property and A brings a suit to recover the property from C impleading B as a defendant the Court may on A's death transpose B as plaintiff for the further conduct of the suit (n). In a Bombay case A brought a partnership suit for accounts against 12 defendants. He then settled with most of the defendants and applied to the Court for leave to withdraw the suit or that the suit might be dismissed. Two of the defendants objected to the dismissal of the suit and applied that they might be made plaintiffs and that the plaintiff might be made a defendant and the suit proceeded with. The Court granted the application (o). A sues B to recover money borrowed by B from C who is dead alleging that C had created a trust of the money and that he was appointed trustee of the money. C's widow is impleaded as a co defendant in the suit. It is found that the money sued for was not trust money but it belonged absolutely to C. This is a proper case in which the Court should remove the widow from the array of defendants and bring her in the array of plaintiffs (p). A defendant may be transferred to the category of plaintiffs on his application even after a preliminary decree for accounts has been passed (q). But the Court should not make an order transferring a defendant to the category of plaintiffs if it results in changing the character of the suit (r). A sues B to recover a sum of money and impleads C who says that he and not A is entitled to the money as a co defendant. C applies that he should be allowed to continue the suit as plaintiff instead of A. The application should be refused even if it is found that C and not A is entitled to the money. To grant the application would be to deprive A of his right to ask for a determination upon his claim (s).

Transposing plaintiff as defendant—In the case of a difference between co plaintiffs the proper course is to make an order that the name of one of them be struck out as plaintiff and added as a defendant (t). But such an order will be made only on security being given by the plaintiff who continues on the record as plaintiff for the costs of the original defendant up to the date of the amendment (u). Such an order may be supported by the terms of sub r (2) namely on such terms as may appear to the Court to be just.

Striking out name of party improperly joined—The impropriety referred to in this rule is in introducing a party who has no connection with the relief claimed in the plaint (v).

Who ought to have been joined—Sub r (2) provides for the addition of (1) necessary parties and (2) of proper parties. Necessary parties are parties who ought to have been joined that is parties necessary to the constitution of the suit without whom no decree at all can be passed (w). Proper parties are those whose presence enables the Court to adjudicate more effectually and completely (x) as explained in the next paragraph.

All co sharers are necessary parties to a suit for partition and they should all be joined as parties to the suit. Similarly in a suit to recover trust property all the trustees must be joined as parties [O 31 r 2]. But the Official Assignee is not a necessary party in a suit against an insolvent (y) [see O 22 r 10 notes. Assignment of interest ill (3) and (4)]. In a suit to set aside an order for rateable distribution all persons interested in the distribution must be parties to the suit (z) see s 73. In a suit for dissolution of partnership all partners are necessary parties but a person who is not in the partnership as a member of the firm but who is a member of a superior partnership in which he is on one side and the whole firm as a unit on the other is not a necessary party (a) See notes below Limitation Act

Whose presence before the Court may be necessary — A person may be added as a defendant to a suit though no relief may be claimed against him provided his presence is necessary for a complete and final decision of the questions involved in the suit (b) Such a person is called a proper party as distinguished from a necessary party. Thus if a suit is brought by a legatee against an executor for a legacy but the estate is not sufficient to pay all the legacies in full the executor may apply under sub rule (2) that the other legatees may be made parties so that if any rateable abatement is requisite the extent of such abatement may be ascertained in a manner binding on all the legatees (c) In a suit by a benamidar of the mortgagee the mortgagee may be made a party to the suit if his presence is necessary for the proper determination of the suit (d) Where in an administration suit in which the original parties do not dispute one another's status as heirs a person applies to be made a defendant and claims to be the sole heir of the deceased whose estate is to be administered so that if his claim is established the suit would be dismissed it was held that the Court can allow him to be added as a defendant in the suit in order to prevent multiplicity of suits and such person need not be compelled to file a separate suit to establish his status (e) See notes above Who ought to have been joined

Questions involved in the suit — Questions involved in the suit refer only to questions between parties to the suit (f) Further they refer only to questions as between plaintiffs and defendants and not to questions which may arise between co plaintiffs or between co defendants inter se (g)

Improper addition of plaintiff or defendant — Sub rule (2) does not enable a Court to override the effect of O 2 r 3. Hence if the joinder of a person as plaintiff would result in a misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action or the joinder of a person as defendant would result in a misjoinder of defendants and causes of action the application should be refused (h) Similarly if the joinder of a person as plaintiff is not possible under O 1 r 1 it does not become possible under this rule (i)

Consent of person added as plaintiff — If any person who ought to have been joined as plaintiff does not consent to join as plaintiff he may be made a defendant in the suit. The proper course is first to require him to join as plaintiff and if he refuses to join as plaintiff then to join him as defendant. But the suit should not be dismissed merely because he is joined as defendant without being first called upon to join as plaintiff (j)

Suit against a dead person — Where a suit is brought against a person who is found to have died before its institution the plaint cannot be amended by bringing his legal representative on the record though the suit may have been filed in ignorance of his death. The reason is that a suit against a dead man is a nullity from the first (l) But if a suit is against several defendants one of whom is found to have died before

10 its institution the suit should not be dismissed. It should proceed against the other defendants and the legal representatives of the deceased should be joined if he was a necessary party (l)

Limitation Act sec 22 provides amongst other things that when after the institution of a suit a party is added as a plaintiff or defendant the date of addition is to be considered as regards that party as the date of the institution of the suit. It has been held under this section that where necessary parties are not joined within the period of limitation the suit must be dismissed. Necessary parties mean parties necessary to the constitution of the suit (m) that is persons whose joinder is necessary to enable the Court to award such relief as may be given in the suit as framed (n). Thus in a suit by one of several joint promisees the other promisees are necessary parties for no relief can be given to one of them. The suit is not perfectly constituted unless all the co promisees join for the plaintiff can only enforce his claim in conjunction with them. If in such a suit the other promisees are not joined within the period of limitation the suit must be dismissed (o). Similarly where A, B and C were three partners and A sued B only for partnership accounts and C was added as a defendant after the period of limitation the suit was dismissed (p). On the same ground where a member of a joint Hindu family sued in his own name for a joint debt without making the other members parties to the suit and the defendant raised an objection on the ground of non joinder and the period of limitation had by that time expired it was held that it was too late to join the other members as co plaintiffs as the claim was at that date time barred and the suit was accordingly dismissed (q). And the suit must likewise be dismissed even if the Court of its own motion adds the other members as plaintiffs in circumstances such as those mentioned above. The mere fact that the Court of its own motion orders that the name of any person be added as a party does not render the provisions of s 22 inapplicable to the case (r). There is nothing in sub rule (2) which frees the Court when acting of its own motion from the restrictions of the Limitation Act in other words a Court acting under sub rule (2) is bound by the provisions of s 22 of the Limitation Act (s) and the rights which parties may have acquired under the Limitation Act are therefore safeguarded (t). On the other hand when a suit can be and is constituted without joining certain persons as parties and they are subsequently added as parties for the benefit of the defendants to ensure them against further litigation the suit should proceed though they are added as parties after the expiry of the period of limitation and the Court should award such relief as may be given in the suit as framed to such a case the provisions of s 22 do not apply (u). Thus where a promissory note is passed to the manager of a joint Hindu family he may sue the promisor without joining the other members of the family as co plaintiffs. In such a case if the other members are joined as plaintiffs after the statutory period has expired their joinder being unnecessary does not prevent the suit as originally constituted from being in time (v). It has similarly been held that that section does not apply when a person is added as a party merely to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon the questions involved in the suit without any relief being claimed against him (w) Further the section does not apply where an assignee from a party to a suit the assignment having been made pending the suit is joined as a party to the suit (x) It has also been held that that section does not apply where a person is joined as a defendant in a suit and he is subsequently added as a plaintiff (y) In a case before the Privy Council where relief was claimed against a debtor estate but none of the defendants was impleaded as representing the estate and subsequently though after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit one of the defendants [i.e. a person already a party to the suit] was impleaded as sebit and as representing the estate it was held that s 22 of the Limitation Act did not apply to the case ( ) Where a suit is originally brought against a firm in the name of the firm but subsequently the title of the plaint is amended by substituting the names of the members of the defendants family on its being brought that the defendant is not a firm but an undivided Hindu family the suit is not affected by the provisions of sec 22 (1) of the Indian Limitation Act since there is no addition of parties but only a substitution in order to correct a misdescription (a)

Party may be added at any stage of suit—Subject to the provisions of the Limitation Act referred to above a person may be added as a party to a suit at any stage of the suit and even at the time of passing the decree (b)

Misdescription—Where there is a misdescription of a defendant in the title of a suit there is complete power in the Court to make the necessary correction with out regard to lapse of time In this class of cases it is material to ascertain against whom the relief is claimed A sues the Municipal Committee of Gorakhpur through the Secretary instead of suing the Committee through the Resident as ought to have been done The relief claimed is against the Committee No personal relief is sought against the Secretary The case is one of misdescription and the plaint may be amended though the application for amendment is made after the expiry of the period of limitation (c) A sues The Agent B B & C I Ry Co Ltd The relief claimed is against the railway company No personal relief is claimed against the Agent A applies for amendment of the plaint after the expiry of the statutory period by striking out the word Agent The amendment should be allowed the suit being substantially against the company (d) But if the relief claimed was as against the Agent personally the amendment can be allowed only if there is no question of limitation (e) but not after the expiry of the period of limitation for the suit (f) Where a suit is brought against a joint Hindu family firm in the name of the firm the title of the plaint may be amended by substituting the names of the members of the joint family even after the period of limitation prescribed for the institution of the suit (g) Where a partner in a firm carrying on business out of British India and to which O 30 does not apply files a suit in the name of the firm and applies afterwards to amend the plaint by adding the names of the partners the case is not one of misdescription but of substitution within sub rule (1) of this rule (h) See note to sub rule (1) Amendment allowed

Appeal—No appeal lies under this Code from any order made under this rule. But where the name of a defendant is struck out under this rule on the ground that the plaintiff does not disclose any cause of action against him the order operates as a decree and is appealable as such (i). Similarly if in a suit for partition the name of one of the defendants is struck out on the ground that he has no interest in the properties the subject matter of the suit he may appeal from the order as the order operates as a decree against him (j).

Revision—An order refusing to add a party as a defendant is not subject to revision under s 115 but the High Court may interfere under s 107 of the Government of India Act 1915 if there is a denial of the right of fair trial (k). Nor is an order refusing to substitute as plaintiffs in a suit persons interested in the suit (l).

11 [S 32, 6th para Cf R S C O 16, r 39] The Court may give the conduct of the suit to such person as it deems proper

Conduct of suit

Person—The word person refers to a party to the suit and the Court cannot give the conduct of the suit to a stranger (m).

Appearance of one of several plaintiffs or defendants for others

(2) The authority shall be in writing signed by the party giving it and shall be filed in Court

13 [S 34] All objections on the ground of non joinder or misjoinder of parties shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and, in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement, unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived

Objections as to non joinder or misjoinder

Scope of the rule—This rule refers to two kinds of objections the one for non joinder of parties and the other for misjoinder of parties. These objections must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement otherwise the objection will be deemed to have been waived (n).

Where an objection to non joinder (o) or misjoinder (p) of parties is not taken in the Court of first instance it will be disallowed in appeal See notes to O 1 r 9 above See also s 99

Unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen —These words are new When the ground of objection has arisen subsequent to the settlement of issues the objection may be taken even after the settlement of issues In fact it was so held under the old section though the words unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen did not occur in that section Thus if a coparcener or a reversioner or a remainderman is born after the settlement of issues in a suit to which he is a necessary party and the plaintiff does not make him a party the defendant may object to his non joinder though issues have already been settled Thus in a partition suit all coparceners must be joined as parties even though some of them may be born after the institution of the suit Similarly where a woman who is a party to a suit is married after the settlement of issues and the nature of the suit is such that the husband is a necessary party the plaintiff should make the husband a party and the defendant may raise this objection though it be after the settlement of issues (q)

ORDER II

Frame of Suit

1 [S 42] Every suit shall as far as practicable be framed so as to afford ground for final decision upon the subjects in dispute and to prevent further litigation concerning them

Frame of suit

From this rule read with r 2 below the intention of the Legislature appears to be that as far as possible all matters in dispute between the parties relating to the same transaction should be disposed of in the same suit (r)

2 [S 43] (1) Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action, but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court

Suit to include the whole claim

(2) Where a plaintiff omits to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquishes, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished

(3) A person entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of such reliefs, but if he omits, except with the leave of the Court, to sue

Omission to sue for one of several reliefs

for all such reliefs, he shall not afterwards sue for any relief so omitted

Explanation—For the purposes of this rule an obligation and a collateral security for its performance and successive claims arising under the same obligation shall be deemed respectively to constitute but one cause of action

Illustration

A lets a house to B at a yearly rent of Rs 1200. The rent for the whole of the years 1905, 1906 and 1907 is due and unpaid. A sues B in 1908 only for the rent due for 1906. A shall not afterwards sue B for the rent due for 1905 or 1907.

Changes in the section—The words obtained before the first hearing after the words the leave of the Court [see sub rule (3)] have been omitted. The words and successive claims arising under the same obligation have been added into the Explanation. The illustration has been expanded so as to comprise the case of rent due for a period subsequent to the one for which the suit is brought.

Cause of action—In Pitapur Paja v Suriya Rau (s) their Lordships of the Privy Council referring to the expression cause of action in this rule said that it meant the cause of action for which the suit was brought. Referring to this decision their Lordships said in the recent case of Muhammad Hafi v Muhammad Zakariya (t).

The Lordships see no reason to attempt to qualify or to extend those words because they are in fact nothing but a repetition of the exact words of the Code. The cause of action is the cause of action which gives occasion for and forms the foundation of the suit and if that cause enables a man to ask for larger and wider relief than that to which he limits his claim he cannot afterwards seek to recover the balance by independent proceedings. See notes to s 20. Cause of action.

Splitting of claim—This and the preceding rule are aimed against a multiplicity of suits in respect of the same cause of action (u). The object of the present rule is to use the language of r 1 of this order to prevent further litigation. For that purpose the rule provides that every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the same cause of action. He is not entitled to split his cause of action into parts and bring separate suits in respect of each part. If he omits to sue in respect of or intentionally relinquishes any portion of the claim arising from the same cause of action he will be precluded from suing in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished even though he states in his plaint that he intends to bring a second suit for the portion omitted (v). But it cannot be said of a plaintiff that he has omitted to sue in respect of a portion of his claim unless he was at some time prior to the suit aware or informed of the claim or of the facts which would give him a cause of action (w). If the plaintiff was aware of the claim and omitted to sue in respect thereof he could not afterwards sue in respect thereof though the omission

Explanation to the Rule—

A Obligation and collateral security for its performance—The Explanation to the present rule is not intended to be an illustration of the foregoing provision but a substantive enactment making an obligation and a collateral security for its performance (which would otherwise be two independent causes of action) one cause of action for the purposes of the rule (z). In a recent case their Lordships of the Privy Council said (a)

The [Explanation] shows that a personal claim for the mortgage money under a mortgage and the enforcement of the security for the debt are to be regarded as one and the same cause of action. That provision is in marked distinction to the law of this country where a mortgagee is at liberty to appoint a receiver under his deed to sue for the debt and to take proceedings for sale or foreclosure independently and at the same time.

It is important therefore in considering the effect of the code to bear in mind that its obvious intention is to establish a rule of law different from that accepted here. See notes below. First suit for interest due under a mortgage second suit for principal and Exceptions to the rule against splitting of reliefs.

B Successive claims arising under the same obligation constitute a single cause of action—The words successive claims arising under the same obligation have been added into the Explanation and the illustration to the rule has been expanded to give effect to a Calcutta decision where it was held that a claim in respect of all arrears of rent constitutes a single cause of action (b). The illustration shows that if rent has become due for the years 1905, 1906 and 1907 the landlord can bring only one suit for the whole of the rent in arrears and that if he sues for the rent due for a particular year only he will be precluded from suing for the rent due for the other years. It must however be noted that though this rule precludes the landlord from bringing a fresh suit for rent not included in the former suit it does not prevent him from adopting any other remedy the law gives him to recover the rent. Thus though in the case put in the illustration the landlord cannot sue for the rent due for the year 1900 or 1907 he can dis-train for the rent due for those years (c). On the same principle as in the illustration a suit for an annuity for the year 1917 is a bar to a subsequent suit for annuity for the years 1914 1915 and 1916 (d). See also ill (7) above.

Interest accruing due from time to time under a mortgage deed maintenance malikana &c are other instances of successive claims arising under the same obligation.

Distinct causes of action—If the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the first suit the subsequent suit is not barred (e). What the rule requires is that every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising from one and the same cause of action and not that every suit shall include every claim or every cause of action which the plaintiff may have against the defendant (f). As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Payana v. Pana Lana (g) the rule is directed to securing the exhaustion of the relief in respect of a cause of action and not to the inclusion in one and the same action of different causes of action even though they arise from the same transaction. One great criterion when the question arises as to whether the cause of action in the subsequent suit is identical with that in the first suit is whether the same evidence will maintain both actions (h). For the meaning of cause of action see notes above. Cause of action.

(1) Different properties different defendants—A claiming as his father's heir sues B for possession of a certain piece of land. He then sues C also as his father's heir for possession of another piece of land. The fact that both pieces of land are claimed by A under the same title does not preclude A from maintaining separate suits against B and C. Dampantoboyina v. Aldala (1902) 25 Mad 736. *Narayan v. In Muhammad Hafi v Muhammad Zakeriya (v) A executed a simple mortgage in 1910. The mortgage provided by cl. 2 that the interest should be paid monthly and that if it was not paid for 6 months the mortgagee could realize either the unpaid interest only or both the principal and interest by bringing a suit without waiting for the expiration of the time provided for repayment of the principal. By cl. 7 it was provided that if the principal with interest was not paid within 3 years the mortgagee should be entitled to sue for principal and interest. In 1914 the mortgagee sued in respect of the interest due and obtained a decree. In 1915 he brought a second suit in respect of the principal and the interest then due. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the second suit could not be maintained having regard to the provisions of this rule. Their Lordships said: "What was the cause of action that the plaintiffs possessed when the proceedings were first instituted? It was the cause of action due either to the fact that the interest had been unpaid for more than six months or that the three years had elapsed and the principal was also unpaid and in either case they could have sued for realisation to provide for the whole amount secured by the deed. Not having done so they were debarred from instituting the second suit."

The question came up again before their Lordships of the Privy Council in Aishan Yaram v Pala Mal (w). The rule to be deduced from that decision may be stated thus. If a mortgage deed provides for the payment of principal and interest as independent obligations a suit for a personal decree for the interest due is no bar to a subsequent suit to realize the principal. In such a case the two causes of action are distinct. But if the mortgage deed in default of payment of interest gives the mortgagee the right to realize both the principal and interest and the mortgagee upon a default occurring sues to realize the interest from the property O 2 r 2 he is precluded from afterwards suing to realize the principal due even though his plaint in the first suit has purported to reserve the right to do so. The reason is that in such a case the cause of action—the non payment of the interest—gives rise to two forms of relief which the Code provides shall not be split see the Explanation to the Rule. Their Lordships observed that if the mortgagees in their first suit claimed only a personal relief in respect of the unpaid interest their case would be on surer ground. But their claim in the first suit was for a decree for interest recoverable from the mortgaged property.

First suit for produce payable under a mortgage second suit for possession—A mortgage bond provides that the mortgagor shall pay a share of the produce of the mortgaged land to the mortgagee every year and that in default the mortgagee shall be entitled to take possession of the land. The mortgagor fails to pay the produce for the year 1896. In 1897 the mortgagee sues for the value of the produce for 1896 but he does not claim possession of the land as he was entitled to do under the bond. This suit is a bar to a subsequent suit for possession on the mortgagor's failure to pay the produce for subsequent years. The mortgagee ought to have claimed possession in the first suit (x). See notes below. Omission to sue for one of several reliefs—all (1)

Properties held under separate titles — A plaintiff is not bound to include in the same suit separate properties held by different persons under different titles (y). But he is bound to include in the same suit all properties held by the same defendant though under different titles (z).

Different causes of action arising from the same transaction.—This rule does not require that when several causes of action arise from one transaction the plaintiff should sue for all of them in one suit. What the rule lays down is that where there is one entire cause of action the plaintiff cannot split the cause of action into parts so as to bring separate suits in respect of those parts. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Payana v Pana Lana (a) the rule is directed to securing the exhaustion of the relief in respect of a cause of action and not to the inclusion in one and the same action of different causes of action even though they arise from the same transaction. It was held in that case that a suit upon a promissory note the suit failing owing to a material alteration in the note was not a bar to a subsequent suit to recover the consideration for which the promissory note was given.

In Anderson v Kalagarla (b) A agreed to purchase 10 bales of yarn from B. A took delivery of 7 bales but failed to pay the price of those bales and as regards the remaining 3 bales refused to take delivery thereof. Garth C.J. expressed the opinion that a suit by B against A to recover damages for failure to take delivery of the three bales was not a bar to a subsequent suit by B to recover from A the price of the 7 bales. The learned judge observed that a claim for the price of goods sold was a cause of action of a different nature from a claim for damages for the non acceptance of goods and the fact that both claims arose under the same contract did not constitute them one and the same cause of action. Wilson J. expressed a different opinion stating that the claims having arisen under the same contract the cause of action was but one and that the subsequent suit was therefore barred. The opinion of Wilson J. was followed in Duncan v Jeetmull (c) which also was a case of breach of one and the same contract. These two cases show that all existing breaches of the same contract must be joined in the same suit but they have been held not to apply to the case where there are separate contracts though contained in the same instrument (d). Thus where it is expressly provided by an indent that each monthly shipment and item should be treated as a separate contract the plaintiff is entitled to bring a separate suit for damages in respect of each shipment (e). Conversely where goods are delivered under separate orders each order and delivery of goods is a separate contract and a separate cause of action unless it be proved that all the goods were delivered as under a single contract (f). See notes below. He shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted.

Closely connected with this question is a point which was left open by their Lordships of the Privy Council namely whether a mortgagee who holds several mortgages on the same property can treat them with respect to the provisions of this rule as separate causes of action or whether he must bring one suit on all the mortgages (g). This subject has already been considered in the notes to s. 11 under the head Application of the above rules to suits on mortgage.

Omits to sue in respect of any portion of his claim.—This rule applies to cases where a suit has been filed and the plaintiff omits in such suit to sue in respect of a portion of the claim (h). It does not apply where no suit has been filed at all or where a plaintiff returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court or where the plaintiff does nothing further in the matter (i) nor does it apply where a suit is filed and subsequently withdrawn under O. 3 r. 1 (1) below (j).

He shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted.—The bar is not avoided by an expression of intention to sue again (k). See notes below.

by obtaining leave to sue in respect of the portion so omitted the reason is that the leave contemplated by this section is the leave to sue for one of several reliefs referred to in sub r (3) it does not relate to the portion so omitted referred to in sub r (2) (l)

The rule says he shall not afterwards sue It does not therefore apply where the suits are simultaneous and not successive (m) But fractions of a day are recognized and on the presumption that suits filed on the same day are filed in the order of their numbers in the register it has been held that the suit of the subsequent number is barred (n) But that presumption has been doubted and the plaintiff allowed to elect which suit shall be held to be barred under this rule (o)

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the present rule refers to a case where there has been a suit in which there has been an omission to sue in respect of portion of a claim and a decree has been passed in that suit So long as no decree is passed a second suit in respect of the portion so omitted is not barred It follows from this that where a suit brought in respect only of a portion of a cause of action has not been heard and decided the Court may allow the plaintiff in the suit to be amended by adding the omitted portion of the claim (p) Similarly if such a suit is withdrawn under O 23 r 1 (2) with liberty to bring a fresh suit the plaintiff may include in the fresh suit the portion that was omitted in the suit withdrawn by him (q)

A sues B in respect of a portion only of a cause of action Pending this suit A brings another suit against B in respect of the remaining portion of the same cause of action. According to the Calcutta decision cited above neither suit is a bar to the other so long as no decree is passed in either suit It is open therefore to A to rectify his error in bringing two suits in respect of the same cause of action by applying for leave to amend the plaintiff in either suit by adding the omitted portion which forms the subject matter of the other suit and then withdrawing the other suit under O 23 r 1 (1) The Chief Court of the Punjab has gone further and held that if in such a case A is allowed to withdraw either suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit under 23 r 1 (2) he is entitled to bring a fresh suit by virtue of the leave granted to him though the other suit has been carried to a decision (r)

Omitting to sue for one of several reliefs —Where a person is entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action he may sue for all the reliefs or he may sue for one or more of them and reserve his right with the leave of the Court to sue for the rest (s) If no such leave is obtained he will be precluded from afterwards suing for any relief so omitted (t) But if the right to the relief in respect of which a further suit is brought did not exist at the date of the institution of the former suit the subsequent suit is not barred (u) The words in s. 43 of the Code of 1882 were with the leave of the Court obtained before the first hearing Those words were construed literally and it was held that leave might be applied for and obtained when the case was called on for first hearing and before anything had been done towards the hearing of the suit (v) The italicized words have been omitted with the result that the leave may now be granted at any stage of the suit The leave however must be obtained from the Court before which the original suit was pending The leave if granted is good even if the pecuniary value of the relief allowed to be omitted from the suit exceeds the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court granting the leave (w)

(1) Rent and possession — A lets his land to B for a period of five years on condition that if B fails to pay the rent every year the lease shall be void. B fails to pay the rent due for the second year. Here A is entitled to two reliefs namely to sue B (1) for recovery of the rent and (2) also for possession of the land on the ground that the lease has become void and he may sue for both these reliefs. If he sues for rent only and does not reserve his right with the leave of the Court to sue for possession he cannot afterwards sue for possession. Subbaraya v Krishna (1883) 6 Mad. 159. Similarly if he sues for possession only and does not reserve his right with the leave of the Court to sue for arrears of rent he cannot afterwards sue for the rent. Aashinath v Nathoo (1914) 38 Bom 444 25 I C 73.

(2) Specific performance and possession — A agrees to sell his land to B. B sues A for specific performance of the agreement and obtains a decree. B then sues A for possession of the land. Is the suit for possession barred under this rule? Yes according to the decision in Varayana v Kandaram (1899) 22 Mad 24 the reason given being that the right to possession arises coincidentally with the right to the execution of conveyance. No according to the decision in Nathu v Budhu (1894) 18 Bom 537. Krishnammal v Soundararaja (1915) 38 Mad 608 22 I C 912 and Krishnaji v Sanjappa (1925) 27 Bom L. P. 49 86 I C 132 (2). A B 181 the reason given being that the right to possession accrues only on the execution of the deed of conveyance. (3) Possession and specific performance — On 1st March 1905 A enters into an agreement with B for the sale of his lands to B the sale to be completed on 1st August 1905. It is agreed that B shall pay part of the purchase money on the date of the agreement and that A shall on such payment being made put B in possession of the land. B pays part of the purchase money and A puts him in possession of the land. The sale is not completed on 1st August owing to certain differences between the parties. On 15th August A forcibly ejects B from the land and enters into possession. Thereupon B sues A for possession but omits to sue for specific performance of the agreement for sale. B cannot afterwards sue A for specific performance. Pangayya v Nanjappa (1901) 24 Mad 491 28 I A 221 with facts slightly varied.

(4) A agrees to sell his property to B. He then enters into a contract to sell it to C. B sues A for a permanent injunction restraining A from selling the property to C. The suit is dismissed on the ground that such a suit did not lie. A subsequent suit by B against A for specific performance of the agreement is not barred. Sardar Mal v Hirde Nath (1925) 6 Lah 384 87 I C 991 (2). A L 459.

Exceptions to the rule against splitting of reliefs—

1. Order 34 rule 14 — Sub rule (3) provides that where a person entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action omits except with the leave of the Court to sue for all such reliefs he cannot afterwards sue for any relief so omitted. According to this sub rule if a mortgagee sues the mortgagor on the personal covenant to repay the mortgage debt and omits to sue for sale of the mortgaged property he cannot afterwards sue for sale unless he has reserved his right to do so with the leave of the Court. To this however there is an exception being that contained in O 34 r 14. The latter rule may be stated thus a mortgagee sues the mortgagor to recover the mortgage-debt from the mortgagor personally and obtains a decree. He then applies for the attachment and sale of the mortgaged property in execution of the decree. The mortgaged property may be attached but it cannot be sold in execution proceedings. The only mode of bringing it to sale is by instituting a fresh suit for sale. O 34 r 14 says that the mortgagee may institute such a suit notwithstanding anything contained in O 2 r 2 (x). The suit will be one under s 67 of the Transfer of Property Act 1889. It must however be noted that though O 34 r 14 allows a mortgagee to split his remedies it does not allow him to split his claim (y).

2 Order 34 rule 6—The effect of this rule is that where a mortgagee has obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property and the property is sold but the net sale proceeds are not sufficient to pay the mortgage debt he may subsequently apply for a decree for the balance notwithstanding anything contained in O 2 r 2 although a claim to such relief has not been included in his suit ( ). This however is not strictly speaking an exception for no separate suit has to be brought for a decree for the balance.

3 Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act 1879 (as amended by Act XIII of 1899) s 15 f—The effect of the said section is to allow a mortgagor to split his remedies by providing in effect that if he sues the mortgagee for an account he will not be precluded from suing him subsequently for redemption (a).

Leave to sue—See notes. He shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted and Omission to sue for one of several reliefs.

Amendment of plaint—See notes above. He shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted.

Withdrawal of one of two pending suits—See notes above. He shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted.

Minors—The provisions of this rule apply to adults as well as minors. Thus a suit by a minor by his guardian and next friend for rent due for 1903 and 1904 will bar a subsequent suit by the minor on attaining majority for the rent due for 1901 and 1902. The acts of a guardian in the conduct of a suit must be upheld, unless it is shown that they were unreasonable or improper (b) or that the minor's interests were not properly safeguarded (c).

Official Assignee—This rule merely bars a second suit. Therefore the Official Assignee cannot by an application to the Insolvency Court ask for a declaration on behalf of the insolvent mortgagor that the right of the mortgagee to sue for the principal is barred under this rule (d).

Execution proceedings—The present rule does not apply to proceedings in execution of a decree. A decree holder may therefore present successive applications for realizing different portions of his decree. Thus if a decree gives reliefs for possession and costs there is nothing in the Code which prevents separate and successive applications for execution as regards either of them (e).

(2) Where causes of action are united, the jurisdiction of the Court as regards the suit shall depend on the amount or value of the aggregate subject matters at the date of instituting the suit

Scope of the rule.—O 1 r 1 deals with joinder of plaintiffs O 1 r 3 deals with joinder of defendants The present rule deals with joinder of causes of actions It is to be read subject to the provisions of rr 4 and 5 below as is shown by the words save as otherwise provided (f) It is also to be read subject to the provisions of O 1 rr 1 and 3 The frame of a suit may not be supported by this rule and yet it may be justified by O 1 r 1 or O 1 r 3 (g) Rules 6 and 7 of this Order are to be read with this rule

Cause of action—See notes to s 20 Cause of action

One plaintiff one defendant and two or more causes of action—Where there is only one plaintiff and only one defendant the rule says that the plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendant provided of course that the provisions of rr 4 and 5 of this Order are not contravened If the causes of action are so disconnected that they cannot be conveniently tried together the Court may order separate trials under r 6 below These trials however will not be distinct suits but they will be in the nature of sub suits under the title and number of the principal suit from which they spring (h) In Saccharins Corporation Ltd v Wild (i) the plaintiff corporation the owners of twenty three patents for saccharin sued the defendant for alleged infringement of all the trade marks There were thus twenty three causes of action united in one suit It was ordered that the suit should be confined in the first instance to any three of the patents which the plaintiffs might select Collins M R said Now we start here with a writ launched covering twenty three causes of action Prima facie in old days one cause of action was thought to be enough That was gradually more or less relaxed and one cause of action was allowed to be coupled with one or two subordinate or necessarily connected causes of action Then came by the Rules under the Judicature Acts a still further relaxation but always subject to the one underlying principle namely that the burden lay on the plaintiff to prove his case and that no extra burden should be imposed on the defendant through the plaintiff needlessly enlarging the area of dispute Prima facie a do en causes of action cannot be combined in one writ they must be so intimately connected as to justify their being included in one writ but when one finds no less than twenty three that seems to me to be an outrageous extension of the latitude given by the rules to the plaintiff (j) Cozen Hardy L J said The action strikes me as almost an abuse of the process of the Court (k)

The rule that a plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendant does not apply to suits for rent under the Agra Tenancy Act Hence a plaintiff cannot join in one suit claims for arrears of rent of occupancy and non occupancy holdings though the claims may be against the same defendant (l) In a case under the Bengal Tenancy Act 8 of 183 the Privy Council held that a plaintiff may join in one suit claims against a defendant in respect of more than one tenure (m)

Misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action—Where there are two or more plaintiffs and two or more causes of action the rule says that any plaintiffs having causes of action in which they are jointly interested against the same defendant may unite such causes of action in the same suit. But the rule is to be read subject to the provisions of O 1 r 1. The result is that where there are two or more plaintiffs and two or more causes of action they may be joined in one suit if the right to the relief and the causes of action arise from the same act or transaction and that there is a common question of law or fact though they may not all be jointly interested in all the causes of action. But if the right to the relief claimed does not arise from the same act or transaction or if there is no common question of law or fact the plaintiffs cannot all join in one suit unless they are jointly interested in the causes of action as provided by this rule (n). See notes to O 1 r 1. The new Rule fills (1) to (4).

Where the plaintiffs are not jointly interested in the causes of action united in one suit the suit is said to be bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action. A sells to Y two plots of land adjoining each other one of which is claimed by A by adverse possession and the other by B by adverse possession. Under the Code of 1882 A and B could not join together as plaintiffs in one suit against X and Y for the evidence of adverse possession by A would not be evidence of adverse possession in favour of B and vice versa (o). This would also be the case under this Code. Similarly where five plaintiffs contract separately to sell cotton though to the same defendant they cannot all join in one suit for damages for breach of the five contracts (p).

Procedure in case of misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action—Under the Code of 1882 where a plaint was presented which was bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action the Judge to whom the plaint was presented might return it for amendment under s 53. If the plaint having been returned for amendment was not amended it might be rejected under s 54 cl (d). If the defect was not noticed when the plaint was presented but was brought to the notice of the Court at a later stage the Court might grant leave to the plaintiffs to amend the plaint within a time fixed by the Court and might order that if the amendment was not made within the time prescribed the suit should stand dismissed with costs. Where leave to amend was granted the plaintiff had to elect as to which of them should proceed with the suit and the plaint had then to be amended by striking out the names of the other plaintiffs and making consequential amendments (q). At the same time liberty was given to the defendant to amend his written statement to meet the case of the particular plaintiff who had elected to proceed with the suit (r). It was also held in some cases under that Code that where a suit was bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action it was not proper to dismiss the suit without giving the plaintiff an opportunity of amendment (s). If the suit was dismissed and the plaintiffs appealed the appellate Court might set aside the decree and remand the case to the lower Court with a direction to that Court to return the plaint for amendment (t). As to the procedure to be followed under the present Code see notes to r 7 below.

Where the defendant objects to the frame of a suit on the ground that the suit is bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action but the objection is overruled and a decree is passed for the plaintiffs and the defendant appeals from the decree on the ground that the suit ought to have been held to be bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action the appellate Court if it found there had been such a misjoinder should not interfere with the decree unless the misjoinder has affected the merits of the case. This is the effect of the provisions of s 99 of this Code which enjoins inter alia that a decree shall be reversed or substantially varied in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action where such misjoinder does not affect the merits of the case. The italicized words are new. They did not occur in the corresponding s 578 of the Code of 1882. They have been added into s 99 to supersede the practice followed under the old Code. Under that Code where a decree was passed for the plaintiffs in a suit involving a misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action the course adopted by the appellate Court was to reverse the decree in appeal and remand the case to the lower Court with the directions to that Court to return the plaint to the plaintiffs for amendment so that the plaintiffs might elect as to which of them should continue as plaintiffs in the suit (u). Such a course would not have been necessary if a misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action was an irregularity such as could be condoned under s 575. But the practice referred to developed as the cases were against the application of s 518 (1). The effect of section 99 is to preclude the appellate Court from reversing a decree on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action and remanding the case to the lower Court as was done under the old Code unless the misjoinder has affected the merits of the case.

Misjoinder of defendants and causes of action—Where there are two or more defendants and two or more causes of action the rule says that the plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action against the same defendants jointly

Joint interest in the questions raised by the litigation is a condition precedent to the joinder of several causes of action against several defendants (w) If the causes of action alleged are separate and the defendants are arrayed in different sets the suit is bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action and is technically multifarious (x) There is no provision in the Code allowing distinct causes of action against distinct sets of defendants that is to say causes of action in which the defendants are not all jointly interested to be united in one suit (y) This rule however is to be read subject to the provisions of O 1 r 3 which relates to joinder of defendants Hence two or more defendants may be joined as parties in one suit though there are two or more causes of action provided the right to the relief claimed arises from the same act or transaction and there is a common question of law or fact and this is so although they may not all be jointly interested in all the causes of action But if the right to the relief claimed does not arise from the same act or transaction or if there be no common question of law or fact the defendants cannot all be joined in one suit unless they are jointly interested in the causes of action as provided by this rule ( ) See notes to O 1 r 3 New I u l 15

(4) (v) and (6) The following are instances of cases in which it was held that the suit was bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action

Suits held to be multifarious

1. B agrees to sell certain lands to A. A sues B and a third person C on the ground that B was willing to execute the deed of sale but was unable to do so as a result of a sale of the title deeds under a false claim of an equitable lien upon the land by C to part with them. As against B, A claims specific performance of the contract.

3 against C he asks for a declaration that he has no lien upon the lands and for delivery of the title deeds. The suit is bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action. The two causes of action are entirely distinct they do not arise from the same transaction nor would their trial involve any common question of law or fact. Luckumsey v Fa ulla (1881) 5 Bom 177 following De Houghton v Money (1876) L R 2 Ch App 166 distinguished in Arishnaswami v Sundarappayyar (1895) 18 Mad 415.

The rule in De Houghton v Money and Luckumsey v Fa ulla is that if on the face of the plaint or of the plaintiff's case it appears that a third party who was not a party to the contract upon which the suit was brought had a distinct interest but which interest is sought to be declared null and void upon some equitable ground such a claim against the said third party could not be made a part of the suit. In the case of De Houghton v Money it was admitted by the plaintiff that there was a conveyance in favour of Money but it was said that that conveyance was executed under such circumstances as would make it a voidable one and in the case of Luckumsey v Fa ulla it was clearly admitted by the plaintiff that the third party who was not a party to the contract had a distinct interest. (a) The case is different however where A (purchaser) sues B (vendor) and C (vendor's benamidar) claiming specific performance against B and a declaration against C that C is a mere benamidar for there the two defendants are identical and there is but one cause of action and no misjoinder. Molund Lall v Chotaj Lall (1884) 10 Cal 1061 1068 1069.

3 Seven different salt manufacturers enter into seven different contracts with A to manufacture salt for A and to deliver it in his factory A alleging that all the seven persons had failed to deliver salt according to the terms of the agreement with them brings one suit against them for a decree that they might be directed to deliver the salt to him. The suit is bad for multifariousness for the breach of each contract gives rise to a distinct cause of action and no one defendant is interested in any of the causes of action arising from the breach of contract with the other defendants. Namaswami v Adir Ammal (1894) 17 Mad 168.

3 A and B at Madura enter into an agreement to carry on business in partnership at Silangoor and they send C as their agent to Silangoor to conduct the business there A alleging that C had failed to carry out his instructions and to furnish accounts and that B was colluding with C sues B and C claiming dissolution of partnership as against B and damages for breach of contract as agent as against C. The suit is bad for multifariousness for there are two distinct causes of action and neither defendant is liable in respect of the cause of action against the other. Muthappa v Muthu (1904) 27 Mad 60. See this case commented upon in Aiyathurai v Muhammad Veera (1908) 18 Mad L J 238 243 244.

4 A joint Hindu family consisting of 3 members A, B and C owns several properties. A agrees to sell his share to P. A fails to execute the necessary sale deed. P sues A for specific performance and includes in the suit a claim for partition and possession against all the members of the family namely A, B and C. The suit is bad for misjoinder. The claim for partition cannot be joined with the claim for specific performance as at the date of the suit the plaintiff had no right to sue for partition not having completed his title by a sale deed. Wallis CJ said. The other members of the family were no parties to the alleged contract and therefore were not proper parties to the suit in so far as it is a suit for specific performance and it would in my opinion be a distinct hardship to them to force them to defend a suit for partition which would not lie if the plaintiff failed to prove his contract. Rangayya v Subramania (1917) 40 Mad. 365 40 I C 429 [F B]. See ill. (1) above.

In ills (1) and (3) what were really two suits were combined into one. In ill (2) what were really seven suits were united in one suit. In all these cases it was held that the suit was bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action. The reason why the law forbids a joinder in one suit of distinct causes of action against different defendants each of whom is unconnected with the cause of action against the others may thus be stated in the words of Peacock C.J. (b). Such a joinder complicates the case before the Judge and renders it exceedingly difficult for him in dealing with the case of each defendant to exclude from his consideration those portions of the evidence which may not be admissible against him though admissible against one or more of the others. Moreover it is vexatious and harassing to the different defendants. Such a procedure renders it almost compulsory on all the defendants to be present either in person or by their pleaders whilst the case is going on against the others in respect of matters in which they are not interested and moreover it is harassing and inconvenient as regards the attendance of the witnesses of the several defendants as it renders it necessary for the witnesses of each to be present and to be detained whilst the case of the others is being heard and determined. For further illustrations see notes to O 1 r 3 under the heads New Rule and Severally.

Procedure in case of multifariousness that is misjoinder of defendants and causes of action—Under the Code of 1882 where a plaint was presented which was bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action the Judge to whom the plaint was presented might return it for amendment under s 53. If the plaint having been returned for amendment was not amended it might be rejected under sec 54 cl (d). If the defect was not noticed when the plaint was presented but was brought to the notice of the Court at a later stage the Court might on the application of the plaintiff and on such terms as to costs as the Court thought proper permit the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit against those defendants who were not interested in the cause of action in respect of which he elected to proceed and grant leave to bring a fresh suit or suits against them (c) [O 23 r 1] or allow the plaintiff to amend the plaint by striking out the names of those defendants and making consequential amendments. Where leave to amend was granted to the plaintiff and the plaintiff did not amend within the time fixed by the Court and the suit was dismissed the appellate Court might confirm the decree if it found that the suit was multifarious (d). As to the procedure to be followed under the present Code see notes to r 7 below.

Where the defendants object to the frame of a suit on the ground that the suit is multifarious but the objection is overruled and a decree is passed for the plaintiff and the defendants appeal from the decree on the ground that the suit ought to have been held to be multifarious the appellate Court even if it finds the suit to be multifarious should not interfere with the decree unless the misjoinder has affected the merits of the case. This is the effect of s 99 which declares inter alia that no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action where such misjoinder does not affect the merits of the case. The word italicized are new. They did not occur in the corresponding s 578 of the Code of 1882. They have been inserted in s 99 to supersede the practice followed by the Courts under the old Code. Under that Code where a decree was passed for the plaintiffs in a suit which was bad for multifariousness the course adopted by the appellate Court was either to reverse the decree of the lower Court and dismiss the plaintiff's suit (e) or to sustain the decree of the lower Court as against a particular set of defendants in respect of the causes of action in which they were jointly interested and grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit against the other defendants with liberty to bring a fresh suit or suits against them (f) Such a course would not have been necessary had the Court held that a misjoinder of defendants and causes of action was an irregularity such as could be cured by s 578 But it was held that the section did not apply to a misjoinder of this kind and that even if it did apply the misjoinder should be regarded as a defect that must affect the merits of the case within the meaning of that section (g) The insertion of the words on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action in s 99 makes it quite clear that the appellate Court should not interfere with a decree if the only objection to the decree is that of multifariousness unless the misjoinder has affected the merits of the case

Two or more defendants and one cause of action—Every case of multifariousness presupposes more than one cause of action Hence where there is only one cause of action there can be no multifariousness

Suits held not to be multifarious

1 A alleging that his brother B mortgaged his (A's) share in his father's property to C without his knowledge and consent and that C was in possession as mortgagee sues B and C for a declaration of title to his share of the property and for possession of the share The suit is not bad for multifariousness for there are no two causes of action but only one namely the infringement of A's right of ownership by B The mortgage and dispossession are both acts evidencing the infringement of A's right Indur Kuar v Gur Prasad (1889) 11 All 33 Ma Har Ali v Sayad Husain (1902) 24 All 358 Aubra Jan v Pam Bali (1908) 30 All 560

2 A sells three properties by private contract to B After the sale to B all the three properties are attached in execution of a decree held by C against A and they are sold in execution to D E and F respectively A suit by B against A (the vendor) C (the decree holder) and D E and F (execution purchasers) to set aside the execution sale is not bad for multifariousness Haranund v Prosunno Chunder (1883) 9 Cal 763 Gunani v Ram Charan (1878) 1 All 533

Note—In the Calcutta case cited above Garth CJ said The plaintiff has but one object namely to establish his private purchase as against the claim in execution and the defendants who contest his claim have but one defence which is common to them all viz that the plaintiff's purchase is invalid

Unnecessary parties added as defendants—Where persons who are not necessary parties are joined as defendants they should not be reckoned as parties in considering whether or not the suit is bad for multifariousness 1 and B are two co-sharers of a village 1 and B sell their respective shares to C by two separate deeds of sale D alleging that he is entitled to pre-empt the property sues 1 B and C for pre-emption Here the suit is not bad for multifariousness for 1 and B being vendors they are not necessary parties to a suit for pre-emption The suit is really against the vendee C (A)

Suit for ejectment by real owner against holders under derivative titles from a trespasser as the common source—In a suit for possession all persons claiming by derivative titles from a trespasser as the common source may be joined as defendants 1 obtains a lease of a piece of land from B and enters into possession of the land Subsequently B ignoring the lease lets the land in separate portions and by separate leases to C D and E 1 sues B C D and E to eject them from the land The suit is not bad for multifariousness In this as in every action of ejectment there is but one cause of action namely dispossession It is immaterial that C D and

F claim under different titles The title by which they claim forms no part of the plaintiff's cause of action (i) The case is different if the defendants do not all claim under the same trespasser Thus if A owns lands and he is dispossessed of one portion by B of another portion by C and of a third portion by D A cannot bring one suit for possession against B C and D (j)

Where two or more persons conspire together to commit a wrong or to commit a breach of several contracts entered into with them separately by the plaintiff they may all be joined as defendants in one suit—The reason is that the plaintiff has in such a case but one cause of action against all the defendants namely a conspiracy to do the act complained of Thus if in ill (2) on p 415 above the seven salt manufacturers had conspired together not to deliver the salt to A A could have brought one suit against them all Similarly if A and B conspire together to assault C C may bring one suit against them for damages for assault (k) Upon the same principle where A obtained a decree against B for possession of certain lands in which 86 persons had distinct and separate tenures and these 86 persons combined together to keep A out of possession and declined to pay the rent to him it was held that A might join the 86 tenants as defendants in one suit for a declaration of his proprietary right to the lands (l) But separate suits should be brought if there is no collusion or combination between the tenants (m)

Two or more plaintiffs two or more defendants and two or more causes of action—In such a case the plaintiffs must be jointly interested in the cause of action and the defendants also must be jointly interested in the causes of action The rule says Any plaintiffs having causes of action in which they are jointly interested against the same defendants jointly may unite such causes of action in the same suit If the plaintiffs are not jointly interested in the causes of action the suit will be bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action If the plaintiffs are jointly interested in the several causes of action but the defendants are not the suit will be bad for multifariousness And if neither the plaintiffs nor the defendants are jointly interested in the causes of action the suit will be bad for a double misjoinder namely misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action and misjoinder of defendants and causes of action Thus if A agrees to sell and deliver salt to B and C agrees to sell and deliver salt to D and B and D sue A and C for damages for breach of the contracts entered into with them respectively the suit is bad for a double misjoinder Neither plaintiff has any interest in the cause of action of the other nor has either defendants any interest in the cause of action against the other But if two contracts are entered into each between B and D of the one part and A and C of the other part B and D may bring one suit against A and C on the two contracts

Jurisdiction—Where a plaintiff combines several causes of action against the same defendant in one suit the jurisdiction of the Court as regards the suit depends on the value of the aggregate subject matters (n) See sub r (2)

Revision—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that a decision on the question whether a suit is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action is subject to revision (o)

Proviso to the Rule—The proviso to the rule enables a plaintiff to claim in one suit redemption or foreclosure and possession (c)

Leave of Court—Objection as to misjoinder—Leave should be obtained before the plaint is filed (d). But the leave under this rule is not a condition precedent to jurisdiction and it may therefore be granted on good cause shown even after the institution of the suit (e). Under s 41 of the Code of 1892 it was held that an objection that the plaintiff had joined together claims which under that section could not be joined together without the leave of the Court should be taken in the Court of first instance and that if it was not so taken it should be regarded as waived and it should not be entertained by the Court of appeal (f). Under this Code the objection should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement if it is not so taken it will be deemed to have been waived (r 7 below). And even if the objection is taken in time and disallowed the appellate Court should not interfere with the decree in appeal merely on the ground that claims which ought not to be joined under this rule have been joined in one suit unless the misjoinder has affected the merits of the case (s 99 above).

Where a claim cannot be joined with a claim for the recovery of immovable property without the leave of the Court it is optional with the plaintiff either to obtain the leave and bring one suit in respect of both the claims or to bring separate suits in respect of each of them. The plaintiff is not confined to the first only of these two courses (g).

Counterclaim—This rule applies to a counterclaim as well as to an original action (h).

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order under this rule rejecting an application for leave to join a claim with a claim for the recovery of immovable property (i). See s 99 above.

Revision—See notes to r 3. Revision.

5 [S 44 R S C O 18, r 5] No claim by or against an executor, administrator, or heir, as such, shall be joined with claims by or against him personally, unless the last mentioned claims are alleged to arise with reference to the estate in respect of which the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued as executor, administrator or heir, or such as he was entitled to, or liable for, jointly with the deceased person whom he represents.

Scope of the rule—This rule provides that no claim by a person in his representative character shall be joined in the same suit with claims by him personally nor shall claims against a person in his representative character be joined with claims against him personally—

(1) unless the claims by or against him personally arise with reference to the estate which he represents or

(2) unless he was entitled to or liable for those claims jointly with the deceased person whom he represents.

The object of the rule is to prevent an executor or administrator from intermingling the assets of his testator with his own moneys (j).

(a) A is a tenant for life of certain property and B is the remainderman. A gives a lease of the property to C. A dies leaving a will of which B is the sole executor. Some months after A's death B sues C (1) for arrears of rent due to the estate of A and (2) for rent due to him personally subsequent to A's death. Here the first claim is by C as executor and the second claim is by him personally as remainderman. The claim by C personally does not arise with reference to the estate of A of which C is executor. The two claims therefore cannot be joined together in the same suit. Tredegar v Roberts [1914] 1 K. B. 283.

(b) A dies leaving a will of which B is the executor. By his will A directs B to continue his business. The executor purchases for the purposes of A's business certain goods from C in his own name. C may in such a case sue B for the price of the goods and he may claim the price against B personally or in the alternative against him as executor. The reason is that the personal claim against B arises with reference to the estate of which he is the executor. But if B purchased certain goods from C as executor in the course of the administration of A's estate and other goods under a separate contract altogether in his own name and expressly for the purpose of his own business, C cannot join both claims against B in one suit (1).

(c) A and B carry on business in partnership. A dies leaving a son S who obtains letters of administration to his father's estate. After A's death S and B continue the business in partnership with the old partnership assets. S as administrator sues B for the accounts of the partnership between his father A and B. He also claims dissolution of the partnership between him personally and B and for his share in the partnership. The suit does not offend the provisions of this rule as the personal claim of S in respect of the partnership between him and B arises with reference to the estate in respect of which he is summoned as administrator. Irunachallam v Arunachallam (1922) 43 Mad. L. J. 218. 60 I. C. 966 (2-). A. M. 436.

(cc) The suit is against N as executor of I deceased for administration of the estate of I and also for an account of a partnership which had been carried on by V and N. The suit is not bad for misjoinder of causes of action for O. J. r. 5 allows a claim against an executor as such to be joined with a claim against him personally which is alleged to arise out of the estate in respect of which the executor is sued. Vathubai v Varayana Charya (1927) 51 Bom. 800. 104 I. C. 764 (27) A. B. 470.

(d) The second branch of the rule may be illustrated by the following case. A and B jointly purchase goods from C. A dies leaving a will of which B is the executor. Here A and B are jointly liable for the price of the goods. C may therefore sue B for the price in his (B's) personal as well as representative character. If A and B had purchased goods from C under separate contracts, C ought to bring two separate suits against B one as A's executor to recover the price of goods sold to A and the other against B personally to recover the price of the goods sold to him (B).

Heir as such.—An heir may sue or be sued in his personal capacity or he may sue or be sued in his representative capacity (see notes to O. 7 r. 4). The words "claim by an heir as such" in this rule refer to a claim by him in his representative capacity that is as representing the estate of the deceased whose heir he claims to be (1).

by the widow personally and that the second claim is by her as an heir and that the two claims cannot be joined in one suit. This contention is not sound for the second claim cannot be said to be by an heir as such. The claim is made by the widow not as representing her husband's estate and for the benefit of the estate but for her own and personal benefit. The two claims may therefore be joined in one suit. Ahmad ud-din v Silander (1896) 18 All 256.

Procedure—Where two claims which this rule does not allow to be joined are joined in one suit the practice is to amend the plaint by striking out one of them and the suit may then be proceeded with (m).

Objection as to misjoinder when to be taken—See r 7 below.

Revision—See notes to r 3. Revision

6 [S 45, 2nd para R S C, O 18, r 1] Where it appears to the Court that any causes of action joined in one suit cannot be conveniently tried or disposed of together, the Court may order separate trials or make such other order as may be expedient.

This rule does not apply to cases of misjoinder but to cases where several causes of action have been properly joined in one suit and the causes of action so joined cannot be conveniently tried together (n). See notes to r 3. One plaintiff one defendant and two or more causes of action.

7 [New] All objections on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and, in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived.

Objections as to misjoinder of causes of action—This rule is new. It places objections on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action on the same footing as objections on the ground of non joinder and misjoinder of parties [O 1 r 13]. Such objections must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and any such objection not so taken is to be deemed to have been waived (o). Sec 99 provides that no decree shall be reversed or varied on account of any misjoinder of causes of action not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

Under the Code of 1882 when a plaint was presented which was bad for misjoinder of causes of action it could be returned for amendment under s 53 at any time before the settlement of issues if the plaint was not amended it could be rejected under s 54 cl (d) These provisions have not been re enacted in this Code The Court however may under this Code allow an amendment under O 6 r 17 if the plaintiff applies for it It may also direct the plaintiff under the same rule to amend the plaint on the application of the defendant or where there are two or more defendants on the application of any one of them O 6 r 18 deals with failure to amend after order

As under the old Code so under this Code the Court may where a suit is bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action direct the plaintiffs to elect as to which of them shall proceed with the suit and where a suit is bad for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action direct them to elect against which defendants they will proceed and direct all necessary amendments to be made within a time to be prescribed by the Court If the plaintiff does not comply with the order and amend the plaint the Court may stay the action

The misjoinder of causes of action referred to in this rule is not only the misjoinder contemplated by r 3 above but also that contemplated by rr 4 and 5 above

ORDER III

Recognized Agents and Pleadors

1 [S ] Any appearance, application or act in or to any Court, required or authorized by law to be made or done by a party in such Court, may except where otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be made or done by the party in person, or by his recognized agent, or by a pleader appearing, applying or acting on his behalf

Appearance etc may be in person by recognized agent or by pleader

Provided that any such appearance shall, if the Court so directs, be made by the party in person

Amendments—The words appearing applying or acting were substituted for the words duly appointed to act by the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act 1926

Appearing applying or acting—These words as stated above have been substituted for the words duly appointed to act which occurred in the original rule The changes made in rule 4 below provide for the various purposes for which a pleader may be appointed The words duly appointed to act appear in the proviso to the amended r 4 (5) below See notes to r 4 below Pleadors appointed to act and pleaders engaged only to plead

Appearance—If a recognized agent although able to do so does not conduct the case on behalf of his principal his mere presence in Court is not an appearance in the suit within the meaning of r 6 or r 8 of O 9 (p) See O 9 below and notes to O 9 r 9 Meaning of Appearance

Appearance by party in person—See O 5 r 3

Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis—Such an application cannot be made by a recognized agent (q) See O 33 r 3

2 [S 37] The recognised agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications and acts may be made or done are—

Recognised agents

- (a) persons holding powers of attorney, authorizing them to make and do such appearances, applications and acts on behalf of such parties,
- (b) persons carrying on trade or business for and in the names of parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done, in matters connected with such trade or business only, where no other agent is expressly authorized to make and do such appearances, applications and acts

Clause (a) has been amended by the Bombay High Court under s 122—See Appendix IV below Rules made by the High Court of Bombay Where a power of attorney instead of being a general power as required by r 2 (a) as amended by the Bombay High Court was a special power it was held that it was a defect not affecting the merits of the case within the meaning of s 99 and that the decree should not be disturbed in appeal (r)

Clause (b)—Where a plaint is signed and presented by the plaintiff's clerk who has no authority from the plaintiff to carry on business in the plaintiff's name the plaint cannot be said to have been signed by the plaintiff's recognised agent. In such a case the Court may rightly dismiss the suit (e)

3 [S 38] (1) Processes served on the recognised agent of a party shall be as effectual as if the same had been served on the party in person, unless the Court otherwise directs

Service of process on recognised agent

(2) The provisions for the service of process on a party to a suit shall apply to the service of process on his recognised agent

Service of process on recognised agent—A person holding a power of attorney is not bound to accept service of summons he may refuse to do so for he is not bound to act under the power (f)

4 [S 39] (1) No pleader shall act for any person in any Court, unless he has been appointed for the purpose by such person by a

Appointment of pleader

document in writing signed by such person or by his recognised agent or by some other person duly authorised by or under a power of attorney to make such appointment

(2) Every such appointment shall be filed in Court and shall be deemed to be in force until determined with the leave of the Court by a writing signed by the client or the pleader, as the case may be, and filed in Court, or until the client or the pleader dies or until all proceedings in the suit are ended so far as regards the client

(3) For the purposes of sub rule (2) an application for review of judgment, an application under section 144 or section 152 of this Code, any appeal from any decree or order in the suit and any application or act for the purpose of obtaining copies of documents or return of documents produced or filed in the suit or of obtaining refund of monies paid into the Court in connection with the suit shall be deemed to be proceedings in the suit

(4) The High Court may, by general order, direct that where the person by whom a pleader is appointed is unable to write his name, his mark upon the document appointing the pleader shall be attested by such person and in such manner as may be specified by the order

(5) No pleader who has been engaged for the purpose of pleading only shall plead on behalf of any party, unless he has filed in Court a memorandum of appearance signed by himself and stating—

- (a) the names of the parties to the suit,
- (b) the name of the party for whom he appears, and
- (c) the name of the person by whom he is authorised to appear

Provided that nothing in this sub rule shall apply to any pleader engaged to plead on behalf of any party by any other pleader who has been duly appointed to act in Court on behalf of such party

Old rule—The present rule was substituted for the old rule 4 by the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act 1926. The old rule was as follows —

(1) The appointment of a pleader to make or do any appearance application or act for any person shall be in writing and shall be signed by such person or by his recognized agent or by some other person duly authorized by power of attorney to act in this behalf

(-) Every such appointment when accepted by a pleader shall be filed in Court and shall be considered to be in force until determined with the leave of the Court by a writing signed by the client or the pleader as the case may be and filed in Court or until the client or the pleader dies or until all proceedings in the suit are ended so far as regards the client

(3) No advocate of any High Court established under the Indian High Courts Act 1861 or of any Chief Court and no advocate of any other High Court who is a barrister shall be required to present any document empowering him to act "

Amendment of the rule—This rule is as amended by the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act 1926 Sub rules (1) and (2) correspond with the previous sub rules (1) and (2) except that in sub rule (2) the words when accepted by a pleader which occurred after the words every such appointment have been omitted. Under the old rule which required an acceptance it was held that the acceptance need not be in writing but that if the rules of the Court required a written acceptance the pleader would not be heard unless it was in writing (u) Sub rules (3) to (v) and the proviso are new

Pleaders appointed to act and pleaders engaged only to plead—Under the rule as it stood originally every pleader had to be appointed by a writing signed by the party or by his recognized agent etc Under the present rule a distinction is drawn between —

(1) a pleader appointed to act in Court

(2) a pleader engaged for the purpose of pleading only and

(3) a pleader engaged to plead by a pleader duly appointed to act in Court

(1) As regards a pleader appointed to act in Court it is provided by sub rule (1) that he cannot act for any person in any Court unless he is appointed by such person by a document in writing signed by such person or his recognized agent etc It is only if the appointment is made by a writing signed by the party etc that he can act and it is only where he is so appointed that he can be said to be duly appointed to act See the proviso to sub rule (5)

When a suit is instituted by a plaintiff through an agent the Court has the power to enquire into the agent's authority (t) A pleader appointed by an official liquidator who has obtained the sanction of the Court to institute a suit is duly appointed within the meaning of this rule though no sanction has been obtained under the Indian Companies Act for the appointment of the pleader (u) Where a party to a suit authorizes an agent by a special power of attorney to appoint a pleader to sign execution petitions a pleader appointed by the agent to support a petition verified by the agent is a pleader duly appointed to act on the party's behalf (x) Omission to file a vakilpatra together with the memorandum of appeal does not prevent the appeal from being an appeal properly preferred (y)

A pleader duly appointed by a person to act in Court on his behalf may appear or make an application or otherwise act for him

(2) A pleader engaged for the purpose of pleading only has to file a memorandum of appearance signed by himself as provided by sub rule (5)

(3) A pleader engaged to plead on behalf of a party by any other pleader who has been duly appointed to act has not to file either a vakalatnamah or a memorandum

Advocates—See original sub rule (3) and the undermentioned case (a)

Bombay Pleaders Act 1920—S 10 and Form C in Schedule II of the Bombay Pleaders Acts have been repealed by the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act 1926

Delegation of authority by pleader —Where a pleader cannot attend he has no power to delegate his authority to another pleader (b)

Until determined with the leave of Court —A pleader cannot determine his appointment without the leave of the Court and after reasonable notice to the client (c) An attorney's retainer cannot be revoked by his client by a mere letter it can only be revoked with the leave of the Court by a writing signed by the client and filed in Court as provided in this rule (d) No formality is necessary about the leave of the Court (e)

Until all proceedings in the suit are ended —Where a suit is dismissed for default a pleader engaged to act in Court must not require a fresh power of attorney for the purpose of applying for the restoration of the case (f)

5 [S 40] Any process served on the pleader of any party or left at the office or ordinary residence of such pleader and whether the same is for the personal appearance of the party or not shall be presumed to be duly communicated and made known to the party whom the pleader represents, and, unless the Court otherwise directs, shall be as effectual for all purposes as if the same had been given to or served on the party in person

Service of process on pleader

6 [S 41] (1) Besides the recognised agents described in rule 2 any person residing within the jurisdiction of the Court may be appointed an agent to accept service of process

Agent to accept service

(2) Such appointment may be special or general and shall be made by an instrument in writing signed by the principal, and such instrument or, if the appointment is general, a certified copy thereof shall be filed in Court

Appointment to be in writing and to be filed in Court

(2) Every plaint shall comply with the rules contained in Orders VI and VII, so far as they are applicable

Plaint presented to judge at club after office hours—There is nothing in this rule to show that the presentation of the plaint must be during office hours or must be to the officer appointed at the Court or at any particular place. A judge therefore may accept a plaint at his residence or at his club after office hours if presented to him at that place. In so doing the judge constitutes himself an officer to receive the plaint (g)

2 [S 58] The Court shall cause the particulars of every suit to be entered in a book to be kept for the purpose and called the register of civil suits. Such entries shall be numbered in every year according to the order in which the plaints are admitted

ORDER V

Issue and Service of Summons

ISSUE OF SUMMONS

1 [S 64] (1) When a suit has been duly instituted a summons may be issued to the defendant to appear and answer the claim on a day to be therein specified

Provided that no such summons shall be issued when the defendant has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim

(2) A defendant to whom a summons has been issued under sub rule (1) may appear—

- (a) in person, or
- (b) by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or
- (c) by a pleader accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions

(3) Every such summons shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court

Decree without issue of summons—The proviso to sub r (1) contemplates cases where a decree may be passed against a defendant without issue or service of summons upon him (h)

2 [S 65] Every summons shall be accompanied by a copy of the plaint or, if so permitted, by a concise statement

Copy or statement annexed to summons

3 [S 66] (1) Where the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the defendant, the summons shall order him to appear in person in Court on the day therein specified

Court may order defendant or plaintiff to appear in person

(2) Where the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the plaintiff on the same day, it shall make an order for such appearance

Consequence of non attendance—As to the consequence of non attendance in person see O 9 r 12

Non attendance of party on adjourned date—Where an order is made under this rule for the personal appearance of a party on a specified day he is not bound to appear personally on any adjourned date unless a fresh order is made requiring his appearance on that date. Where no fresh order is made and the Court disposes of the suit under O 9 r 12 the order is one made without jurisdiction (1)

No party to be ordered to appear in person unless a resident within certain limits

4 [S 67] No party shall be ordered to appear in person unless he resides—

(a) within the local limits of the Court's ordinary original jurisdiction, or

(b) without such limits but at a place less than fifty or (where there is railway or steamer communication or other established public conveyance for five-sixths of the distance between the place where he resides and the place where the Court is situate), less than two hundred miles distance from the court house

5 [S 68] The Court shall determine, at the time of issuing the summons, whether it shall be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit, and the summons shall contain a direction accordingly

Summons to be either to settle issues or for final disposal

Provided that, in every suit heard by a Court of Small Causes, the summons shall be for the final disposal of the suit

Summons for final disposal—As a general rule summonses for final disposal of suits should be issued only in simple cases (2)

(2) T. J. Ram v. Sudram (1914) 39 Bom. 37
30 A.L.J. 665

6 [ S 69 ] The day for the appearance of the defendant shall be fixed with reference to the current business of the Court, the place of residence of the defendant and the time necessary for the service of the summons, and the day shall be so fixed as to allow the defendant sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on such day

Fixing day for appearance of defendants

7 [ S 70 ] The summons to appear and answer shall order the defendant to produce all documents in his possession or power upon which he intends to rely in support of his case

Summons to order defendant to produce documents relied on by him

8 [ S 71 ] Where the summons is for the final disposal of the suit, it shall also direct the defendant to produce, on the day fixed for his appearance all witnesses upon whose evidence he intends to rely in support of his case

On issue of summons for final disposal defendant to be directed to produce his witnesses

Service of Summons

9 [ S 72 ] (1) Where the defendant resides within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is instituted or has an agent resident within that jurisdiction who is empowered to accept the service of the summons, the summons shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, be delivered or sent to the proper officer to be served by him or one of his subordinates

Delivery or transmission of summons for service

(2) The proper officer may be an officer of a Court other than that in which the suit is instituted, and, where he is such an officer, the summons may be sent to him by post or in such other manner as the Court may direct

10 [ S 73 ] Service of the summons shall be made by delivering or tendering a copy thereof signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, and sealed with the seal of the Court

Mode of service

Object of service—The object of the service of a summons in whatever way it may be effected (other than substituted service to which other considerations apply) is that the defendant may be informed of the institution of the suit in due time before the date fixed for the hearing (1) See notes to r 17 below Service of summons.

- 11 [ S 74 ] Save as otherwise prescribed, where there are more defendants than one, service of the summons shall be made on each defendant

Service on several defendants

Partners — As to service on partners see O 30 r 3

- 12 [ S 75 ] Wherever it is practicable, service shall be made on the defendant in person, unless he has an agent empowered to accept service, in which case service on such agent shall be sufficient

Service to be on defendant in person when practicable or on his agent

- 13 [ S 76 ] (1) In a suit relating to any business or work against a person who does not reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court from which the summons is issued, service on any manager or agent, who at the time of service, personally carries on such business or work for such person within such limits, shall be deemed good service

Service on agent by whom defendant carried on business

(2) For the purpose of this rule the master of a ship shall be deemed to be the agent of the owner or charterer

Manager or agent personally carrying on business—The manager or agent contemplated by this rule is one who has an initiative and independent discretion albeit subject possibly to general orders for his guidance. A mere servant employed to carry out orders or to execute a particular commission or a factor or commission agent who is not identified with the firm for which he acts is not such an agent (2)

- 14 [ S 77 ] Where in a suit to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immovable property, service cannot be made on the defendant in person, and the defendant has no agent empowered to accept the service, it may be made on any agent of the defendant in charge of the property

Service on agent in charge in suits for immovable property

- 15 [ S 78 ] Where in any suit the defendant cannot be found and has no agent empowered to accept service of the summons on his behalf, service may be made on any adult male member of the family of the defendant who is residing with him

Where service may be on male member of defendant's family

Explanation—A servant is not a member of the family within the meaning of this rule

Service on adult male member—Where no attempt is made to find the defendant and the summons is served on his son the summons cannot be said to be duly served. The inquiry as to the whereabouts of the defendant must not be perfunctory (m)

16 [S 79] Where the serving officer delivers or tenders a copy of the summons to the defendant personally, or to an agent or other person on his behalf, he shall require the signature of the person to whom the copy is so delivered or tendered to an acknowledgment of service endorsed on the original summons

Person served to sign acknowledgment

Refusal to sign acknowledgment—A mere refusal to sign an acknowledgment of service is not an offence under s 173 or s 180 of the Indian Penal Code (n)

17 [S 86] Where the defendant or his agent or such other person as aforesaid refuses to sign the acknowledgment, or where the serving officer, after using all due and reasonable diligence, cannot find the defendant, and there is no agent empowered to accept service of the summons on his behalf, nor any other person on whom service can be made, the serving officer shall affix a copy of the summons on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, and shall then return the original to the Court from which it was issued, with a report endorsed thereon or annexed thereto stating that he has so affixed the copy, the circumstances under which he did so, and the name and address of the person (if any) by whom the house was identified and in whose presence the copy was affixed

Procedure when defendant refuses to accept service or cannot be found

The old section—This section corresponds with s 80 of the Code of 1832 except in the following particulars —

- 1 The words after using all due and reasonable diligence are new They give effect to the decisions cited in the notes below under the head After using all due and reasonable diligence
- 2 The words or carries on business or personally works for gain have been added to remove a doubt which arose under the old section as to whether it was good service to affix a copy of the summons on the outer door of the defendant's place of business (o)
- 3 The words and the name and address etc at the end of the rule are also new They merely give effect to the existing practice.

house but does not find him there and the defendant's adult son who is in the house refuses to accept service on behalf of the father these facts by themselves do not justify the officer in resorting to the mode of service prescribed by this rule he must before effecting such service inquire of the son as to where the defendant is and otherwise exercise due and reasonable diligence in finding the defendant (u) When a defendant is temporarily absent from home and is not represented in his house by an agent or male member of his family the summons should be again taken to the defendant's house to be served upon him at the time when enquiries made show that he is likely to be found at home (v) Mere temporary absence of the defendant does not justify the serving officer in affixing a copy of the summons on the door of the defendant's house (w) especially if the serving officer knows where the absent defendant is (x) See notes above under the head The old section

Cannot find the defendant—These words are wide enough to cover the case of a serving officer not being able to obtain access to a purdanashin lady or to deliver or tender a copy of the summons to her (y) See notes to r 19 below and notes also to O 9 r 13 Grounds on which ex parte decree may be set aside

Proof of service—If the plaintiff appears at the hearing of the suit but the defendant does not appear at the hearing the question whether the summons was duly served arises directly for the determination of the Court for the Court cannot proceed ex parte unless it is proved that the summons was duly served [O 9 r 6 (1)] Where a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant and the defendant satisfies the Court which passed the decree that the summons was not duly served upon him the Court may set aside the decree [O 9 r 13]

19 [S 82, 1st para] Where a summons is returned under rule 17, the Court shall, if the return under that rule has not been verified by the affidavit of the serving officer, and may, if

Or order such service as it thinks fit —These words empower the Court even when there has been a technical compliance with the provisions of r 17 to order service in another mode if the Court thinks fit to do so in the interests of justice. Thus where the person to be served is a purdanashin lady and the serving officer not being able to obtain access to her affixes a copy of the summons on the outer door of her dwelling house as provided by r 17 yet although the mode of service is not improper the Court may under this rule direct the service of summons by means of notice by registered post so that the cover may in due course reach the lady herself (2)

20 [S 82, 2nd para, Ss 83, 84] (1) Where the Court

is satisfied that there is reason to believe that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service, or that for any other reason, the summons cannot be served in the ordinary way, the Court shall order the summons to be served by affixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous place in the Court-house, and also upon some conspicuous part of the house [if any] in which the defendant is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain, or in such other manner as the Court thinks fit

(2) Service substituted by order of the Court shall be

as effectual as if it had been made on the defendant personally

(3) Where service is substituted by order of the Court,

Where service substituted

the Court shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require

Substituted service —See notes to r 17 above Service of summons

Where the Court is satisfied —The advisability of effecting service by substituted service is a matter primarily for the trial Court. The Appellate Court has no power to consider whether the order for substituted service was made on sufficient grounds or not. It has only to see whether the order was made according to law and whether the trial Court was satisfied that the conditions mentioned in this rule were fulfilled (a)

For any other reason —Where by the custom in India a defendant (being a Hindu woman of rank) could not be personally served with summons the Judicial Committee allowed service to be substituted on her Deewan [chief servant] (b)

Service by registered post—This rule is to be read with s 27 of the General Clauses Act 10 of 1897 by which it is provided that when any document is required by an Act passed after 11th March 1897 to be served by post and the expression used is send [which is the expression used in the present rule] then unless a different intention appears [and no such intention appears in the present rule] the service shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing pre paying and posting by registered post a letter containing the document and unless the contrary is proved to have been effected at the time at which the letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post Reading the present rule with the said s 27 the High Court of Bombay held in a case in which it appeared that the postal packet enclosing the summons was properly addressed to the defendant and was registered duly stamped and posted but the packet was returned endorsed refused that the Court was entitled to draw the inference indicated in the said s 27 and to hold that there was sufficient service (c) In the earlier cases which arose under the corresponding section of the Code of 1882 where a postal packet was returned endorsed refused it was held that the service was not sufficient and that further evidence was necessary before the Court could act upon such endorsement (d) As to these cases however it is to be noted that they were all decided without any reference to s 27 of the General Clauses Act as all except one were decided before that Act came into force and the one decided after that Act came into force was not governed by the provisions of s 27 as that section did not apply to the Code of 1882 which was an enactment passed before 11th March 1897 the date on which the General Clauses Act came into force

The High Court of Bombay has recently held that the Court must allow the defendant a retrial if after a decree has been passed against him on evidence that the summons was served by registered post and returned refused he appears and denies receipt of the packet Macleod O J said Service by registered post is at any time a poor substitute for personal service which is directed by the Court It is allowed to litigants as a matter of convenience (e)

Sufficiency of service—Where a summons has been transmitted by one Court to another for service by the latter and the return made by the Court serving the summons states that the service has been duly effected the presumption will be that the service was sufficient unless the return itself shows the insufficiency (f). Similarly when the return made by the Court serving the summons states that the summons has not been duly served and the summons is returned with that declaration to the Court from which it was issued the presumption is that the service was not sufficient and the Court from which the summons was issued should act upon that presumption unless there is good and strong evidence which comes or is brought to its notice showing that the summons was duly served (g). According to the Calcutta High Court however the Court issuing the summons must not proceed upon any presumption either way but must determine for itself whether the service was sufficient or not the reason given being that the present rule does not require the Court to which the summons is sent for service to make any return touching the sufficiency of service (h). This view has been dissented from by the High Court of Allahabad on grounds of expediency and further on the ground that it ignores the last sentence of rule 19 above which applies not only to the Court issuing the summons but also to the Court to which it is sent for service (i).

ORDER VI

Pleadings generally

1 [New Cf Jud Act 1873 S 100] O
"Pleading" shall mean plaint or written statement

Plaint

Introduction of English rules of pleadings—The object of this Order is to introduce into British India the leading rules of pleadings followed in England. The whole of this Order excepting rr 14 and 15 is new. The rules comprised in this Order except rr 14 and 15 have been taken most of them from Order 19 and the rest from Order 23 of the English Rules made under the Judicature Acts. In one respect however the rigour of the English Rules has been relaxed by providing that the Court may notwithstanding the absence of any specific denial require any fact to be proved by the party who alleges it (see O 8 r 5)

Function of pleadings — The whole object of pleadings is to bring the parties to an issue and the meaning of the rules (relating to pleadings) was to prevent the issue being enlarged, which would prevent either party from knowing when the cause came on for trial what the real point to be discussed and decided was. In fact the whole meaning of the system is to narrow the parties to definite issues and thereby to diminish expense and delay especially as regards the amount of testimony required on either side at the hearing. (1) To attain this end the plaintiff should state in his plaint all the facts which constitute his cause of action. It is not sufficient to allege what may be a ground of action if something else be added which is not stated in the plaint. Upon all sound principles of pleading it is necessary to allege what must and not what may be a cause of action. (2) The defendant also should state in his written statement the material facts on which he relies for his defence. When the result of the pleading on both sides is that a material fact is affirmed on the one side and denied on the other the question thus raised between the parties is called an issue of fact. When one party answers his opponent's pleading by stating an objection in point of law the legal question thus raised between the parties is called an issue of law. See O 14 r 1.

A plaintiff's pleading is his plaint (O 7). A defendant's pleading is his written statement (O 8). In some cases a plaintiff who has filed his plaint may with the leave of the Court file a written statement or the Court may require him to file a written statement. In such cases the written statement forms part of the plaintiff's pleadings. Again there are cases in which a defendant who has filed his written statement may with the leave of the Court file an additional written statement or the Court may require him to do so. In such cases the additional written statement forms part of the defendant's pleadings. The plaintiff's written statement and the defendant's additional written statement are called subsequent pleadings. See O 8 r 9.

2 [New R S C, O 19, r 4] Every pleading shall contain, and contain only, a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence, as the case may be, but not the evidence by which they are to be proved, and shall, when necessary, be divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively. Dates, sums and numbers shall be expressed in figures.

Pleading to state material facts and not evidence

General rules of pleading — O 6 deals with Pleadings in general. O 7 deals with Plaints and O 8 with Written Statements. The following is a summary of the rules comprised in this order —

- 1 State your whole case in your pleading in other words set forth in your pleading all material facts on which you rely for your claim or defence (r 1).
- 2 State facts and not law (r 2). If any matter of law is set out in your opponent's pleading do not plead to it (m).
- 3 State the material facts on which you rely and not the evidence by which they are to be proved (rr 2 10 11 12).
- 4 State material facts only omit immaterial and unnecessary facts. Do not anticipate your opponent's pleading and plead to any matter which is not alleged against you (r 2).

(m) Puch rd on v Mayo 10 Ford (1 03) H B 1

- 5 State the facts of your case concisely but with precision (r 2)
- 6 It is not necessary to allege the performance of any condition precedent and an averment of performance is now implied in every pleading (r 6)
- 7 It is not necessary to set out the whole or any part of a document unless the precise words thereof are necessary. It is sufficient to state the effect of the document as briefly as possible (r 9)
- 8 It is not necessary to allege any matter of fact which the law presumes in your favour or as to which the burden of proof lies upon your opponent
(r 13)

Fundamental rule—Rule 2 of this Order is the fundamental rule of pleadings. When analysed it will be found to require four things—

- I Every pleading must state facts and not law
- II It must state material facts and material facts only
- III It must state only the facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence and not the evidence by which they are to be proved
- IV It must state such facts in a concise form

The main object or one of the main objects of this rule is that the one party may know what are the facts on which the other party relies in order that he may be prepared to meet the case. (n)

I Every pleading must state facts and not law —A pleading must not set forth a public statute for the Court is bound to take judicial notice of it (o) Nor should parties plead conclusions of law or of mixed law and fact it is for the Court to declare the law arising upon the facts before it The parties should only state the facts on which they rely for their claim or defence

It is bad pleading to allege merely that a right or a duty exists the facts must be set out which give rise to the right or create the duty. Thus in a suit for damages for negligence it is not enough for the plaintiff to state that the defendant has been guilty of negligence without showing in what respect he was negligent and how he became bound to use care to prevent injury to others. Negligence means a breach of duty to take due care and caution. The plaintiff therefore ought to state facts upon which the supposed duty is founded and the duty to the plaintiff with the breach of which the defendant is charged (p). Similarly it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to aver that the defendant did the act complained of wrongfully, unlawfully and improperly or without any justification therefore or right so to do. He must state the facts upon which he proposes to rely as showing that the act was done wrongfully or unlawfully.

Those epithets under the present system of pleading are useless and redundant. They add nothing whatever to the plaintiff's case. They are merely now epithets of abuse. They were formerly in declarations essential because under that form of pleading legal rights were stated for facts but facts alone are stated now (g). Upon like principles it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to say Under and by virtue of a certain deed I am entitled etc. He must state the facts which go to show his title (r). In like manner a plaintiff claiming under a donatio mortis causa must state the facts which according to him would constitute it a valid donatio mortis causa it is not sufficient to say that the deceased two days before his death made a good and valid donatio mortis causa to the plaintiff of the property (s) Where a plaintiff claims by inheritance it is not sufficient to say I am the heir at law He must state the particulars showing the links of relationship on which he relies as constituting him such heir (t)

The same principles apply to a defendant's pleading A defendant may not in his written statement say merely I am not liable He must allege facts which show that he is not liable Thus a defendant who claims privilege in a suit for defamation must not plead merely that he published the words on a privileged occasion He must state the facts which give rise to the privilege (u)

II Every pleading must state material facts and material facts only—To begin with a party should set out in his pleading all material facts on which he relies for his claim or defence What particulars are to be stated must depend on the facts of each case But it is absolutely essential that the pleading not to be embarrassing to the defendant should state those facts which will put the defendants on their guard and tell them what they have to meet when the case comes on for trial (v) If a party omits to plead a material fact he will not be allowed to give evidence of that fact at the trial unless the Court gives him leave to amend his pleadings under r 17 below If parties were held strictly to their pleadings under the present system they ought not to be allowed to prove at the trial as a fact on which they would have to rely in order to support their case any fact which is not stated in the pleadings (w) Thus if A sues B for specific performance of a contract alleged to have been signed by B's agent and the only fact stated in B's written statement as a ground of defence is that the alleged agent was of unsound mind and therefore incompetent to contract B will not be allowed to prove at the hearing that the alleged agent had in fact no authority to sign the contract B ought to have pleaded want of authority in his written statement if he intended to rely upon it for his defence Nor will B be allowed to amend his written statement in such a case under rule 17 below for if a defendant were to be at liberty to put in a defence inconsistent with the rules of pleading and then at the trial get the case to stand over in order to put in a new defence the consequences might be very prejudicial (x)

Matters affecting damages—The present rule provides that every pleading should contain and contain only material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence as the case may be That is to say a plaintiff should contain only those material facts on which the plaintiff relies for his claim and a written statement should contain only those material facts on which the defendant relies for his defence Does this mean that the plaint should be confined to those facts only which constitute the plaintiff's cause of action and that the written statement should be confined to those facts only which constitute the defendant's defence? It has been held as regards a plaintiff's claim that the words material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim are not confined to those facts which are essential to the plaintiff's cause of action but include any fact which the plaintiff is entitled to prove at the hearing Thus facts which merely tend to increase the amount of damages are not essential to the cause of action but they certainly are facts which the plaintiff is entitled to prove at the hearing as matters in aggravation of damages Such facts are therefore material facts within the meaning of this rule and a plaintiff has to state them in his plaint (y) As observed by Brett LJ in Phillips v Phillips ( ) the words of the rule are not the facts which will be necessary to support the cause of action they are the material facts on which the party relies for his claim. In Millington v Loring (a) which was a suit for damages for breach of a contract to marry the plaintiff after allying the promise to marry in the first paragraph and the breach thereof in the second went on to allege in the third paragraph that the plaintiff relying upon the said promise permitted the defendant to debauch and carnally know her whereby the defendant infected her with a venereal disease. Analysing the above plaint it may be stated that the first and second paragraphs stated facts that were essential to the cause of action: (1) facts relating to the making of the contract and facts relating to the breach of the contract being facts which constitute the cause of action in a suit for damages for the breach of a contract. But the facts stated in the third paragraph were not essential to the cause of action. Nevertheless they were material facts within the meaning of the rule for the plaintiff was entitled to prove them as matters in aggravation of damages and it was held that they were properly set forth in the plaint. Turning now to the defence in a suit for damages the rule laid down in Wood v Durham (b) is that a defendant is not in general entitled to plead in his defence matters in mitigation of damages. The ground of the decision in that case is that such matters do not constitute any defence to an action and a defendant can under the rule allege only those material facts on which he relies for his defence. As to Millington v Loring it was said that it was a case where there was a good cause of action of a double character stated: there were damages claimed by reason of an alleged breach of promise of marriage but there was far more because part of the cause of action was that by reason of that the plaintiff had been ill through the seduction by the defendant who had ruined her character and has infected her with a bad disease. One may be permitted to doubt whether illness through seduction and infection with disease formed part of the cause of action. Moreover the decision in Millington v Loring has been followed in a case later than Wood v Durham where it could not be said that there was a cause of action of a double character (c). However this may be it is to be remarked that the decision in Wood v Durham turned not only on the construction of the corresponding English rule but on O 21 r 4 which provides in express terms that no denial or defence shall be necessary as to damages claimed or their amount but they shall be deemed to be put in issue in all cases unless expressly admitted. O 21 r 4 of the English rules has not been reproduced in the Code. Therefore just as the plaintiff may plead any matter in aggravation of damages as to which he could give evidence at the trial so the defendant may plead any matter in mitigation of damages as to which he could give evidence at the trial. See notes to O 6 r 3. Except damages.

Facts not yet material to a case.—The pleadings should only contain such facts as are material at the present stage of the suit. It is not proper to anticipate the answer of the adversary. To do so is like leaping before one comes to the stile (d). It is no part of the statement of claim [plaint in our pleadings] to anticipate the defence and to state what the plaintiff would have to say in answer to it. That would be a return to the old inconvenient system of pleading in Chancery, which ought certainly not to be encouraged when the plaintiff used to allege in his bill imaginary defences of the defendant and make charges in reply to them (e). Thus it is unnecessary in a suit upon a bond to allege that the defendant was of full age when he executed the bond. For if he were a minor when he executed the bond it is for him to prove it; it need not be denied by anticipation (f). Similarly a defendant should not plead to any matter which is not alleged against him. Thus if a defendant is sued for slander the only way to meet the plaintiff's claim is to plead (1) that the words in question were not spoken and published

2 or (2) that they were spoken and published and are true or (3) that they were spoken and published and are privileged. If instead of so doing he pleads that he did not say the words alleged in the plaint but that he said something else and that the something else which he said was true and spoken on a privileged occasion the defence will be struck out under r 16 below as one embarrassing the fair trial of the suit (g)

III Every pleading must state facts and not the evidence by which they are to be proved—Every pleading must contain a statement of the material facts on which the party pleading relies but not the evidence by which those facts are to be proved. It is an elementary rule of pleading that when a state of facts is relied on, it is enough to allege it simply without setting out the subordinate facts which are the means of producing it or the evidence sustaining the allegation (h). No doubt evidence also consists of facts but there is a convenient nomenclature to distinguish the two. The material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence are called facta probanda. The evidence or the facts by means of which they are to be proved are called facta probantia. Every pleading should contain only facta probanda and not facta probantia. The distinction is taken in the very rule itself between the facts on which the party relies and the evidence to prove those facts. Erle C.J. expressed it in this way. He said there were facts that might be called the allegata probanda the facts which ought to be proved and they were different from the evidence which was adduced to prove those facts. And it was upon that expression of opinion of Erle C.J. that rule 4 [of the English rules corresponding to the present rule] was drawn. The facts which ought to be stated are the material facts on which the party pleading relies. (i) Thus where a suit is brought against an Insurance Company on a policy on the life of A and one of the conditions of the policy is that it should be void if the insured committed suicide the Company should only plead if the defence is that A committed suicide that A died by his own hand. It is wrong to state in the written statement that A had been melancholy for weeks that he bought a pistol and shot himself with it. These facts are merely evidence (facta probantia) facts by means of which the factum probandum namely suicide is to be proved (j). Similarly it is wrong to set out in the pleading admissions made by the opponent for admissions are only evidence (k). Thus where a plaintiff alleged that certain windows of his were ancient and the defendant stated in his defence that the plaintiff had in a former action admitted that they were not ancient the allegation was struck out (l). Upon the same principle where the facts in a pedigree are facts to be relied upon as facts to establish the right or title they must be set out but where the pedigree is the means of proving the facts relied on as facts by which the right or title is to be established then the pedigree is evidence that need not be set out (m).

Rules 10, 11 and 12 of this Order are special applications of the general principle laid down in this rule.

IV Every pleading must state material facts in a concise form.—To attain this end the forms in Appendix A when applicable and where they are not applicable forms of the like character as nearly as may be should be used for all pleadings (see r 3 below). At the same time the rules given above under the head General rules of pleading should be borne in mind. But the pleader should not sacrifice precision to conciseness. For as observed by Kay J. although pleadings must now be concise they must also be precise (n). In fact rule 4 expressly required that in all cases in which particulars may be necessary beyond such as are exemplified in the forms [in Appendix A] particulars (with dates and items if necessary) shall be stated in the pleadings. As to further information on this subject of certainty in pleading, see notes to rr 4 5 below

Alternative and inconsistent allegations—The rule now under consideration does not prohibit inconsistent pleadings. A person may rely upon one set of facts if he can succeed in proving them and he may rely upon another set of facts if he can succeed in proving them and it appears to me to be far too strict a construction of this Order to say that he must make up his mind on which particular line he will put his case when perhaps he is very much in the dark (o) The rules as to joinder of defendants (O 1 r 3) and causes of action (O 2 r 3) as also the rules as to the reliefs that may be claimed by a plaintiff (O 7 rr 7 8) clearly show that either party may allege in his pleadings two or more inconsistent sets of material facts and claim relief thereunder in the alternative (p) A plaintiff may rely upon several different rights alternatively although they may be inconsistent (q) But then as to each of those he ought to set out the facts upon which he would have to rely as facts to maintain that right (r) So too a defendant may by his written statement raise as many distinct and separate and therefore inconsistent defences as he may think proper (s) But this is subject to the provision contained in rule 16 below which provides that the Court may strike out any matter in a plaint or written statement which may embarrass the fair trial of the suit (t) A pleading however is not embarrassing within the meaning of rule 16 merely because it sets up inconsistent sets of facts (u) Hence it cannot be struck out solely on that ground To go to the length of saying that no inconsistent pleading can be pleaded appears to me not warranted by the rules and contrary to the established practice of the Courts (v) It must however be noted that If alternative cases are alleged the facts ought not to be mixed up leaving the [other party] to pick out the facts applicable to each case but facts ought to be distinctly stated so as to show on what facts each alternative of the relief sought is founded (w) [See O 7 r 8] If the facts are so mixed up that they may embarrass the fair trial of the suit the Court may strike out matters which may embarrass the trial What the rules prohibit are not inconsistent pleadings but pleadings which set up inconsistent and embarrassing claims and inconsistent and embarrassing defences See notes to O 7 r 7 Alternative relief

A plea that a policy of fire insurance was not in existence at the time of the fire and that there was no contract of insurance at all coupled with an alternative plea that if there was a contract then by reason of certain conditions precedent to the attaching of the liability the insurance company would not be liable is not contrary to the law of India (x)

4 [New R S C, O 19, r 6] In all cases in which

Particulars to be given where necessary

the party pleading relies on any misrepresentation, fraud, breach of trust, wilful default, or undue influence and in all other cases in which particulars may be necessary beyond such as are exemplified in the forms aforesaid, particulars (with dates and items if necessary) shall be stated in the pleading

Object of particulars— Although pleadings must now be concise they must also be precise (y) For this purpose all necessary particulars must be embodied in the pleadings Where a plaint contains sufficient averments and indicates with reasonable precision what the claim sued on is the suit should not fail by reason of the omission or incorrect description of any particular (z) If the particulars stated in the pleadings are not sufficiently specific the other party may apply for further and better particulars under the next rule The object of particulars is to prevent surprise at the trial by informing the opposite party what case he has to meet to define and narrow the issues to be tried and so save unnecessary expense (a) Particulars supplement pleadings which would otherwise be too vague and general and ensure a fair trial by giving notice of the case intended to be set up (b) What particulars are to be stated must depend upon the facts of each case (c) As a general rule it may be stated that as much certainty and particularity must be insisted on as is reasonable having regard to the circumstances and to the nature of the acts themselves To insist upon less would be to relax old and intelligible principles To insist upon more would be the vainest pedantry (d) At the same time the distinction between particulars and evidence must be steadily kept in view The Courts have uniformly endeavoured to prevent the plaintiff or the defendant as the case may be from prying into the brief of his opponent for finding out what is to be the evidence which is to be produced at the trial On the other hand the Courts have uniformly said that the plaintiff or the defendant is entitled to be told any and every particular which will enable him properly to prepare his case for the trial so that he may not be taken by surprise (e) That is to say whilst particulars may be ordered to prevent surprise and to inform the opposite party of the case he has to meet particulars are not ordered of the mode in which it may be proposed to prove the case set up in the pleading (f) To use the phraseology of r 2 above particulars will be ordered of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence but not of the evidence by which those facts are to be proved Thus a defendant is not entitled to know the names of the plaintiff's witnesses for that is to require particulars of the evidence by which the plaintiff's case is to be proved But where the names of witnesses form part of the material facts constituting a party's case he is bound to state them in his pleading and if he does not an order may be made requiring him to disclose the names (g) If the particulars are those that he ought to give he cannot refuse to do so merely on the ground that his answer will disclose the names of the witnesses he proposes to call (h) This may be explained by an illustration A deals in drugs bearing the registered trade-mark Herbalin B uses the word Herbaline on drugs manufactured by him A sues B for infringement of his trade mark alleging in the plaint that the use of his trade mark by B is calculated to induce and had in fact induced diverse persons to purchase B's goods as and for A's goods. B applies for particulars of the names and addresses of the diverse persons. B is entitled to the particulars for the names in this case form part of the material facts which constitutes A's case. The whole question in such a case is has the defendant induced diverse persons to buy his goods as and for those of the plaintiff (i).

Fraud and coercion—Where fraud is charged against the defendant it is an acknowledged rule of pleading that the plaintiff must set forth the particulars of the fraud which he alleges. It is not enough to use such general words as fraud, deceit or machinations. General allegations however strong may be the words in which they are stated are insufficient even to amount to an averment of fraud of which any Court ought to take notice (j). Where a plaintiff seeks relief on the ground of fraud but no particulars of the fraud are given in the plaint the Court may allow the plaint to be amended or it may reject the plaint (k) [see O 6 r 17 and O 7 r 11]. A charge of fraud must be substantially proved as laid and when one kind of fraud is charged another kind of fraud cannot upon failure of proof be substituted for it (l). Nor is it proper for the appellate Court to entertain a case of fraud other than the one specifically alleged in the pleadings (m). The same rules apply when coercion is charged in the plaint (n).

If the particulars of fraud stated in the plaint are not sufficiently specific the defendant may apply for further particulars under the next rule. Thus where it is alleged by the plaintiffs that the defendants have made false entries in the plaintiff's books for the purpose of defrauding them the plaintiffs may be directed to furnish particulars specifying the entries charged to be false and the nature of their objection to each item (o). See notes to rule 5 below. Discovery before particulars ill 1 and notes to O 6 r 17. Amendment by adding plea of fraud.

Misrepresentation—Where it is alleged in the plaint that the defendant represented to the plaintiff etc. it should be stated whether the representation was verbal or in writing (p). It is not enough in an action to restrain infringement of a trade mark to allege that diverse persons were induced by the acts of the defendant to purchase his goods as and for those of the plaintiff. The plaintiff should state in the plaint particulars of the names and addresses of those diverse persons (q).

Breach of trust—Where breach of trust is charged the pleading must specify the acts constituting the alleged breach of trust. It is not enough to say that the defendant had in various ways misapplied rent and profits of leaseholds which he had received on behalf of the plaintiff and had committed breaches of trust (r).

Other cases in which particulars may be necessary —

Misconduct—Where the dismissal of a servant or an agent is justified on the ground of misconduct the party so justifying must specify the acts of misconduct (s).

Negligence—Where negligence or contributory negligence is charged full details must be given of the acts on which the party pleading relies as constituting negligence (t).

Agreement—Where an agreement is alleged the pleading should state the date of the agreement the names of the parties to it and whether it was in writing or verbal (u) If it is an implied agreement it should appear from what facts or circumstances it is to be implied (see r 12 below)

Defamation—In an action for slander the plaintiff must give particulars of the names of the persons to whom the alleged slander was made (t)

In an action for libel where the charge made against the plaintiff in the alleged libel is general in its nature a defendant who pleads a justification must state in his pleading the facts on which he relies in support of his justification (w) But where in an action of libel the defendant relies on the defence of fair comment and pleads it in the form now commonly known as the rolled up plea—v In so far as the said words consist of allegations of fact the said words are in their nature and ordinary meaning true in substance and in fact and in so far as the said words consist of expression of opinion they are fair comment made in good faith and without malice for the benefit of the public upon the said facts which are a matter of public interest the Court will not order the defendant to specify which of the words complained of he relies on as being statements of facts and which as being expressions of opinion. Nor will the Court order him to give particulars of the facts on which he relies as being the basis of his comments if the plea (as above) limits those facts to the said facts for the plaintiff is thereby given all the information on the subject that he can require (x) A sends a book of which he is the author to B for a review B in reviewing the book prints and publishes among other statements the following A is by his own confession a most barefaced liar A sues B for damages for libel B justifies pleading the truth of the alleged libel B must specify in his pleading the passage in A's work on which he relies in support of the defence of justification (y)

Accounts—Where a plaintiff claims merely to have a general account taken he need not give particulars as to the items But it is otherwise if the plaintiff claims a definite amount instead of an account In the latter case the plaintiff must give particulars as to the items of which it is composed (z)

Where a lump sum is claimed—Where a plaintiff claims a lump sum the defendant is entitled to particulars of the items composing such sum (a) So also where a plaintiff gives credit for a lump sum and sues for the balance (b)

Particulars of defence—The general principles upon which the Courts act in requiring particulars to be given of allegations or matters stated in plaints are applicable equally to defences and the rules relating to the giving of particulars are in general applicable to all pleadings though from the nature of the case the occasion for particulars arises somewhat less frequently in regard to defences than in regard to claims. Thus where a defence consists of traverses or denials of allegations in the claim so that the defendant is not taking upon himself the onus of proving any substantive facts but is only denying or requiring proof of those alleged by the plaintiff the occasion for particulars does not arise but where he pleads affirmatively or sets up facts to be proved in answer to the plaintiff's case he may be and in general is as much under obligation to give particulars as if he were alleging such or similar matters in a plaint (c) For instance if a defendant sets up a defence of payments made he has to give particulars of th dates and amounts of such payments. So if he justifies a libel he must state the facts fully in his pleadings or give particulars (d). Similarly where he alleges that he released from or exonerated and discharged from the performance of his contract he must in his written statement give sufficient information to his opponent as to how and when he was so released or discharged [Bullen and Leake Precedents of Pleadings 6th ed. 532-533]. But where the onus of establishing a positive or negative allegation lies on the plaintiff the Court will not order the defendant to give particulars of his traverse of the allegation. Thus where the plaintiff alleged that the committee of the Stock Exchange in declining to re-elect him as a member of the exchange did not act bond fide fairly, reasonably or judiciously in coming to the conclusion they did and the committee in their defence alleged that they acted bond fide and honestly it was held that the onus of proving that the committee had not acted bond fide being on the plaintiff he was not entitled to particulars of the facts or grounds upon which the committee based their decision (e).

Failure to give particulars after order—If the order directing a party to give particulars is not obeyed then if the plaintiff is in default he should have his action stayed and if the defendant is in default his defence should be struck out (f).

5 [New R S C O 19, r 7] A further and better statement of the nature of the claim or defence, or further and better particulars of any matter stated in any pleading may in all cases be ordered, upon such terms, as to cost and otherwise, as may be just

Further and better statement of particulars

Application for particulars—The object of particulars is to prevent surprise at the trial and to limit the inquiry at the trial to the matters set out in the particulars. So I think particulars ought to be encouraged. They tend to narrow the issues (g). If a party does not state in his pleading all the particulars required by r 4 the other party may apply under this rule for further and better particulars. In the English practice it is to be followed here the application need not be supported by any affidavit except perhaps in a special case (h).

When application should be made—is a general rule a defendant who claims particulars should apply for them with reasonable promptitude (i) and before putting in his defence but he does not by putting in his defence waive his right to particulars (j). Indeed in a proper case the Court may order an application for particulars to stand over till a written statement has been put in to enable the Court to know what the points raised by the defence are as where the defendant is the plaintiff's agent and the particulars in question are all in the knowledge of the defendant but not in the knowledge of the plaintiff (k).

Discovery before particulars—The question often arises where a defendant has applied for particulars whether the plaintiff should deliver particulars before obtaining discovery and inspection of the defendant's books or whether discovery should be given before particulars are delivered. There is no hard and fast rule as to the class of cases in which particulars should precede discovery or discovery be ordered before particulars but the Judge must exercise a reasonable discretion in every case after carefully looking at all the facts and taking into account any special circumstances. (f) The result of the authorities appears to be that where the party pleading does not know the facts necessary to enable him to give the particulars but his opponent knows them the party applying for particulars may be ordered to give discovery before the party pleading is required to deliver particulars and the application for particulars may be postponed till after discovery. It is good practice and good sense that where the defendant knows the facts and the plaintiffs do not the defendant should give discovery before the plaintiffs deliver particulars. (m)

1 Suit by principal against agent for accounts charging agent with fraud—A employs B to purchase goods as his agent at the lowest possible price. A sues B for an account alleging in the plaint that B had purchased goods at prices higher than the current prices and had secretly received commission from the vendor. The charges against B are stated in general terms no particulars being given. A is unable to state the particulars of the fraud charged until he sees B's books. A is entitled to inspection of B's books before he can be called upon to deliver particulars of the fraud. (n)

2 Suit by a wife's executor against husband—A who is the executor of J sues B J's husband to recover from him all the furniture and other chattels purchased by J with her separate income and included in an inventory of all the goods in B's house made sometime before J's death. B applies for particulars of the furniture. He is not entitled to the particulars until he declares by an affidavit which of the articles comprised in the inventory belonged to his wife. Where the plaintiffs are executors who do not know and the defendant a person who does know it is right that discovery should come first. (o)

3 Suit by a colliery company against a colliery merchant—A colliery company sues R a coal merchant for damages for fraudulently passing off coal not gotten from the company's mines as coal gotten from the company's mines. The plaintiffs in their plaint give one specific instance of fraud and allege that on divers other occasions the defendant had taken orders from divers other persons for coal to be supplied from the company's mines and fraudulently sold coal not purchased from the plaintiff as coal gotten from the company's mines. R applies for particulars of the names and dates. The company then applies for inspection of R's books. The company is entitled to discovery before delivering particulars. Chitty J said. Having regard to the circumstances that many of these alleged frauds are within the defendant's means of knowledge and are not within the knowledge of the plaintiffs I think discovery ought to precede particulars. (p)

The practice followed in the above cases was sought to be applied in a libel case where A sued B for calling him a charity swindler and imposter and B pleaded justification and, when called upon to give particulars of the charge said that he could not unless he was allowed inspection of A's books of account. The Court held that B was not entitled to discovery before he had delivered particulars. Kay L.J. said. To apply this practice to the case of a libel would be to sanction the publication of a libel when the libeller knew no facts justifying the libellous statement because he believed he could by the process of discovery elicit such facts. ### Objections to particulars —

- 1 4 applies for particulars from B under this rule It is a valid objection to the application that the particulars applied for by A relate to the modes in which B's case is to be proved and not to material facts constituting B's case See notes to r 4 above Object of particulars
- 2 Particulars will only be ordered of material facts constituting a party's case but not of any immaterial allegation (r)
- 3 Particulars will only be ordered of material facts alleged by a party in his pleading but not of those denied by him See notes to r 4 above Particulars of defence
- 4 4 applies for particulars from B under this rule It is no objection to the application that A must know the true facts of the case better than B (s)
- 5 Where a party from whom particulars are sought is unable to give the particulars without laborious inquiry the practice is to make an order for the best particulars the party can give (t) This is usually the case where the party fills a representative character (u)

Upon such terms as to costs or otherwise —Thus an order may be made directing that unless particulars are delivered within a certain time the suit shall be dismissed (z)

Amending or delivering further particulars—Where a party who has delivered particulars under an order afterwards desires to amend them or to deliver further particulars the proper course for him is to obtain an order giving him leave to do so (w) And leave will in general be granted where the amendment will cause no injury to the opposite party except such as can be sufficiently compensated for by costs (x) Leave to amend may be refused where it is sought to introduce a new cause of action (y) or to add to the amount claimed after the defendant has paid into Court the full amount originally claimed ( ) In application to amend particulars will as a rule be refused if made at the trial of the suit (a) See s 153 and r 17 of this Order

6 [New R S C O 19, r 14] Any condition precedent, the performance or occurrence of which is intended to be contested shall

Neither party need allege the performance of any condition precedent.—A agrees to build a house for B at certain rates specified in the contract. It is a condition of the agreement that payment to A should only be made upon a certificate signed by B's architect as to the amount due. A demands payment upon completion of the building but B refuses to pay. A sues B claiming Rs 5 000. Here the obtaining of the architect's certificate is a condition precedent to A's right of action. Under the present rule it is not necessary for A expressly to aver in his pleading that he has obtained the architect's certificate. Such averment the rule says shall be implied in his pleading. The rule further provides that if B intends to contest the fulfilment of the condition precedent he must distinctly specify the condition precedent in his written statement. He must plead that the architect has not certified the amount claimed in the suit. If B does not plead the non performance of the condition it will be presumed that the condition has been duly performed. If B pleads non performance the burden of proving due performance will be on A.

A condition precedent it must be observed does not strictly speaking form part of the cause of action. Thus in the case put above A's cause of action consists of the making of the contract and of the breach thereof by B. The condition of obtaining the architect's certificate is but an additional formality introduced by the express agreement of the parties suspending A's right to sue until the condition has been performed.

The Lahore High Court has held that in a suit for damages for breach of contract the plaintiff is dispensed by this rule from pleading his readiness and willingness to perform his part of the contract (b).

History of the rule.—This rule is a reproduction of O 19 r 14 of the English Rules. Before the year 1852 it was a recognized rule of English pleadings that the plaintiff should allege expressly the performance of each necessary condition precedent to the rights claimed. Then came the Common Law Procedure Act 1852 which modified the earlier practice by enabling the plaintiff to aver performance of conditions precedent generally. For this purpose the form in use was all conditions were performed, and all things happened and all times elapsed necessary to entitle the plaintiff to have the said promise performed by the defendant and to maintain his action for the breach thereof hereinafter alleged. The present rule does away with the necessity of even a general averment of performance of condition precedent. A plaintiff need not now allege the performance of any condition precedent. It is for the defendant to object if he intends to dispute the performance of any condition precedent.

Distinctly.—This rule requires that where a party intends to contest the performance of any condition precedent he must distinctly specify the condition precedent in his pleading. An allegation in general terms that there was an express condition is not enough. The pleading must state the terms of the condition the names of the parties to it and whether it was in writing or verbal (c).

7 [New R S C, O 19 r 16] No pleading shall, except by way of amendment, raise any new ground of claim or contain any allegation of fact inconsistent with the previous pleadings of the party pleading the same.

Departure

Departure in pleading.—This rule provides against what is called "a departure in pleading". It is a reproduction of O 19 r 15 of the English Rules. Its importance in this country is not likely to be so great as in England where the practice is for each party in turn to state his own case and answer that of his opponent before the hearing. Not that the Code does not recognize subsequent pleadings (see O 8 r 9) but such pleadings are seldom resorted to in this country even in the Presidency towns. The general principles on which the system of pleading in England is founded are as follows —

- 1 The plaintiff by his statement of claim alleges the material facts on which he relies in support of his case.
- 2 The defendant in answer thereto delivers a defence in which he may take all or any of the following courses —
first he may deny or refuse to admit the facts stated by the plaintiff secondly he may confess or admit them and avoid their effect by answering fresh facts which afford an answer thereto thirdly he may admit the facts stated by the plaintiff and may raise a question of law as to their legal effect
 If the defendant adopts the first or third of these three courses a question of fact or of law is at once raised between the parties
- 3 If the defendant adopts the second of the three courses the plaintiff may reply— first by denying the fresh facts alleged by the defendant or secondly by admitting them and alleging other facts which avoid their effect or thirdly by raising a question of law as to their effect.
- 4 If the plaintiff pleads a reply of the second kind, that is if he replies by way of confession and avoidance the defendant has the same courses open to him in pleading a rejoinder (d). A rejoinder is now seldom pleaded.
- 5 It is very seldom that further proceedings are taken, but there may be sur-rejoinders rebutters and surrebutters

Under the Code a plaintiff commences his suit by presenting a plaint. The defendant then puts in his written statement in answer to the plaintiff's claim. There is nothing corresponding to a Reply or Rejoinder in our system of pleadings. But the plaintiff may with the leave of the Court tender a written statement and the defendant may with like leave tender an additional written statement (O 8 r 9). The Code of 1882 also contained a similar provision (e) but pleadings in this country seldom go beyond the defendant's written statement.

The word pleading at the commencement of this rule refers to subsequent pleadings. Thus in England a plaintiff may not raise in his Reply a ground of claim different from that raised in his Statement of Claim nor can he in his Reply set up facts inconsistent with those set up in his Statement of Claim. A reply is not the proper place in which to raise new claims. A plaintiff who wishes to add new claims can do so only by amending the Statement of Claim. Similar remarks apply to a defendant's Rejoinder. As a plaintiff's Reply must be consistent with his Statement of Claim so a defendant's Rejoinder must be consistent with his Defence. Thus if a plaintiff alleges merely a negligent breach of trust in his Statement of Claim the Reply must not assert that the breach of trust was fraudulent (f). Similarly if the Defence alleges that the arbitrators did not make any award the Rejoinder must not assert that the award was not tendered by the proper time for it is one thing not to make an award, and another thing not to tender it when made (g) Upon the same principle a plaintiff who claims rent on the basis of a lease cannot claim the same sum in his Reply as damages for unlawfully holding over for by his Statement of Claim he treats the defendant as his tenant and he cannot turn round in his Reply and say If the defendant is not liable as a tenant he is liable as a trespasser (h)

8 [New R S C, O 19, r 20] Where a contract is alleged in any pleading, a bare denial of the same by the opposite party shall be construed only as a denial in fact of the express contract alleged or of the matters of fact from which the same may be implied, and not as a denial of the legality or sufficiency in law of such contract

Denial of contract

Denial of contract—All matters which go to show that the contract sued on is void or unlawful must be specifically pleaded If such matters are not expressly pleaded no evidence thereof can as a rule be given at the trial Thus if A sues B on a contract and B in his written statement merely denies the contract such denial will be taken to mean only that there was in fact no such contract as alleged it will not be construed as a denial of the legality of the contract The result is that if A proves the contract sued upon B will not be allowed to contend at the hearing that the contract was a wagering contract and therefore void B ought to have specifically pleaded in his written statement that the contract was a wagering contract (i) But where at the hearing of a suit the plaintiff's case discloses that the transaction which is the basis of his claim is illegal the Court cannot properly ignore the illegality even if the illegality be not pleaded or relied on by the defendant (j) No Court ought to enforce an illegal contract or allow itself to be made the instrument of enforcing obligations alleged to arise out of a contract or transaction which is illegal if the illegality is duly brought to the notice of the Court and if the person invoking the aid of the Court is himself implicated in the illegality It matters not whether the defendant has pleaded the illegality or whether he has not If the evidence adduced by the plaintiff proves the illegality the Court ought not to assist him (k) Note that an agreement by way of wager is void but not illegal [see Indian Contract Act 1872 ss 23 and 30] See O 8 r 2

9 [New R S C, O 19, r 21] Wherever the contents of any document are material, it shall be sufficient in any pleading to state the effect thereof as briefly as possible, without setting out the whole or any part thereof, unless the precise words of the document or any part thereof are material

Effect of document to be stated

Effect of document to be stated—This rule directs what should be the proper method of pleading where a material fact (r 2) is evidenced by a document (l) The intention expressed by the first part of the rule seems clearly to be that where a document is material it shall not be necessary to set it out at length but only to state the legal effect of it the object apparently being to prevent long pleadings (m). Thus it is sufficient if a plaintiff in a suit for the recovery of immovable property under a will states in his plaint the effect of the will under which he claims. He is not bound to set out the precise words of the will although a question has arisen as to the true construction of those words (n). At the same time it is not enough for a plaintiff to say that under and by virtue of a certain deed he is entitled to the property claimed by him. He must state the effect of the document on which he relies (o).

Precise words.—In an action of libel or slander it is always necessary to set out the exact words alleged to be libellous (p).

10 [New R S C O 19, r 22] Wherever it is material to allege malice, fraudulent intention, knowledge or other condition of the mind of any person, it shall be sufficient to allege the same as a fact without setting out the circumstances from which the same is to be inferred.

Malice knowledge &c

Condition of mind.—Rules 10 11 and 12 are no more than practical applications of the general principle laid down in r 2 above. Malice fraudulent intention knowledge etc constitute in some cases the material facts of a party's case they must therefore be alleged in the party's pleading. But the circumstances from which they are to be inferred need not be stated in the pleading.

Malice.—Malice is a necessary part of the cause of action in suits for slander of title and for malicious prosecution. It must therefore be alleged by the plaintiff in his plaint. Similarly where a defendant in an action of libel claims privilege alleging that the words complained of were used on a privileged occasion the plaintiff may allege and prove malice that is improper motive.

Knowledge.—In a suit by a servant against his master for injury caused by the dangerous condition of a building where he is employed the plaint must not only affirm the master's knowledge of the danger but must also negative the servant's knowledge of it (q). To support an action for damages for the bite of a dog the plaintiff must allege and prove that the dog had to the defendant's knowledge bitten or attempted to bite some person before it bit the plaintiff (r).

11 [New R S C O 19, r 23] Wherever it is material to allege notice to any person of any fact, matter or thing, it shall be sufficient to allege such notice as a fact, unless the form or the precise terms of such notice, or the circumstances from which such notice is to be inferred, are material.

Notice

Notice as part of cause of action.—Notice where it forms part of the cause of action must be pleaded as a fact e.g. notice of suit proposed to be brought against the Secretary of State for India [see s 50] or against a Railway Company (s) or against a Municipality notice of dishonour of a bill of exchange notice to a tenant to quit etc. It is not necessary to set out the notice verbatim in the plaint.

12 [New R S C, O 19, r 24] Whenever any contract or any relation between any persons is to be implied from a series of letters or conversations or otherwise from a number of circumstances, it shall be sufficient to allege such contract or relation as a fact, and to refer generally to such letters, conversations or circumstances without setting them out in detail. And if in such case the person so pleading desires to rely in the alternative upon more contracts or relations than one is to be implied from such circumstances, he may state the same in the alternative.

Implied contract or relation

Implied contract—A contract may be expressed in one document or it may have to be implied from a series of documents or conversations or from a number of other circumstances. Rule 9 applies in the former case the present rule in the latter case. Circumstances in the conduct of two parties may establish a binding contract between them although the agreement reduced into writing as a draft has not been formally executed by either (i). As regards contracts to be implied from a series of letters it is to be noted that where a Court has to find a contract in a correspondence and not in one particular note or memorandum formally signed the whole of that which has passed between the parties must be taken into consideration (u).

13 [New R S C, O 19, r 25] Neither party need in any pleading allege any matter of fact which the law presumes in his favour or as to which the burden of proof lies upon the other side, unless the same has first been specifically denied (e.g., consideration for a bill of exchange where the plaintiff sues only on the bill, and not for the consideration as a substantive ground of claim).

Presumption of law

Presumptions of law—A plaintiff need not in his plaint allege the consideration for which a bill of exchange was given to him when he sues only on the bill for it will be presumed in his favour that the bill was made for consideration (i). It will be for the defendant to plead that there was no consideration for the bill. But if the plaintiff sues on the consideration as a substantive ground of claim he must allege the consideration specifically.

14 [Ss 51, 115] Every pleading shall be signed by the party and his pleader (if any) provided that where a party pleading is, by reason of absence or for other good cause, unable to sign the pleading, it may be signed by any person duly authorized by him to sign the same or to sue or defend on his behalf.

Omission to sign plaint—The signing of plants is merely a matter of procedure (w) If a plant is not signed by the plaintiff or by a person duly authorized by him in that behalf and the defect is discovered at any time before judgment the Court may allow the plaintiff to amend the plant by signing the same If the defect is not discovered until the case comes on for hearing before an appellate Court the appellate Court may order the amendment to be made in that Court The appellate Court ought not to dismiss the suit or interfere with the decree of the lower Court merely because the plant has not been signed The omission to sign or verify a plant is not such a defect as could affect the merits of a case or the jurisdiction of the Court (x) see s 99

15 [Ss 51 52 115] (1) Save as otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, every pleading shall be verified at the foot by the party or by one of the parties pleading or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case

(2) The person verifying shall specify, by reference to the numbered paragraphs of the pleading, what he verifies of his own knowledge and what he verifies upon information received and believed to be true

(3) The verification shall be signed by the person making it and shall state the date on which and the place at which it was signed

Verification of plaint—The verification of a plaint is not evidence on which a suit can be decreed even if the defendant does not appear (y)

Omission to verify pleading—A pleading which is not verified in the manner required by this rule may be verified at a later stage of the suit even after the expiry of the limitation period The omission to verify a pleading is a mere irregularity within the meaning of s 99 of the Code (z) See notes to r 14 above

16 [New R S C O 19, r 27] The Court may, at any stage of the proceedings order to be struck out or amended any matter in any pleading which may be unnecessary or scandalous or which may tend to prejudice, embarrass or delay the fair trial of the suit

Amending your opponent's pleading—This rule deals with amendments which a party desires to be made in his opponent's pleading The next rule deals with amendments which a party desires to make in his own pleading

Striking out and amending pleadings—It seems to me said Bowen, L J in Knowles v Roberts (a) that the rule that the Court is not to dictate to parties how they should frame their case is one that ought always to be preserved sacred. But that rule is of course subject to this modification and limitation that the parties must not offend against the rules of pleading which have been laid down by the law and if a party introduces a pleading which is unnecessary and it tends to prejudice, embarrass and delay the trial of the action it then becomes a pleading which is beyond his right. It is a recognized principle that a defendant may claim ex debito justitiæ to have the plaintiff's case presented in an intelligible form so that he may not be embarrassed in meeting it and the Court ought to be strict even to severity in taking care to prevent pleadings from degenerating into the old oppressive pleadings of the Court of Chancery. (b)

Unnecessary—This rule has been reproduced verbatim from O 19 r 2, of the English Rules. According to the English practice the mere fact that a pleading contains matters which are unnecessary is no ground for striking out those matters (c). It only affects the costs of the pleading (d). An allegation in a pleading will not be struck out merely because it is unnecessary unless it is scandalous or tends to prejudice, embarrass or delay the fair trial of the action. Thus where in a suit against a Local Board the plaintiff alleged that a member of the Board had used his influence with the Board for his own private interest and that in consequence thereof the Board had declined to meet the just demands of the plaintiffs the allegations were ordered to be struck out (e). In such a case the allegations are not only unnecessary but they are scandalous. For the same reason unnecessary allegations of dishonest conduct made against the defendant will be struck out under this rule (f). In an action to enforce a compromise of a former action it is unnecessary and embarrassing to set out in the plaint the original disputes between the parties such allegations will therefore be struck out (g). Where a statement of claim contained immaterial facts and set out at great length documents which could not be material except as evidence by way of admission so that the defendant could not know what case he had to meet it was held that the whole statement of claim should be struck out as being unnecessarily prolix and embarrassing (h). In a action for slander it is unnecessary and embarrassing for the defendant to state in his defence that he did not say the words alleged in the plaint but that he said something else and that the something else which he said was true such statements will therefore be struck out (i).

Scandalous—Every Court has an inherent power quite independently of this rule to strike out scandalous matter in any record or proceedings. The Court has a duty to discharge towards the public and the authors in taking care that its records are kept free from irrelevant and scandalous matter (j). Scandal is calculated to do great and permanent injury to all persons whom it affects by making the record of the Court the means of perpetuating libellous and malignant slanders and the Court in aid of the public morals is bound to interfere to suppress such indecencies which may stain the reputation and wound the feelings of the parties and their relatives and friends (k). Thus where an application for bail to the High Court contained defamatory allegations against the trying Magistrate which were all irrelevant the High Court of Bombay refused to allow the application to be filed and ordered it to be returned (l). Similarly where a memorandum of appeal alleged partiality against the Judge whose decree was in question the High Court of Madras ordered the objectionable passages to be expunged (m) It must however be noted that nothing can be scandalous which is relevant (n) Thus matters in aggravation of damages are relevant they will not therefore be struck out though scandalous (o) Similarly allegations of dishonesty or fraud or conspiracy will not be struck out as scandalous if they are relevant to the facts in issue They will be struck out only if they are irrelevant (p) An application to strike out scandalous matter may be made by any person whether or not he is a party to the suit or personally affected by the scandalous matter (q)

Tend to prejudice embarrass or delay the fair trial of the suit — In considering the question whether a pleading tends to prejudice embarrass or delay the fair trial of the suit a liberal interpretation should be given to the words trial of the suit Hence not only a pleading which tends to prejudice or embarrass a party at the actual trial of a suit but a pleading which tends to prejudice or embarrass a party at any stage of the proceedings in the suit would be within this rule (r)

A pleading is embarrassing if it is so drawn that it is not clear what case the opposite party has to meet at the trial (s) But a pleading is not embarrassing merely because it is prolix (t) Nor is a pleading embarrassing merely because it contains allegations that are inconsistent or stated in the alternative (u) See notes to r 2 above Alternative and inconsistent allegations See also notes above Unnecessary

The power of the Court under this rule should be exercised with great care and caution Where a defendant set up a contemporaneous oral agreement the Court should not strike out his pleading on the ground that evidence of such agreement is inadmissible under s 92 of the Indian Evidence Act 1872 and that the pleading is therefore embarrassing Whether an oral agreement contemporaneous with a written document is admissible in evidence depends to some extent as to how the case is presented at the trial (v)

At any stage of the proceedings —The application under this rule should be made with reasonable promptitude and as a rule before the close of the pleadings If it is not so made the Court may in its discretion refuse to make the order though the rule expressly states that an order may be made at any stage of the proceeding The reason is that the power to make the order under this rule is discretionary (w) Leave to amend has been refused in second appeal (x)

Appeal —An order refusing to strike out pleadings as scandalous is not appealable as a judgment under the Letters Patent (y)

Practice —The Court may under this rule order the whole pleading to be struck out as was done in the unmentioned cases ( ) where the statement of claim consisted partly of unintelligible matters partly of irrelevant matters and the rest of scandalous matter or it may order the objectionable matter only to be struck out which appears to be the usual practice (a) Where the defect can be remedied by amendment the Court may give leave to amend (b) Where a pleading is not so specific as it ought to be the Court may direct the party to amend his pleading or give further particulars (c)

17 [New R S C O 28, r 1] The Court may at any stage of the proceedings allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and on such terms as may be just, and all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties

Amendment of pleadings

Different kinds of amendment—The occasion for amendment arises in five different ways, namely—

- 1 S 153 [amendment of clerical and arithmetical mistakes in judgments decrees and orders]
- 2 S 153 [amendment of proceedings in a suit by the Court whether moved thereto by the parties or not for the purpose of determining the real question or issue between the parties]
- 3 O 1 r 10 sub r (2) [striking out or adding parties]
- 4 O 6 r 16 [amending your opponent's pleading compulsory amendment]
- 5 O 6 r 17 [amending your own pleading voluntary amendment].

Amending your own pleading—The preceding rule deals with amendments which a party desires to be made in his opponent's pleading as where the pleading contains irrelevant and scandalous matter or where it may tend to prejudice embarrass or delay the fair trial of the suit. The present rule deals with amendments which a party desires to make in his own pleading

LEAVE TO AMEND WHEN GIVEN

As a general rule leave to amend will be granted so as to enable the real question in issue between the parties to be raised on the pleadings where the amendment will occasion no injury to the opposite party except such as can be sufficiently compensated for by costs or other terms to be imposed by the order (d) I have had much to do in Chambers said Bramwell L J with applications for leave to amend and I may perhaps be allowed to say that this humble branch of learning is very familiar to me My practice has always been to give leave to amend unless I have been satisfied that the party applying was acting mala fide or that by his blunder he had done some injury to his opponent which could not be compensated for by costs or otherwise (e) It does not matter that the original omission arose from negligence or carelessness However negligent or careless may have been the first omission and however late the proposed amendment the amendment should be allowed if it can be made without injustice to the other side There is no injustice if the other side can be compensated by costs (f) I have found in my experience said Bowen L J that there is one panacea which heals every sore in litigation and that is costs (g) It is immaterial whether the error sou-

LEAVE TO AMEND WHEN REFUSED

It follows from what has been stated above that leave to amend should be refused—

- (1) Where the amendment is not necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties as where it is—
  - (i) merely technical or
  - (ii) useless and of no substance
- (2) Where the plaintiff's suit would be wholly displaced by the proposed amendment
- (3) Where the effect of the amendment would be to take away from the defendant a legal right which has accrued to him by lapse of time
- (4) Where the amendment would introduce a totally different new and inconsistent case and the application is made at a late stage of the proceedings
- (5) Where the application for amendment is not made in good faith

1 Leave to amend will be refused where the amendment is not necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties —This happens where the amendment is merely (1) technical or (2) of no substance

Where the amendment is merely technical—If after the evidence for the plaintiff has been taken the defendant applies for an amendment merely for the purpose of enabling him to raise a purely technical objection to the plaintiff's right to sue the 17 application should be refused (p) B and C wrongfully remove A's furniture. A sues B for damages and recovers judgment against him [B and C being joint wrong doers the judgment against B according to English law precludes A from suing C for the same wrong] A afterwards sues C for damages for the same wrong. C does not plead the judgment against B in his defence but after the evidence for A has been taken applies for leave to amend his written statement by pleading that the judgment against B is a bar to the suit against him. The application must be refused (q) for the amendment is not necessary to bring out the real questions between the parties but purposes merely to enable C to avail himself of a technical rule of law (r).

Here the amendment is useless and of no substance.—As the object of the present rule to enable the real questions in dispute to be raised on the pleadings leave to amend should be refused to the plaintiff where the proposed amendment would not help him in substantiating his claim (s) and to the defendant where the proposed amendment would not help him in supporting his defence (t). Thus where A sued B and finding that the suit against B would fail applied to join C as a defendant the application was refused on the ground that even if the plaint were amended by adding C as a party the nature of the case precluded A from claiming relief even against C. In refusing leave to amend Vaughan Williams L.J. said: One good reason for our not doing so is that looking at the case that he [plaintiff] tells us he would wish to present that case if presented by amendment would in my judgment also fail so that there is nothing to be gained by amendment (u). Similarly where A sued B for a libel and B pleaded justification and B afterwards applied to amend his defence by adding a paragraph which virtually contained a plea in mitigation of damages but was no answer to the action the application was refused (v). See notes to r 2 above. Matters affecting damages.

2 Leave to amend will be refused if the plaintiff's suit would be wholly displaced by the proposed amendment.—In Steward v The North Metropolitan Tramways Co (w) the plaintiff sued a tramway company for damages caused by their negligence in allowing their tramway to be in a defective condition. By their defence the company denied negligence. It was no part of the defence that the company were not the proper parties to be sued. More than six months after the delivery of the defence the company applied for leave to amend the defence by adding an allegation that by a contract between the company and the local authority of the district the liability to maintain the roadway had been transferred to the local authority and that the company had ceased to be responsible for the roadway. At the date of the application the plaintiff's remedy against the local authority had become barred by limitation. If the allegation had been pleaded earlier the plaintiff could have maintained an action against the board. Under these circumstances the application was refused. It is clear from the above facts that if the amendment were allowed the plaintiff might fail against the company as they were not the proper defendants and if he brought an action against the local authority it would be too late. That would be an injury to the plaintiff such as could not be compensated for by any costs that the Court might order the company to pay to the plaintiff. The test as to whether the amendment should be allowed, said Pollock B. is whether or not the defendant can amend without placing the plaintiff in such a position that he cannot be recouped as it were by any allowance of costs or otherwise. Here the action would be wholly displaced by the proposed amendment and I think it ought not to be allowed.

3 Except in very special cases—Leave to amend will be refused where the effect of the proposed amendment is to take away from the defendant a legal right which has accrued to him by lapse of time (z)—The leading English case on the subject is Weldon v Veal (y) The facts of that case may be stated in the form of an illustration A sues B for damages for slander A afterwards applies for leave to amend the plaint by adding fresh claims in respect of assault and false imprisonment These claims are at the date of the application barred by limitation although they were not barred at the date of the suit The application should be refused for the effect of allowing it would be to take away from B the defence under the law of limitation and therefore unjustly to prejudice him We must act said Lord Esher M P on the settled rule of practice which is that amendments are not admissible when they prejudice the rights of the opposite party as existing at the date of such amendments Under very peculiar circumstances the Court might perhaps have power to allow such an amendment but certainly as a general rule it will not do so In Charan Das v Amir Khan ( ) their Lordships of the Privy Council said Though [the power of a Court to amend the plaint] should not as a rule be exercised where its effect is to take away from a defendant a legal right which has accrued to him by lapse of time yet there are cases where such considerations are outweighed by the special circumstances of a case Charan Dass case was such an exceptional case and their Lordships having regard to special circumstances upheld an amendment of the plaint allowed by the Judicial Commissioner of the North West Frontier Province in second appeal In that case the plaintiffs sued for a declaration of their right of pre-emption over certain land but omitted to ask for consequential relief namely possession as required by s 42 of the Specific Relief Act 1877 The trial Judge and the first appellate Court refused to allow the plaint to be amended by claiming possession on pre-emption since the time had expired for bringing a suit to enforce that right Upon a second appeal the Court allowed the amendment to be made and this was confirmed by the Privy Council There was no ground for suspecting that the plaintiffs had not acted in good faith all that happened was that the plaintiffs through some blundering attempted to assert rights that they undoubtedly possessed under the statute in a form which the statute did not permit The case of Kisandas v Rachappa (a) decided by the High Court of Bombay is another instance in which such an amendment was allowed on the ground that the circumstances of the case were so peculiar that it should properly be excepted from the general rule The facts of the case may be stated in the form of an illustration A alleging that he had brought in Rs 4 000 as capital under a partnership agreement between him and B sues B for dissolution of partnership and for accounts It is clear from the proceedings before the Court of first instance that though the suit was in form one for dissolution and accounts A intended from the first to sue only for the recovery of his money and B had actually pleaded to the money claim on which an issue had been framed and evidence taken The lower Court finds as a fact that the sum was due but dismisses A's suit on the technical ground that the agreement set up by A did not constitute a partnership between A and B A appeals from the decree and applies for the first time in appeal for leave to amend the plaint by adding a prayer for the recovery of Rs 4 000 At this date the claim for 17 money is barred by limitation. The amendment must however be allowed for the point of limitation could not have been taken if the pleading had not been defective. No fresh claim was set up as in Weldon v Acal and B knew all along what A's claim was, though the suit was wrongly framed. Similarly where the plaintiff sued in the first instance for possession of the books of accounts of his shop from the defendants who he alleged were his servants and stated in the plaint that he would bring a separate suit for the money due by them but subsequently applied for leave to amend the plaint by adding a further relief namely recovery of money it was held that the amendment should be allowed even though the money claim was barred by limitation between the date of the plaint and the date of the application for amendment (b).

4 Leave to amend will be refused where the amendment would introduce a totally different new and inconsistent case—In Ma Shwe Mya v Mounng Mo Hnaung (c) their Lordships of the Privy Council said. All rules of Court are nothing but provisions intended to secure the proper administration of justice and it is therefore essential that they should be made to serve and be subordinate to that purpose so that full powers of amendment must be enjoyed and should always be liberally exercised but none the less no power has yet been given to enable one distinct cause of action to be substituted for another nor to change by means of amendment the subject matter of the suit. This proposition follows directly from r 17. The object of r 17 is to allow an amendment for the purpose of determining the real questions in dispute between the parties. That being the purpose for which an amendment is allowed, no amendment should be allowed which would introduce a totally new and different case (d). Thus where a suit is brought against the members of a joint Hindu family for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of family property alleged to have been made by the karta or for damages namely the earnest money with interest and the karta dies pending the suit and the suit title is amended by adding as his heirs his sons and grandsons who are already parties it is not permissible by amendment to change the suit into one for money had and received or a one to recover a debt (e). The result of the English cases is thus summed up in Bullen and Leake's Precedents of Pleadings (f).

Leave to amend may be refused where at the trial or hearing the party seeks to alter the whole nature of his case by an unexpected amendment which may require further evidence to be adduced by his opponent.

The above proposition may be split into two parts —

- A Leave to amend a plaint should not be granted if the amendment would convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character.
- B Leave to amend a written statement should not be granted, if the amendment would convert the defence into another of a different and inconsistent character.

We shall deal with these propositions in order.

held under the corresponding English rule that no amendment should be allowed if it would introduce an entirely different case from that which the defendant came to meet (g) or to put it in another form if it would change one action into another of a substantially different character (h) Section 53 of the Code of 1882 which dealt with amendment of plaints expressly provided that a plaint shall not be amended so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character That section has been omitted in this Code and the present rule (which is a reproduction of O 28 r 1 of the English Rules) now takes its place But the decisions under the old section on the point now under consideration are still good law and should be considered

It must be observed at the outset that a plaintiff must in general be limited to the case which he puts forward in his plaint There are however cases in which by some mistake or misapprehension the plaintiff has failed to state his case correctly and properly in the plaint In such cases the Court may allow the plaint to be amended (i) for if the amendment is refused the plaintiff may have to bring another suit and the object of the rule allowing amendment of plaints is to avoid multiplicity of suits (j) But the Court cannot allow an amendment if the suit is premature (k) and ought not to allow an amendment if it would convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character We cannot countenance the notion said Straight J that a plaintiff coming into Court with one case and hopelessly failing to prove it should be permitted to succeed upon another and that directly in antagonism with his primary allegation (l) The law prohibits every amendment that would change the fundamental character of the suit (m) It is not however to be supposed that if the fundamental character of the suit is not altered a plaintiff is entitled as of right to amend the plaint As stated by the High Court of Bombay the power to get a plaint amended is subject to the discretion of the judge and is not claimable as a right of the sutor in all circumstances (n)

Rules — The general rule is that any amendment allowed must be such as is either raised in the pleadings or is consistent with the case as originally laid and that the state of facts and the equities and ground of relief originally alleged and pleaded by the plaintiff should not be departed from This is the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Eshen Chunder Singh v Shama Churn Bhutto (o) and this rule has been followed in numerous decisions of our Courts (p)

From the general rule stated above we deduce the following three rules each of which is borne out by the cases cited under it —

Rule I — Where a plaintiff bases his claim upon a specific legal relation alleged to exist between him and the defendant he may not be allowed to amend the plaint so as to base it on a different legal relation.

Note — Even if the legal relation between the plaintiff and the defendant remains unchanged the plaint will not be allowed to be amended if it completely alters the cause of action (q) (7)]

Rule II — Where a plaintiff bases his claim on a specific title he may not be allowed to amend the plaint so as to base it on a different title But this is subject to Rule I and when the title by which the plaintiff claims remains unaltered the plaint will not be allowed to be amended if it completely alters the cause of action

- 17 Rule III—When one kind of fraud is charged another kind of fraud cannot upon failure of proof be substituted for it

Illustrations of Rule I

1 A alleging that B hired cargo boats from him and that a balance of Rs 3 000 is due to him on that account sues B for the amount. It is proved at the hearing that B did not himself hire the boats but that he was merely A's agent to let the boats on hire. A then applies to amend his plaint by claiming an account from B on the footing that B was A's agent. The amendment should not be allowed because in the one case the legal relation between A and B is that of letter and hire and in the other that of Principal and agent. Shibkrishna v Abdool (1880) 5 Cal 602

2 A sues B for the rent of a house alleged to have been let by A to B. B denies the lease and contends that he is the owner of the house. A will not be allowed to amend the plaint by converting the suit into one for a declaration of ownership. Bai Shri Mayrayba v Maganlal (1890) 19 Bom 303

3 A sues B for damages for wrongful occupation of his land and for injury done to his land. After the issues are framed A applies to amend the plaint by claiming from B rent for the land on the basis of a subsisting tenancy. The amendment should not be allowed because it will convert a claim based on trespass into a claim on the basis of a subsisting lease. Narayan v Hari (1889) 13 Bom 664. Jhars Singh v Pirbhai (1917) 3 Pat L J 60. 38 I C 191 (q). See ill. (u) below.

4 A suit for possession on the footing of a subsisting lease cannot be converted at a late stage of the proceedings into a suit for ejectment. Leuby v Sharp (1818) 8 C D 39 40. Lard v Briggs (1880) 16 C D 440

5 A suit for rent will not be allowed to be converted at the hearing into a suit for use and occupation. A sues B to recover Rs 1 000 alleged to be the rent due under a lease executed by B. The Court finds that B was in occupation of the premises during the period for which the rent is claimed but that the alleged lease was not executed by B. At this stage A applies to amend his plaint by alleging that though the lease was not executed by B he is entitled to recover the amount for use and occupation of the premises. The amendment will not be allowed. (r)

6 A suit for possession will not be allowed to be converted into a suit for redemption. In the former case the plaintiff sues as owner of the land in the latter as mortgagor. Laxmishankar v Hanjabbai (1900) 44 Bom 310. 37 I C 426

7 A who is P's agent to manage certain property belonging to P appoints S to act as a sub agent for P and gives him Rs 1 000 belonging to P for the payment of Government revenue and other purposes. S fails to account for the money. P sues A to recover the amount paid by A to S claiming the same on the ground that S was appointed sub agent without P's authority. It is found at the hearing that S was appointed sub agent with P's authority. P will not be allowed to amend the plaint so as to base his claim on the ground that A had not exercised ordinary prudence in selecting S as a sub agent for P. Hamilton v Land Mortgage Bank (1883) 5 All 406. [This is an illustration of the proposition that rule 11 is subject to Rule 1. If the amendment were allowed the legal relation between the plaintiff and the defendant which is that of principal and agent would no doubt remain unchanged but the cause of action would be completely changed.]

Illustrations of Rule II

1 A alleging that B was the adopted son of C and that he (A) is the heir of B sues D to recover certain property forming part of the estate of B. The Court finds that the adoption of B was not valid. A then contends for the first time in appeal to the Privy Council that even if the adoption was not valid he is entitled to recover the property as the heir of C. This is a totally new case and A cannot be permitted in appeal to set up an entirely new case. Copce Lal v Chundralee (1872) 10 W. P. 12 I. A. Sup. Vol. 131.

2 A obtains a decree against X and after the death of the latter attaches certain immovable property in execution of the decree. B and C sons of X sue A for a declaration that the property is joint family property and it is not liable to be attached and sold in execution of the decree against the father on the ground that the debts contracted by their father were for immoral purposes. It is proved that the debts were not incurred for immoral purposes. Thereupon B and C apply to amend the plaint by alleging that they had separated from their father before the date of the decree and that they were not therefore liable to pay the amount of the decree. The amendment cannot be allowed because the plaintiff's claim as originally laid was on the footing that there was no partition between them and their father. Varayanrai v Jathariahu (1888) 1 L. Bom. 431.

3 A a Hindu, claiming as the heir of his uncle sues the executors of his uncle's widow for possession of property left by the widow alleging that the same belonged to the estate of his uncle and that the widow had no power to dispose of it by will. The Court holds that the widow had power to will away the property. A will not be allowed to amend the plaint by adding that even if the widow had the power to dispose of the property by her will he was entitled to the residue as his uncle's heir as the same was left to charitable objects of an unspecified and general character and could not therefore be legally applied to charity. Dinodar v Purmanandas (1883) 7 Bom. 150. [This is an illustration of Rule 11 being subject to Rule 1. If the amendment were allowed the title by which the plaintiff claims namely as his uncle's heir would no doubt remain unchanged but the cause of action would be completely altered.]

4 A suit founded on a hritima adoption cannot be allowed to be converted into one based on a sapathitta adoption. Maung Ba Than v Ma Than Myin (1925) 3 Rang. 483 92 I. C. 253 (5) A. P. 49.

Illustration of Rule III

A the official assignee of the estate of a deceased insolvent sues B to recover Rs. 1,00,000 alleged in the plaint to be unlawfully withheld from the estate in consequence of a payment fraudulently concealed from A a predecessor in office. It is proved that A a predecessor was aware of the payment. A applies to amend the plaint by alleging that though his predecessor consented to the payment such consent was illegal as being a fraud though of a different kind upon the Court. The amendment cannot be allowed because to allege fraud of one kind and to substitute fraud of another kind is to convert the suit into one of an inconsistent character. Abdul Hossain v Turner (1887) 11 Bom. 620 14 I. A. 111. See Notes to O. G. r. 4. Fraud and coercion p. 483 above.

B Leave to amend a written statement should not be granted if the amendment would convert the defence into another of a different and inconsistent character — As in the case of a plaint so in the case of a written statement the Court will not allow an amendment that would involve a complete change of front in the defence. (s)

A agrees to grant a lease of a brickfield to F. No lease is executed but B enters into possession under the agreement. B then sues A for specific performance of the agreement alleging that A though frequently asked to do so had neglected and refused

17 to grant the lease A denies that he was asked to grant the lease and expresses his readiness to execute the lease A also counter claims for Rs. 1500 by way of rent After the suit is set down for trial A applies for leave to amend his defence and counter claim and to join therewith a claim for possession of the land. The application must be refused. To allow A to amend would be to allow him to present a totally distinct new and inconsistent case Clark v Wray (1886) 31 C D 68

5 Leave to amend will be refused where the application for amendment is not made in good faith—Leave to amend will not be given if the party applying is acting mala fide (i) as where there is no substantial ground for the case proposed to be set up by the amendment (ii) Want of bona fides may be inferred from a great delay in making the application (i)

Amendment of plaint by adding new reliefs—The amendment of a plaint by adding a new prayer may or may not convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character. If the amendment converts the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character it will not be allowed. If the amendment does not convert the suit into another of a different and inconsistent character it may or may not be allowed at the discretion of the Court. In the exercise of this discretion the Court will not allow an amendment if the application for amendment is made at such a late stage of the proceedings that if allowed it would necessitate practically trying the case de novo (w) otherwise the amendment may be allowed (x) Thus a mortgagee suing for sale of the mortgaged property may be allowed to amend the plaint by asking merely for a simple money decree against the mortgagor. In such a case the character of the suit is not fundamentally altered, nor could the defendant be possibly taken by surprise (y) Similarly a purchaser suing for specific performance may be allowed to amend his plaint by asking in the alternative for a refund of the earnest money (z) Where a plaintiff has framed his suit bona fide believing that consequential relief is not open to him and that he is entitled to a declaration the plaint may be allowed to be amended even in appeal by adding a prayer for possession (a) But leave will be refused if the frame of the plaint was a device to avoid payment of Court Fee (b) See also note above. Leave to amend will be refused where the effect of the proposed amendment is to take away from the defendant

Amendment by adding a plea of fraud—It is the universal practice except in the most exceptional circumstances not to allow an amendment for the purpose of adding a plea of fraud where fraud has not been pleaded in the first instance (c). Where facts supporting the charge of fraud were disclosed in the cross examination of the defendant leave was given to amend by adding a plea of fraud (d) Similarly where the plaintiff sued on a mortgage and the defendant in his written statement alleged that he was a minor at the date of the mortgage leave was given to the plaintiff to amend the plaint by raising an alternative case that the loan was obtained by the defendant by the fraudulent representation that he had attained majority at the time (e) See Notes to O G r 4 Fraud and coercion

Suit for specific performance and compensation in addition or in substitution.—The Court even at the trial has power to allow the necessary amendment but that power must be exercised most carefully and jealously and with due regard to the position of both the plaintiff and the defendant. An amendment should not be allowed when the suit has been pending as one for specific performance for a long period during which the defendant has been prevented by sec 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act 1877 from dealing with the property. An amendment which leaves standing an averment that the plaintiff is ready and willing to perform the contract and the claim to specific performance does not make the plaint appropriate to a suit for damages for its breach (f)

AT ANY STAGE OF THE PROCEEDINGS

Leave to amend may be granted at any stage of the proceedings. It may be granted on appeal [s 107 sub s (2)] (g) or even on second appeal (s 108). In the under mentioned case (h) the plaintiff was allowed to amend his plaint in appeal before the Privy Council. In a later case where the suit was brought upon a mortgage of the property of a joint Hindu family and the suit was dismissed on appeal to the High Court on the ground that necessity was not proved the Privy Council refused to entertain a new contention raised before them for the first time that the plaintiff was at least entitled to a decree against the mortgagor manager upon his personal consent on the ground that it involved a radical amendment of the plaint Gajadhar v Ambika Prasad (1925) 47 ALL 459 P C 87 I C 292 (2) A PC 169. The appellate Court may allow an amendment whether leave to amend was asked for in the Court below or not. It may also allow an amendment even if the Court below offered leave to amend but the offer was declined (i).

Mere delay is not a ground for refusing an amendment. As a general rule however late the amendment is sought to be made it should be allowed except in the five cases mentioned above (j). Before the hearing there is as a rule little difficulty in ordinary cases in a party obtaining leave to amend on payment of the costs of and occasioned by the amendment and the application (k). Leave to amend may also be given at the hearing on proper terms as to the costs and the postponement of the hearing if necessary except again in the five cases mentioned above. Thus leave to amend has been granted at the trial where there was a defect in the parties and it became necessary to amend the proceedings in the suit (l). It would also be granted where both parties knew what the case was and there was no surprise (m). In a recent Rangoon case A sued B on a promissory note for Rs 175. B denied execution of the note but admitted receipt of Rs 100 only. No alternative cause of action on the original consideration was pleaded. A failed to prove execution of the note. It was held that the plaint could be amended at any stage of the proceedings by the addition of the alternative plea and a decree passed for the plaintiff for the Rs 100 after the plaint was amended (n).

Revision.—See notes to s 115. Interlocutory orders.

Appeal.—No appeal lies under cl 15 of the Letters Patent from an order amending the title of a plaint by omitting the word Summary before the word Suit and transferring the case to the Short Causes List (o).

ORDER VII

Plaint

Particulars to be contained in plaint 1 [S 50 para 1] The plaint shall contain the following particulars —

- (a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought,
- (b) the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff,
- (c) the name, description and place of residence of the defendant, so far as they can be ascertained,
- (d) where the plaintiff or the defendant is a minor or a person of unsound mind, a statement to that effect,
- (e) the facts constituting the cause of action and when it arose,
- (f) the facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction,
- (g) the relief which the plaintiff claims,
- (h) where the plaintiff has allowed a set off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished, and
- (i) a statement of the value of the subject matter of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction and of Court fees, so far as the case admits

Facts constituting the cause of action — As to the meaning of cause of action, see notes to s 20 Cause of action See also notes to O 6 r 2

Facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction — See ss. 16 19 and 20 and cl 12 of the Charter set forth in Appendix II

Relief which the plaintiff claims — See r 7 below and notes thereto

Relinquished a portion of his claim —See O 2 r 2 sub r (2)

Statement of value —See notes to s 15 Where the subject matter of a suit does not admit of being satisfactorily valued

2 [S 50 paras 2, 3] Where the plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint shall state the precise amount claimed

In money suits

But where the plaintiff sues for mesne profits, or for an amount which will be found due to him on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, the plaint shall state approximately the amount sued for

Suit for mesne profits or accounts —See notes to s 6 Pecuniary jurisdiction in passing decrees

3 [New] Where the subject matter of the suit is immovable property, the plaint shall contain a description of the property sufficient to identify it, and, in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, the plaint shall specify such boundaries or numbers

Where the subject matter of the suit is immovable property

4 [S 50, para 4] Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character the plaint shall show not only that he has an actual existing interest in the subject matter, but that he has taken the steps (if any) necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it

When plaintiff sues as representative

Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character —Where a person dies leaving a will the executor named in the will may obtain probate of the will Where a person dies intestate his heirs may apply for letters of administration The person to whom letters of administration are granted is called administrator The executor or administrator as the case may be of a deceased person is his legal representative for all purposes and all the property of the deceased vests in him as such A suit by a person as executor or administrator of a deceased person is a suit by him in a representative character There are some cases in which the law requires probate or letters of administration as the case may be to entitle a person suing in a representative character to a decree in respect of the estate of the deceased In a large number of cases however it is not necessary to obtain probate or letters of administration to entitle a plaintiff suing in a representative character to a decree in respect of the estate of the deceased This will appear from the following statement of the law on the subject —

1 Europeans Parsis Jews and Armenians governed by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act 39 of 1850 —In this class of cases no right as executor or legatee can be established in any Court unless probate has been obtained and no right to any part of the property of a person who has died intestate can be established in any Court unless letters of administration have first been granted by a Court of competent jurisdiction (p) See Indian Succession Act 1925 ss 212 and 213

2 Hindu Wills—Probate is necessary in the case of Hindu wills where such wills are of the class specified in s 57 (1) of the Indian Succession Act 1925 These are wills made by Hindus within the territories which on 1st September 1870 were subject to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal or within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of Madras and Bombay and wills made outside those territories and limits so far as relates to immovable property situate within those territories or limits No probate is necessary in the case of other wills See Indian Succession Act 1925 s 213 (2)

No letters of administration are necessary where a Hindu dies intestate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 212 (2) But if a suit is brought to recover a debt due to the estate of a deceased Hindu no decree can be passed against the debtor except on production of a probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 214

3 Mahomedans—Neither a probate nor letters of administration are necessary in the case of Mahomedans see Indian Succession Act 1925 ss 212 213 But if a suit is brought to recover a debt due to the estate of a deceased Mahomedan no decree can be passed against the debtor except on production of a probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 214

4 Indian Christians—Up to the year 1901 Indian Christians were governed by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act 1865 Hence it was necessary where the deceased left a will that the executor should obtain probate before he could establish any right as such to the property of the deceased [Indian Succession Act 1865 s 187], and if the deceased died intestate it was necessary to obtain letters of administration before any right could be established to any part of the property of the deceased in a Court of law [Indian Succession Act 1865 s 190] In 1901 an Act was passed called the Native Christian Administration of Estates Act (VII of 1901) declaring inter alia that the provisions of section 190 of the Succession Act 1865 shall not apply to any part of the property of an Indian Christian who has died intestate with the result that in case of intestacy letters of administration were no longer necessary Those Acts have now been repealed by the Indian Succession Act 1925 but provisions similar to those above are reproduced in ss 212 and 213 Under s 213 a probate is necessary where the deceased has left a will Under s 212 no letters of administration are necessary where the deceased has died intestate But if a suit is brought to recover a debt due to the estate of a deceased Indian Christian, no decree can be passed against the debtor except on production of a probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate see Indian Succession Act 1925 s 214

Has taken the steps—In those cases where a probate is necessary and those are cases specified in s 213 of the Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 it has been held by the Privy Council that the grant of probate is not a condition precedent to the institution of the suit and that the executor or legatee may institute the suit without obtaining a probate but that he will not be entitled to a decree until he obtains a probate (g)

If the deceased has left no will and the case is one governed by s 212 of the Indian Succession Act 1925 so that letters of administration are necessary to establish a right to the property of the deceased in a Court of law the question arises whether it is necessary that letters of administration to the estate of the deceased should be obtained before the institution of the suit or whether it is sufficient if they are obtained before the decree is passed. The High Court of Bombay has held that if letters of administration are not obtained before the institution of the suit and the plaintiff does not show that the plaintiff has obtained letters of administration the plaintiff should be rejected on presentation but if the plaintiff is not rejected and the hearing has been allowed to proceed there is nothing to prevent the Court from passing a decree for the plaintiff if letters of administration are obtained before the decree (r). The English law on the subject may thus be stated in the language of the Judicial Committee in Meyappa v Subramanian (s). An administrator derives title solely under his grant and cannot therefore institute an action as administrator before he gets his grant. The law on the point is well settled see Comyn's Digest Administration B 9 and 10 Thompson v Reynolds (t) Woolley v Clark (u).

Title of suit—See Appendix A (2) Description of Parties in Particular Cases the last two forms See also r 9 (2) below

5 [s 50, para 5] The plaintiff shall show that the defendant is or claims to be interested in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand

Defendants interest and liability to be shown

6 [s 50 para 6] Where the suit is instituted after the expiration of the period prescribed by the law of limitation, the plaintiff shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed

Grounds of exemption from limitation law

Grounds of exemption from limitation law—These grounds are set forth in section 12 to 20 of the Limitation Act 1908. If no ground of exemption is shown in the plaintiff and the suit appears from the statement in the plaintiff to be barred by limitation, the plaintiff shall be rejected [see r 11 cl (d) below]. But a plaintiff should not be rejected merely because the exemption is not claimed specifically. All that the rule requires is that the plaintiff shall show the ground of exemption (v). If a plaintiff does not show any ground of exemption the Court of first instance should allow the plaintiff to be amended save under very exceptional circumstances (w). But a plaintiff should not be allowed to rely upon a ground of exemption from the law of limitation for the first time in appeal (x). See notes to O 41 r 2 below.

The High Court of Bombay has held that when a plaintiff does satisfy the requirements of this rule by stating what is in his opinion the ground upon which he intends to get over the bar of limitation he ought not to be precluded from taking another and not inconsistent ground should he be later advised that the latter is the true ground (y).

According to the Calcutta ( ) and Lahore (a) rulings a plaintiff who has stated one ground of exemption may be allowed to take another and inconsistent ground

7 [New R S C, O 20, r 6] Every plaint shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims either simply or in the alternative, and it shall not be necessary to ask for general or other relief which may always be given as the Court may think just to the same extent as if it had been asked for. And the same rule shall apply to any relief claimed by the defendant in his written statement

Relief to be specifically stated

Relief—Every plaint must state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims whether it be damages or specific performance or an injunction or a declaration or an account or the appointment of a receiver or possession of land or relief of any other kind. A plaintiff who omits (except with the leave of the Court to sue for all the reliefs to which he may be entitled in respect of the same cause of action will not afterwards be allowed to sue for any relief so omitted [O 2 r 2 sub r (3)] But it is not necessary to ask for general or other relief

Where a relief is claimed upon a specific ground the Court may grant it upon a ground different from that on which it is claimed in the plaint if the ground is disclosed by the allegations in the plaint and the evidence in the case (b). Thus in a case in which a plaintiff claimed an easement by prescription and it was found that he was not entitled to the easement by prescription their Lordships of the Privy Council dealing with the case as a special appeal decreed the claim on the presumption of title arising from a grant (c)

Where a plaint asks for more than what the plaintiff is entitled to the Court may give him only as much relief as he is entitled to but the suit must not be dismissed (d). Where a plaint asks for less than what the plaintiff must be entitled to the Court cannot give him relief in excess of the plaint unless the plaint is amended before judgment. Thus if a suit is brought upon a balance of accounts or for mesne profits and the plaintiff instead of claiming whatever may be found due on the taking of accounts and stating an approximate amount [O 7 r 2] states a specific sum as the amount claimed the Court cannot without an amendment of the plaint [O 6 r 17] pass a decree for more than what is claimed (e)

General or other relief—Under the system of pleadings hitherto followed in India it was usual to add in the plaint a prayer for general relief called general prayer which ran thus: The plaintiff claims such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require. Under the present rule it is no longer necessary specifically to ask for such relief. Such relief may now always be given to the same extent as if it had been asked for provided it is not inconsistent with that specifically claimed and with the case raised by the pleading (f). In order however to entitle a plaintiff to a relief under the claim for general relief it is necessary that the ground for such relief should be disclosed by the allegations in the plaint (g). A plaintiff cannot be entitled to relief upon facts or documents not stated or referred to by him in his pleadings (h). Thus where a plaintiff sues for a declaration of title to certain property under a deed of sale he cannot be allowed to succeed on the basis of title by adverse possession (i).

With regard to the nature of the general or other relief which a plaintiff may have the rule is that if the plaint contains allegations offering issues on facts that are material the plaintiff is entitled to the relief which those facts will sustain but he cannot desert the specific relief claimed and under the claim for general relief ask for specific relief of another description unless the facts and circumstances alleged on the pleadings will consistently with the rules of the Court maintain that relief (j).

Where a suit is brought by a reversioner against a Hindu widow (1) for an injunction restraining her from waste (2) for appointment of a receiver and (3) for further relief the plaintiff if he fails in the substantial heads of his claim is not entitled under cover of a request for further relief to obtain a declaration that he is the next reversionary heir (l).

In a suit by a mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged property the mortgagee may relinquish his claim for sale and ask for a simple money decree though such relief is not specifically claimed. This he may do under the claim for general relief. The Court has the power to grant that relief provided the mortgage contains a personal covenant to pay the mortgage debt (m). The Court may also under this rule award interest on a balance of account from the date of the institution of the suit although interest is not specifically asked for in the plaint (n). But the Court has no power under a claim for general relief to grant to a pro forma plaintiff the relief claimed by the active plaintiff if it turns out that the pro forma plaintiff and not the active plaintiff is entitled to the relief claimed. This may be explained by an illustration. P sells his interest in certain property in the possession of C to A. A and B then sue C to recover possession of the property. B makes no claim and he is joined merely as a formal party to the suit. The Court finds the sale to A void as champertous (Contract Act s. 23). On these facts no decree can be passed in favour of A for possession. Nor should any decree be passed in favour of B awarding possession of the property to him under the claim for general relief though the Court find that C is in wrongful possession of the property and that the person really entitled to the property is B. B must bring a separate suit against C to recover possession (n).

Alternative relief—A plaintiff may rely upon several different rights alternatively although they may be inconsistent (o) provided that his pleading is not thereby rendered embarrassing. A pleading is not embarrassing within the meaning of Order 16 because it contains inconsistent sets of facts (p). Thus a plaintiff may in the same suit claim to have a partnership agreement with the defendant cancelled on the ground that he was induced to enter into it by the fraud of the defendant or in the alternative for a dissolution of partnership and accounts (q). Similarly a plaintiff may claim over the same plot of land a right of ownership or in the alternative a right of easement (r) A plaintiff may in a suit for pre-emption base his claim in the alternative on contract or on custom or on Mahomedan law (s) He may also in such a suit set up an alternative claim as owner (t)

In Mahomed Balseh v Hosseini Bibi (u) the Judicial Committee observed that where a plaintiff sues alleging that a deed purporting to be executed by herself is a forgery the Court ought not to admit the inconsistency issue whether it was executed under undue influence These observations were explained away in an Allahabad case where it was held that a plaintiff may sue for the cancellation of a bond on the ground that it was a forgery or in the alternative that it was void for want of consideration (v) But quære whether the allegations of forgery and want of consideration are not inconsistent and embarrassing The High Court of Calcutta has held that a plaintiff may sue to set aside a deed of gift on the ground that she executed it under a fraudulent representation that it was a power of attorney or in the alternative on the ground that it was obtained by undue influence (w)

A plaintiff in a suit for specific performance may claim in the alternative that if the contract cannot be enforced it should be rescinded and delivered up for cancellation (x) A purchaser in a suit for specific performance may claim in the alternative a return of the earnest money and he may at the hearing give up his prayer for specific performance and ask for a return of the earnest money (y) In England in a case under the old practice it was held that a suit to set aside a transaction for fraud or in the alternative for specific performance of a compromise could not be sustained (z) It seems probable that the same conclusion would still be arrived at on the ground that the claims were inconsistent and embarrassing (a)

Relief not founded on pleadings—See notes under the same head to O 14 r 1

Events happening after institution of suit—Ordinarily the decree in a suit should accord with the rights of the parties as they stand at the date of its institution But where it is shown that the original relief claimed has by reason of subsequent change of circumstances become inappropriate or that it is necessary to have the decision of the Court on the altered circumstances in order to shorten litigation or to do complete justice between the parties it is incumbent upon a Court of justice to take notice of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and to mould its decree according to the circumstances as they stand at the time the decree is made (b) Leave to amend may be granted under O 6 r 17 for this purpose (c)

8 [New R S C O 20 r 7] Where the plaintiff seeks relief in respect of several distinct claims or causes of action founded upon separate and distinct grounds they shall be stated as far as may be separately and distinctly to the proper Court (e) A suit against two defendants cognizable by a Civil Court as against the first and by a Revenue Court as against the second was filed in a Civil Court. The Patna High Court directed the plaint to be returned for presentation to the Revenue Court and that a copy of it should be retained on the record for trial of the suit as against the second defendant (f)

At any stage of the suit. —These words are new. They have been added to give effect to the undermentioned decision (g) in which it was held that a plaint may be returned to be presented to the proper Court at any stage of the suit even after the trial has begun and concluded. But a plaint should not be returned unless the Court finds that it has no jurisdiction (h)

Chartered High Courts —This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (1)]

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court whether the order is made by the Court of first instance [O 43 r 1 cl (a)] or by the Court of first appeal in the exercise of powers conferred upon it by s 107 (j). But no second appeal lies from the order of the first appellate Court (k) [see s 104 (2)]

A files his plaint in a District Munsif's Court. The Munsif returns the plaint for presentation to the proper Court holding that the suit is beyond his pecuniary jurisdiction. On the plaint being presented to a Subordinate Judge's Court it is again returned by that Court on the ground that the Munsif's Court had jurisdiction. Is A entitled to appeal to the District Court from the order of the District Munsif having regard to the fact that he in obedience to that order filed the plaint in the Subordinate Judge's Court? No according to a Calcutta decision the reason given being that by electing to file the plaint in the Subordinate Judge's Court he forfeited his right of appeal (l). Yes according to the Madras High Court (m)

The merits of an order refusing leave under s 20 cl (b) cannot be attacked in an appeal from an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court (n)

- (c) where the relief claimed is properly valued, but the plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, and the plaintiff on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp paper within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so ,
- (d) where the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any law

Change of law—Clause (a) is new. See notes below. Clause (a)

Chartered High Courts—Clauses (b) and (c) of this rule do not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction. See O 49 r 3(1).

Duty of Court to examine plaint—It is the duty of the Court under O 7 to examine a plaint before issuing summonses and to ascertain whether any cause of action has been pleaded and whether any relief has been claimed against the defendants and to determine whether the plaint should be rejected or returned for amendment (1)

Shall be rejected —This rule may be applied at any stage of a suit. Therefore a plant may be rejected under this rule even after it has been numbered and registered as a suit (p)

The provision contained in this rule that the plaint shall be rejected in the four cases mentioned in the rule is mandatory. In a case therefore where the relief claimed was properly valued but the plaint was written upon paper insufficiently stamped and the plaintiff on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp paper failed to do so it was held that the plaintiff should not be allowed to amend the plaint by omitting the prayer in respect of which the extra court fee was directed to be paid and that the plaint should be rejected (a).

Rejection of plaint in part—This rule does not justify the rejection of any particular portion of a plaint (r)

Clause (a) where plaintiff does not disclose cause of action — Under the Code of 1887, § 33 it was not obligatory upon the Court to reject a plaintiff if it did not disclose cause of action. Under the present rule the Court is bound to reject a plaintiff if it does not disclose a cause of action. As to the meaning of "cause of action" see notes to § 20 Cause of Action on p. 103 above.

Clause (b) Where the relief claimed is undervalued—Even if the correct valuation would render the Court incompetent to entertain the suit the Court should in the first instance require the plaintiff to pay the proper court fee. If the plaintiff does not pay the additional court fee the Court should not proceed under O 7 r 10 but it should reject the plaint. If the plaintiff pays the requisite court fee and the Court finds that the value of the subject matter exceeds its jurisdiction it should return the plaint under O 7 r 10 (a).

- [illegible]

11 Clause (c) Where a plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped—The following points are to be noted in connection with this clause—

1 Where a plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, the Court is bound to give the plaintiff time to make good the deficiency This follows from the terms of cl (c) itself (t)

2 If the plaintiff fails to supply the requisite stamp paper within the period fixed by the Court the plaint may be rejected under this rule even after it has been numbered and registered as a suit The reason is that the power to reject a plaint under this rule is not exhausted when the plaint has been admitted and registered (u) See notes above Shall be rejected

3 A plaint is presented on the last day allowed by the law of limitation. It is written upon paper insufficiently stamped The plaintiff is ordered to supply the requisite stamp paper within a week The order is complied with on the fourth day after the date of presentation of the plaint This would necessarily be after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the institution of the suit Can the plaint be admitted under these circumstances? Under this Code it can be [see s 149] Under the Code of 1857 there was a conflict of decisions on the point The High Courts of Calcutta (v) Madras (u) and Bombay (x) holding that the Court had power to admit the plaint while the Allahabad High Court held that the Court had no such power (y) The view taken by the Calcutta Madras and Bombay High Courts was that the Court had power under s 54 of that Code at any time and without any regard to limitation to fix a time within which the requisite stamp paper should be supplied and if the stamp was made good within the period fixed by the Court the suit was to be deemed to be instituted when the plaint was first presented and not when the requisite stamp paper was supplied On the other hand the view taken by the Allahabad High Court was that, though the Court had the power to give time to a plaintiff within which to supply the requisite stamp paper it must be a time within limitation and that s 54 did not give any power to the Court to extend the period of limitation This conflict has now been set at rest by the provisions of s 149 of this Code That section gives effect to the Calcutta, Madras and Bombay decisions The Allahabad decisions are no longer law (z) S 149 empowers the Court at any stage to allow a plaintiff to make up the deficiency of court fee, and provides in effect that when the deficiency has been made up the plaint is as valid as if it had been properly stamped when presented It follows from the provisions of s 149 that where a plaint written upon paper insufficiently stamped is presented to the Court on the last day allowed by the law of limitation and the Judge to whom the plaint is presented directs extra court fee to be paid but fixes no time for payment and the plaintiff pays the extra court fee though it be after the expiration of the period of limitation and the Court accepts it the plaint should be treated as if the full fee had been paid in the first instance and the suit cannot be held to be barred by limitation (a) In a recent Patna case the plaintiff was given a week's time in which to make up the deficiency Before the expiry of the week the Court closed for the vacation The amount in default was tendered two days after the re-opening of the Court and accepted and the plaint was registered The period of limitation for the claim had expired prior to the date of the acceptance of the deficit. It was held that the acceptance of the fee although tendered late and the subsequent registration of the plaint amounted to an exercise by the Court of its discretion to allow the deficiency to be paid on the day when it was tendered and therefore the suit was not barred by limitation (b)

The procedure prescribed by the present rule is not applicable to a case in which an appellate Court acts under s 12 of the Court Fees Act 1870 (c)

Memorandum of appeal insufficiently stamped—See notes to s 149 Appeals and Applications for review of judgment

Clause (d)—Suit barred by any law—Where a suit appears from statements in the plaint to be barred by the law of limitation but the plaint is not rejected when presented the Court may in a proper case allow the plaint to be amended at the hearing (d). Where a suit is brought against the Secretary of State without giving the notice required by s 80 the plaint should be rejected under this clause (e)

Enlargement of time—The Court may enlarge the time fixed under cls (b) and (c). See s 148

Appeal—An order rejecting a plaint is a decree [s 2 (2)] and appealable as such (f)

Where a plaint is rejected under cl (b) the order rejecting the plaint is not appealable when the order is based on a question of valuation pure and simple. But if the order necessarily involves a decision of the category or class under which a suit falls even though it incidentally decides a question of valuation the order is appealable (g). These decisions turn on s 12 of the Court Fees Act 1870

Revision—In a suit by A against B B raises the objection that the relief claimed is under valued. The Court may in such a case either uphold the objection and require A to pay additional court fee or it may hold that A's valuation is correct. Is this decision open to revision? It has been held by the Chief Court of the Punjab that an order directing a plaintiff to make up the deficiency in Court fee is not open to revision. The reason given is that if the plaintiff believing the order to be wrong does not comply with it it will under this rule result in the rejection of his plaint from which he has a right of appeal for an order rejecting a plaint is appealable as a decree (h). In a recent Calcutta case the Court of first instance held, on an objection raised by the defendant that the valuation put by the plaintiff on his claim was correct. The defendant applied for revision. The High Court held that the decision was not open to revision on the ground that the case did not fall under any of the three clauses of s 115 and also on the ground that the decision could be challenged in appeal from the final decree (i). The High Court of Patna has held that an order demanding an additional court fee involving the jurisdiction of the Court to try the suit is open to revision and that the plaintiff is not bound to wait until his plaint is rejected for non payment of the additional court fee. (j)

Review—In order rejecting a plaint under cl (c) of this section is open to review (k). So also in a proper case an order rejecting a plaint under cl (b) of the section (l)

List of other documents

Production of documents relied upon—A horoscope does not require to be entered in the list of documents mentioned in sub r (2) The reason is that it is not a document to be relied upon as a probative document in itself but it is a record made by the maker of the horoscope to which he is entitled to refer for the purpose of refreshing his memory in the witness box (n)

Failure to produce documents—The penalty for not producing the documents referred to in this rule is that prescribed in r 18 below and not the rejection of the plaintiff (o)

Loss of document after production—Where a promissory note sued upon was produced and delivered to the Court as required by this rule but subsequently disappeared from the file the Judicial Committee held that the plaintiff was entitled to give secondary evidence under s 65 (2) of the Evidence Act 1870 without showing how it disappeared (p)

15 [S 60] Where any such document is not in the possession or power of the plaintiff, he shall, if possible, state in whose possession or power it is

17 [S 62] (1) Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891, where the document on which the plaintiff sues is an entry in a shop book or other account in his possession or power the plaintiff shall produce the book or account at the time of filing the plaint, together with a copy of the entry on which he relies

(2) The Court, or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall forthwith mark the document for the purpose of identification, and, after examining and comparing the copy with the original, shall, if it is found correct, certify it to be so, and return the book to the plaintiff and cause the copy to be filed

Original entry to be marked and returned
Bankers Books Evidence Act 18 of 1891.—The Bankers Books Evidence Act provides a special mode of proof of entries in bankers' books by dispensing with the production of the books. S 4 of the Act provides that a certified copy of any entry in a banker's book is to be received as prima facie evidence of the existence of such entry and that it should be admitted as evidence of the matter contained therein to the same extent as the original entry

18 [S 63] (1) A document which ought to be produced in Court by the plaintiff when the plaint is presented or to be entered in the list to be added or annexed to the plaint, and which is not produced or entered accordingly, shall not, without the leave of the Court, be received in evidence on his behalf at the hearing of the suit

(2) Nothing in this rule applies to documents produced for cross examination of the defendant's witnesses or in answer to any case set up by the defendant or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory

18 In what cases leave may be granted under this rule—The object of rr 14 and 18 is to provide against false documents being set up after the institution of a suit. In those cases therefore where there is no doubt of the existence of a document at the date of the suit the Court should as a general rule admit the document in evidence though it was not produced with the plaint or entered in the list of documents annexed to the plaint as required by r 14 (g). But the Court may even in such a case refuse to receive it in evidence if it is produced at a very late stage of the proceedings e.g. ten years after the date of the suit and a day before the judgment was delivered as was done in the undermentioned case (r)

ORDER VIII

Written Statement and Set off

1 [S 110] The defendant may, and, if so required by the Court, shall, at or before the first hearing or within such time as the Court may permit, present a written statement of his defence

Written statement

Written statement—The written statement must contain and contain only a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his defence but not the evidence by which those facts are to be proved (O 6 r 2). A defendant may by his written statement raise as many distinct and separate and therefore inconsistent defences as he may think proper provided the pleading is not embarrassing (s). A written statement is not embarrassing within the meaning of O 6 r 16 merely because it sets up inconsistent defences (t). But where the defendant relies upon several distinct grounds of defence they must be stated separately and distinctly (r 7 below). See notes to O 6 r 2. Alternato and inconsistent allegations.

2 [New R S C, O 19, r 15] The defendant must raise by his pleading all matters which show the suit not to be maintainable, or that the transaction is either void or voidable in point of law, and all such grounds of defence as, if not raised, would be likely to take the opposite party by surprise, or would raise issues of fact not arising out of the plaint, as, for instance, fraud, limitation, release, payment, performance, or facts showing illegality

New facts must be specially pleaded

Fraud—See notes to O 6 r 4. Fraud and coercion

Facts showing illegality—When a plaintiff sues upon a bond and the defence is that there was no consideration, the Court should not entertain the plea that the consideration was unlawful e.g. stifling a criminal prosecution if it is raised for the first time in the argument of counsel at the close of the hearing. The illegality of the consideration must be specifically pleaded (u). See notes to O 6 r 8.

Limitation —In India a suit instituted after the expiry of the period of limitation shall be dismissed although limitation has not been set up as a defence Limitation Act 1908 s 3 In England limitation must be specifically set up as a defence

Claim against joint contractors for breach —Where in a suit against joint contractors separate defences are put in a successful defence pleaded and proved by one only enures for the benefit of all (r)

3 [New R S C, O 19, r 17] It shall not be sufficient for a defendant in his written statement to deny generally the grounds alleged by the plaintiff, but the defendant must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth except damages

Denial to be specific

Deal specifically with each allegation of fact —The defendant must take each fact which is alleged against him separately and say that he admits it or denies it or does not admit it It is not merely denial which is meant but the rule covers non admission for [the defendant] is to deal specifically with every allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth (w) Every allegation of fact in the plaint will be taken to be admitted if it is not denied specifically or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted (r 5)

A defendant ought not to deny by his written statement plain and acknowledged facts which it is neither to his interest nor in his power to disprove (x) nor should he plead to any matter which is not alleged against him (y) See notes to O 6 r 2 Facts not yet material to a case

Except damages —It is not necessary for a defendant in a suit for damages to deny specifically the damages it is quite sufficient if he pleads generally to the damages (z) See notes to O 6 r 2 Matters affecting damages

4 [New R S C, O 19 r 21] Where a defendant denies an allegation of fact in the plaint, he must not do so evasively, but answer the point of substance Thus, if it is alleged that he received a certain sum of money, it shall not be sufficient to deny that he received that particular amount, but he must deny that he received that sum or any part thereof or else set out how much he received And if an allegation is made with divers circumstances, it shall not be sufficient to deny it along with those circumstances

Evasive denial

Evasive denial —Where the plaintiff sets up an agreement and the defendant denies that the terms of the agreement between himself and the plaintiff were definitely agreed upon as alleged the denial is evasive. He [defendant] is bound to deny that any agreement or any terms of arrangement were ever come to if that is what he means if he does not mean that he should say that there were no terms of arrangement come to except the following terms and then state what the terms were otherwise there is no specific denial at all (a) Similarly where the plaintiff alleges that the defendant offered to the plaintiff's agent a bribe of Rs 500 on 17th July 1908 at the defendant's office it is an evasive traverse for the defendant to plead the defendant did not offer to the plaintiff's agent a bribe of Rs 500 on 17th July 1908 at his office for the defendant might have offered any other sum on another day and in another place Here the point of substance is that a bribe was offered The details as to the amount time and place are only circumstances The defendant should plead that he never offered a bribe of Rs 500 or any other sum (b) Where a denial is evasive leave to amend may be given under O 6 r 17 unless the Court is satisfied that the defendant was acting malafide (c)

5 [New R S C, O 19, r 13] Every allegation of fact in the plaintiff, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication, or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability

Provided that the Court may in its discretion require any fact so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission

Admissions of fact in pleadings—The first paragraph of this rule states what amounts to admissions of fact in a pleading Rule 3 requires that the defendant must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth. The present rule provides that every allegation of fact in the plaintiff if not denied in the written statement shall be taken to be admitted by the defendant (d) In Rutter v Tregent (e) the statement of claim stated (paragraphs 1 2 and 3) the original mortgage and the assignment by the mortgagees to the plaintiff in which the mortgagor had joined (paragraphs 4 and 5) the charges created by the mortgagor subsequent to the assignment to the plaintiff of the first mortgage and (paragraph 6) the amount of principal money with interest due to the plaintiff By their statement of defence the defendants stated that they did not admit the correctness of the statements set forth in paragraphs 1 2 3 and 6 of the plaintiff's statement of claim and required proof thereof Defendant the mortgagor admitted that the subsequent charges were made as stated in paragraphs 4 and 5 of the statement of claim Upon a motion for judgment as upon admission of facts in the pleadings it was held that there was no sufficient denial of the facts alleged by the plaintiff and that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for foreclosure Bacon, V C said The defendants did not admit the correctness of the statements contained in the statement of claim but they ought to state in what respect they disputed them Similarly where a defendant simply puts the plaintiff to proof of the several allegations in the plaintiff he will be deemed to have admitted the facts alleged in the plaintiff (f) Where in a suit for the recovery of money the plaintiff relies in his plaint upon a letter written by the defendant to save the bar of limitation and all that the defendant says in his written statement as to the letter is the suit is not saved by the letter put in from the bar of limitation the letter must be taken as admitted and it need not be proved by the plaintiff (g) But where in a suit by the reversioner of a deceased Hindu to recover possession of properties alienated by the widow of the deceased the defendants pleaded that they did not admit that the widow died on the date stated in the plaint and further stated that the suit was barred by limitation and an issue was framed as to the date of the widow's death it was held that there was no admission by the defendants of the date of the widow's death merely because they did not state in their written statement the date on which according to their case the widow died (h)

A plaintiff who claims a decree must prove all the material facts on which he relies in support of his claim. The importance of the present rule lies in this that since facts which have been admitted need not be proved it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove facts which have been expressly admitted by the defendant or which must be taken to have been admitted by him within the meaning of this rule (see Evidence Act 1872 s 58). The admission itself being a proof no other proof is necessary. In the case however of facts which may be taken to be admitted by the defendant within the meaning of this rule the Court may in its discretion require any facts so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission. That is to say the Court may require the plaintiff to adduce such proof of the fact as it would have been necessary for him to adduce if no such admission had been made. This power which has been conferred upon the Court by the proviso to the rule is not new. The matter it will be seen is one of evidence and a similar power is contained in the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872. The proviso to the rule in fact is a reproduction of the proviso to section 58 of the Evidence Act. That section runs as follows —

No fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing or which before the hearing they agree to admit by any writing under their hands or which by any rule of pleading in force at the time they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings. Provided that the Court may in its discretion require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions.

The proviso to section 58 as well as the proviso to the present rule indicates the intention of the Legislature that pleadings in India ought not to be construed with the same strictness as in England. Upon this principle the defendant has been allowed under special circumstances to traverse at the hearing allegations in the plaint which he had omitted to traverse in his written statement (i). The rule of pleadings in England is very stringent. According to that rule a defendant who omits to traverse in his defence any allegation of fact in the statement of claim is not allowed to traverse that fact at the hearing. The fact will be taken to be admitted by him and the Court has no power to require the plaintiff to prove it in any case. Strike out the proviso to the present rule and you have the rule of English law. In fact the first paragraph of this rule is a reproduction of O 19 r 13 of the English Rules made under the Judicature Acts. The proviso has been added to modify the rigour of that rule.

But though pleadings in India are not to be construed as strictly as in England neither party will be allowed to set up at the hearing an entirely new and inconsistent case. The plaintiff must be held to the state of facts alleged in his plaint or consistent therewith (j). Similarly the defendant must be held to the state of facts alleged in his written statement or consistent therewith (k).

Omission to file written statement.—This rule applies only where a pleading has been put in by the defendant Omission to file a written statement does not amount to an admission of the facts stated in the plaint (4)

6 [S 111] (1) Where in a suit for the recovery of money the defendant claims to set off against the plaintiff's demand any ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff, not exceeding the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, and both parties fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit, the defendant may, at the first hearing of the suit, but not afterwards unless permitted by the Court, present a written statement containing the particulars of the debt sought to be set off

Particulars of set-off to be given in written statement

(2) The written statement shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in respect both of the original claim and of the set off but this shall not affect the lien, upon the amount decreed, of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree

Effect of set-off

(3) The rules relating to a written statement by a defendant apply to a written statement in answer to a claim of set off

Changes in the rule—Sub rule (3) is new. See r 9 below.

Conditions of applicability of the rule—A defendant may claim a set off under this rule if the following conditions are satisfied but not otherwise—

- I The suit must be one for the recovery of money.
- II As regards the amount claimed to be set off—
  - (a) it must be an ascertained sum of money [see ills (c) (d) and (e) above]
  - (b) such sum must be legally recoverable
  - (c) it must be recoverable by the defendant or by all the defendants if more than one [see ill (g)]
  - (d) it must be recoverable by the defendant from the plaintiff or all the plaintiffs if more than one [see ill (f)]
  - (e) it must not exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which the suit is brought and
  - (f) both parties must fill in the defendant's claim to set off the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit [see ills (a) (b) and (h)]

The suit must be one for the recovery of money—In Nan Karay v Htoo (m) their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that it was doubtful whether a suit for an account was a suit for money. In a subsequent Allahabad case it was held that a suit for a dissolution of partnership and for partnership accounts with a prayer that such balance as may be found due to the plaintiff upon taking the partnership accounts may be paid to him was a suit for money and that a plea of set off might therefore be raised by the defendant in such suit (n).

The amount claimed to be set off must be an ascertained sum of money and not unliquidated damages—The expression 'ascertained sum' does not mean a sum admitted by the plaintiff. It is used in contradistinction to unliquidated damages (o). In ills (d) and (e) the claim is for an ascertained sum, not so in ill (c) where the amount claimed to be set off is for unliquidated damages. In the case mentioned in ill (c) the defendant may bring a cross suit against the plaintiff. In ill (f) the amount claimed to be set off by B is the amount of a decree and this may be set off against A's claim. It is not necessary that B should have taken any steps to enforce the decree (p).

A a clerk sues B his employer for arrears of wages due to him. B alleges that A left his employment without notice and that A is therefore liable to pay damages which he claims to set off. The amount not being ascertained cannot be set off (q). See ill (3) on the next page.

Equitable set off—There are cases in which the defendant may be allowed to set off even in respect of an unascertained sum which sounds in damages. These are cases where the cross demands arise out of the same transaction or are so connected with their nature and circumstances that they can be looked upon as part of one transaction.

In such cases Courts of Equity in England have held that it would be inequitable to drive the defendant to a separate cross suit and that he may be allowed to plead a set off though the amount may be unascertained. Such a set off is called an equitable set off as it is allowed by Courts of Equity as distinguished from a legal set off which is allowed by Courts of Common Law in respect only of an ascertained sum. It will thus be seen that the present rule is restricted to a legal set off for it requires that the amount to be set off shall be an ascertained sum. The question therefore arises whether an equitable set off can be pleaded in Indian Courts in other words if the defendant's claim is for an unascertained sum but has arisen from the same transaction as the plaintiff's claim the defendant can set off such demand against the plaintiff's claim? It has been held that he can do so not under the provisions of the present rule which is limited to a legal set off but in the exercise of the general right of a defendant to plead a set off whether it is legal or equitable. The provisions of the Code regulate procedure only and they have not the effect of taking away any right of set off which a defendant may have independently of its provisions. O 20 r 10 (3) recognizes an equitable set off. The leading case on the subject is Clark v Ruthnairloo (r). But this right of set off does not exist when the cross demand relates to a different transaction (s).

The amount claimed to be set off must be legally recoverable — The amount claimed by way of set off under this rule must be legally recoverable. It follows from this that if the defendant's claim is barred by the law of limitation at the date of the suit it cannot be pleaded by way of set off under this rule (t). But this rule relates only to a legal set off. The question arises whether a claim by way of equitable set off can be allowed if it is barred by limitation at the date of the suit. It has been laid down that in cases where the plaintiff's claim and the defendant's claim relate both to the same estate or there is a fiduciary relationship between the parties the defendant's claim to set off though barred by limitation at the date of the suit may be entertained as an equitable set off. It has thus been held that in a suit by an heir against his co-heirs for his one sixth share of the estate of the deceased the latter are entitled to set off one sixth of the Government revenue paid by them in respect of the estate though a separate suit by them to recover from the plaintiff the proportionate part of the revenue payable by him would be barred by limitation (u). Similarly in mortgage suits sums are allowed to be set off in taking accounts of the mortgage even though barred by limitation (v). Upon the same principle it has been held that a trustee in possession of the trust estate is entitled to set up his right to be indemnified out of the trust estate when called upon for an account although his right to sue for the amount claimed by him by way of indemnity is barred by limitation (w). In a recent case (x) the High Court of Madras held that in a suit by a lessor for rent it is not open to the lessee to claim by way of equitable set off an unliquidated claim for damages which was barred at the date of the suit. Subhagiri Ayyar J said: An exception to this rule [namely that a time barred claim cannot be pleaded by way of set off] has been recognized in some cases. Where there is a fiduciary relationship between the parties as in the case of trustee and cestui que trust and there is accountability even barred claims may be taken into account in passing the final accounts. This exception has been extended in some of the decided cases in India to mortgages presumably on the ground that there is accountability between the parties. See Parasurama Pattar v Venkata hallam Pattar (y), Chidambara Mudalia v Krishna suami Pillai (z) and Ramdhari Singh v Permanund Singh (a). It is not necessary to say now whether these cases have been rightly decided. I see no reason for extending the exception to suits between a lessor and a lessee.

In a Madras case (b) an agent sued his principal to recover money that might be found due to him on the balance of agency accounts. The defendant pleaded in his written statement that money would be found due to him on taking accounts and he asked for a decree for such sum as might be found due to him. The defendant's claim was not barred at the date of the suit but it was barred at the date of the written statement. It was held that the defendant's claim should be allowed as an equitable set off to the extent of the plaintiff's claim but that the defendant was not entitled to a decree for the balance found due to him as his claim was barred at the date of the written statement. To pass a decree for the balance would be it was said to enable the defendant to evade the law of limitation. The same view has been taken by the High Court of Bombay (c). In an Allahabad case (d) Oldfield J expressed the opinion that the set off is not barred at the date of the suit should be allowed in full and not merely to the extent of the

The amount claimed to be set off must not exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is brought—The valuation of a set off for the purpose of jurisdiction must be taken as relating to the whole amount pleaded as a set off and without reference to any portion of the plaintiff's claim admitted by the defendant A sues B in a Presidency Small Cause Court for Rs 1 000 B claims to set off a sum of Rs 2 700 and claims judgment for Rs 1 00 after giving A credit for Rs 1 000 admitted by B to be due to A The Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to try the claim as to set off the value of the amount claimed as set off being above Rs 2 000 (g)

A plea of payment is distinct from a plea of set off A sues B to recover Rs 1 500 in a Court of which the pecuniary jurisdiction is limited to Rs 2 000 B alleges that he has paid Rs 1 000 to A on account and admits his liability for the balance of Rs 500 but he claims a set off of Rs 1 700 being the amount due on a promissory note passed to him by A and asks for a decree for Rs 1 200 The amount claimed to be set off is not Rs 1 000 plus Rs 1 700 = Rs 2 700 but Rs 1 700 only and it is therefore within the jurisdiction of the Court (h)

Not only the amount but also the nature of the set off must be within the cognizance of the Court in which the suit is brought Hence a Court cannot entertain a claim to a set off unless such claim if made the subject of a suit would fall within its jurisdiction (i)

Same character—Ills (a) and (b) are cases in which the parties do not fill the same character (j)

A suit is brought by a Hindu son as the heir and representative of his father to recover from B a debt due by B to the father B claims to set off a debt due to him by A's father B may do so for both the parties fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit (k) Similarly in a suit by A against B for an account for goods supplied by A to B B may claim a set off of the amount due to him from A in respect of wages as A's gumasta (l)

Set off in winding up proceedings—Though a director has no right to set off a debt due to him from the company against a claim made against him by the liquidator under s 214 of the Indian Companies Act 189. [Ind Cos Act 1913 s 230] which provides a summary remedy (n) he is entitled to set off the amount due to him if a regular suit is brought against him by the company in respect of that claim (o). In a suit by a liquidator against a debtor of the company the debtor is entitled to set off the amount of a fixed deposit made by him with the company provided the deposit had matured at the date of the suit though it had not matured at the date of the order for winding up the company (p) but he cannot set off a deposit in the name of a firm of which he is a partner (q).

Set off in insolvency—See Presidency Towns Insolvency Act 1909 s 47 (r) and Provincial Insolvency Act 1907 s 30 now Act 5 of 1920 s 43.

Solicitor's lien for costs—Before the year 1832 the Courts in England had a discretionary power as regards set off and a discretion as to the terms upon which they would allow it (s). This discretion was taken away under the General Rules of 1832 and the General Rules of 1863. Rule 93 of the General Rules of 1832 was in these words: No set off of damages or costs between parties shall be allowed to the prejudice of the attorney's lien for costs in the particular suit against which the set off is sought provided nevertheless that interlocutory costs in the same suit awarded to the adverse party may be deducted. This rule was reproduced in identical terms in 1863. That state of things continued until the Judicature Act 1873 came into force. O 65 r 14 made under that Act was directly contrary to the previous rule. The previous rule allowed no set off. O 65 r 14 says that a set off may be allowed. The result is that in England the Courts under O 65 r 14 exercise now in matters of set off the discretion which was taken away by the General Rules of 1832 (t).

Sec 111 of the Code of 1877 provided that the Court may pronounce a final judgment in the same suit both on the original and on the cross claim but it shall not affect the lien upon the amount decreed of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree. This provision was reproduced in sec 111 of the Code of 1882 and it is reproduced in the present rule also. It is clear from the language of this rule that the Courts of this country have no discretion in the matter of a solicitor's lien in cases falling within this rule.

A solicitor has at common law a lien for his costs over property recovered or preserved or the proceeds of any judgments obtained for the client by his exertions (u). The lien attaches to property of every description such as for instance money payable to the client under a judgment including costs ordered to be paid to the client or the proceeds of an execution in the hands of a Sheriff money paid into Court whether as security for costs or by way of defence or otherwise and money received by way of compromise (v). The lien does not extend to general costs for all business done by a solicitor for his client but only to costs of the suit in which the property has been acquired or preserved by his exertions (w). By a decree passed in a suit for redemption of a mortgage brought by A against B A is directed to pay the mortgage debt to B but B is directed to pay to A the costs of the suit. The High Court of Calcutta held that the suit being one for redemption B's attorney is not entitled to a lien for his costs on the whole of the mortgage money but to the mortgage money less the costs payable by B to A which costs A is entitled to set off against the mortgage money (g). See O 20 r 19 and O 21 r 19.

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that where A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 1451 and L subsequently obtains a decree against A for Rs. 1000 A is entitled to have satisfaction of B's decree entered notwithstanding the lien of B's attorney for his costs. The chance was placed in the judgment on the fact that B's attorney had not stated that there was no chance of recovering his costs from his client [B] and that the decree which B had against A was the only property out of which his claim could be satisfied (h). There is no reference in the judgment to the provisions of O 8 r 6 (2).

Appeal—Unless the whole suit is disposed of, an appeal does not lie from an order disposing of a defendant's claim to set off made under this rule even though the question as to that claim may have been tried as a preliminary issue. Such an order is not a preliminary decree. See O 20 r 19 which shows that there should be only one decree drawn up in a suit in which a set off is claimed. (1)

Res judicata — A defendant is under no obligation to claim a set off. His omission therefore to do so does not preclude him from bringing a separate suit in respect thereof (3)

Counterclaim—Though the Code does not provide for counterclaim there is nothing to prevent a Court from treating the counterclaim as a plaint in a cross suit and hearing the two suits together provided that the requisite court fee on the counterclaim has been paid (1)

7 [New R S C, O 20 r 7] Where the defendant relies upon several distinct grounds of defence or set off founded upon separate and distinct facts, they shall be stated as far as may be, separately and distinctly

See note 4 to rule 1 above. Compare O. 2. r. 9.

8 [Aen] Any ground of defence which has arisen after the institution of the suit or the presentation of a written statement claiming a set off may be raised by the defendant or plaintiff, as the case may be, in his written statement

terms as the Court thinks fit, but the Court may at any time require a written statement or additional written statement from any of the parties and fix a time for presenting the same

Additional written statement—The additional written statement should not set up a totally new case or state facts at direct variance with the original written statement so as completely to change the issue in the case (l) See O 6 r 7 and notes

10 [S 113] Where any party from whom a written statement is so required fails to present the same within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may pronounce judgment against him or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit

Procedure when party fails to present written statement called for by Court

Decree against defendant where no written statement filed—This rule enables the Court to pronounce judgment against the defendant on failure to file a written statement such as is required by r 9 Failure to file a written statement in other cases does not come within this rule (m) and the Court cannot in those cases pass a decree against the defendant unless the plaintiff proves his case (n) In a Bombay case the defendant was served with a summons which required him to file his written statement within four weeks from the date of service The date fixed for the hearing was 21st November 1907 The defendant failed to file his written statement within four weeks. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to apply for and obtain an ex parte decree before the returnable date of the summons namely 27th November 1907 (o)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule pronouncing judgment against a party (O 43 r 1 cl. (b))

2 [S 97] Where on the day so fixed it is found that the summons has not been served upon the defendant in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the Court-fee or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, the Court may make an order that the suit be dismissed

Provided that no such order shall be made although the summons has not been served upon the defendant, if on the day fixed for him to appear and answer he attends in person or by agent when he is allowed to appear by agent

Defendant—The expression defendant in this rule does not include the guardian ad litem of a minor defendant (p)

Appeal -The order or dismissal under this rule is a form of dismissal for default. It is not a decree [s. 2 (2)] and no appeal lies from it. The plaintiff's remedy is under r. 4 of this Order (a).

Revision—The Court has no power under this rule to dismiss the suit in a case where the plaintiff has paid the requisite Court fee for the service of the summons but the office does not issue the summons in time. If the Court dismisses the suit in such a case the High Court has power to set aside the order in revision (r).

3 [S 98] Where neither party appears when the suit is called on for hearing, the Court may make an order that the suit be dismissed

Where neither party appears — I sues B and C. A and C do not appear when the suit is called on for hearing but B appears. The Court makes an order dismissing the suit. As between A and B the order is one under r 8 so as to attract the applicability of r 9. But as between A and C the order is one under the present rule so that r 4 applies and not r 9 (e).

If the plaintiff appears on the date fixed for the hearing but the defendant does not appear and the suit is dismissed owing to failure on the part of the plaintiff to adduce evidence in support of his claim the dismissal is on the merits and not under this rule (2)

This rule does not apply after a preliminary decree has been passed and a suit cannot be dismissed for default of appearance on an application for a final mortgage decree (u)

May make an order that the suit be dismissed.—These words have been substituted for the words the suit shall be dismissed [Code of 1882 s 98] to make it clear that the dismissal under this rule is not a decree but an order. Secs 2 (2)

4 [S 99] Where a suit is dismissed under rule 2 or rule 3, the plaintiff may (subject to the law of limitation) bring a fresh suit, or he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his not paying the Court-fee and postal charges (if any) required within the time fixed before the issue of the summons, or for his non appearance, as the case may be the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit

In the absence of these words in the corresponding section of the Code of 1892 the question arose whether the period was to be calculated from the date of the return made by the serving officer or from the date of return made by the officer whose duty it is to certify to the Court returns made by the serving officer. It was held that the period was to be calculated from the date of return made by the latter officer and not that made by the serving officer (w). The officer then delivers the summons to the serving officer whose duty it is to serve summonses. After effecting service the serving officer has to endorse on the original summons a return stating the manner in which the summons was served. If for any reason the summons cannot be served upon the defendant the serving officer has to make a return to that effect. This return is countersigned by the officer to whom the summons was delivered by the Court and the summons is then returned by him to the Court. It is from the date of the countersignature that the period of three months is to be calculated and not from the date of the return made by the serving officer.

Make an order that the suit be dismissed.—These words were substituted in the Code of 1908 for the words may dismiss the suit which occurred in s 99 A of the Code of 1852 in order to make it clear that a dismissal under this rule is not a decree but an order. See s 2 (2).

even though it be to disprove charges of fraud or the like that may have been made against him in the plaint (g)

ance. This rule does not apply to the case of non appearance by reason of death. Where a sole plaintiff dies before the hearing of a suit and the suit is dismissed for non appearance under this rule the fact of his death not being known to the Court there is inherent jurisdiction in the Court under s 151 to set aside the dismissal and thus rectify the mistake which has been inadvertently made. It is then for the legal representative of the plaintiff to apply to be brought on the record under O 22 r 3 (h). Similarly the rule does not apply if the plaintiff has been adjudged insolvent before the hearing for there is no person on the record who has any right or duty to appear and the Court should not dismiss the suit but should under O 22 r 8 fix a time within which the Official Assignee may decide to continue the suit (i). Where on the day fixed for hearing the plaintiff does not appear and the defendant appears but applies for time and the Court dismisses the suit for default the order falls under this rule and not under r 4 above (j).

More plaintiffs than one—This rule provides for the case where a single plaintiff or all the plaintiffs if there are more than one do not appear. Rule 10 provides for a case where there are more plaintiffs than one and one or more of them appear and others do not appear (k).

More defendants than one—If there are several defendants of whom one appears the suit will be dismissed against the defendant who appears under O 9 r 8 and the plaintiff will under O 9 r 9 be precluded from bringing a fresh suit against him. But as against the defendants who have not appeared the dismissal will be under O 9 r 3 and the plaintiff will under O 9 r 4 be at liberty to bring a fresh suit against them (l).

Remedies in case of dismissal under rule 8

The Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed.—These words have been substituted for the words the Court shall dismiss the suit [Code of 1852 s. 102]. An order of dismissal under this rule for default of plaintiff's appearance is not a decree and is not therefore appealable. See s 2 (2) (b) and notes. Order of dismissal for default on p 11 above.

9 [s 103] (1) Where a suit is wholly or partly dismissed under rule 8, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action.

Decree against plaintiff by default bars fresh suit.

But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non appearance when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

(2) No order shall be made under this rule unless notice of the application has been served on the opposite party

Remedies in case of dismissal under rule 8—A plaintiff whose suit is dismissed under r 8 for default of appearance on the day fixed for the hearing cannot appeal from the order of dismissal as such an order is not a decree [s 2 cL (2) sub cl (b)] but he may—

(1) apply for a review of the order under O 47 r 1 (m) though the High Court of Bombay (n) has held that since the decision of the Privy Council in Chayya Ram v Nals (o) a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed under r 8 has no remedy by way of review. Or he may

(2) apply under this rule for an order to set aside the order of dismissal

He is entitled to apply for a review without a previous application to set aside the dismissal under this rule (p). The period of limitation for an application for a review of the order is 10 days from the date of the order in the case of an order made by the Provincial Court of Small Causes, 30 days from the date of the order in the case of an order made by any of the chartered High Courts in the exercise of its original jurisdiction and 90 days from the date of the order in other cases (q). The period of limitation for an application under this section is 30 days from the date of the dismissal of the suit (r).

The first remedy is open to any plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed whether the ground of dismissal may be whether it is dismissed for default of appearance at the hearing or on the merits after a hearing. But the second remedy that is the remedy provided by this rule can only be availed of by a plaintiff who does not appear at the hearing and the suit is dismissed for default of appearance under r 8 above. The remedy given by this rule is not open to a plaintiff whose suit is dismissed on any ground other than default of appearance. Hence if a plaintiff's suit is dismissed on his failure to establish his case by reason of non attendance of his witnesses (s) or for want of evidence (t) the dismissal is not one under r 8 and he cannot therefore avail himself of the remedy provided by this rule.

There is a conflict of decisions whether if a plaintiff does not apply under this rule within the 10 days allowed by law he is entitled to apply for a review under O 47 r 1 after the expiration of that period. The Patna High Court has held (u) following an earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court (v) that he is not; on the other hand the Calcutta High Court has held in a latter case that he is (w). The ground of the Patna decision is that to allow a review in such a case would be an evasion of the rule of limitation. See note below limitation.

Appearance—A plaintiff or a defendant will be deemed to have appeared on the day fixed for the hearing of the suit if he appears—

(1) in person or

(2) by a pleader either himself duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit or accompanied by some person able to answer such questions [O 47 r 1 sub r (a)]

First as regards Appearance of a party in person—The mere presence of a party in Court at the hearing is sufficient to constitute appearance within the meaning of this Order. It does not matter for what purpose he appears or what action he takes on the appearance. A plaintiff appearing and applying for an adjournment on the ground that his witnesses are not present will be deemed to have appeared. If the application is refused and the suit is dismissed owing to his inability to establish his case in the absence of witnesses the dismissal is not one under r 8 for the plaintiff did appear and he cannot therefore avail himself of the provisions of this rule (x). Similarly a defendant appearing and applying for an adjournment on the ground that he had no time to prepare his case will be deemed to have appeared. If the application is refused and a decree is passed against him owing to his unpreparedness to defend the suit the decree is not ex parte under r 6 for he did appear and he cannot therefore avail himself of the provisions of r 13 below (y).

Next as regards Appearance of a party by a pleader—Different considerations arise when a party is represented by a pleader. Appearance by a pleader within the meaning of this Order does not like appearance by a party in person mean mere presence in Court. It means appearance by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit or by a pleader accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions. [O 5 r 1]. Hence a party cannot be said to appear by a pleader if the pleader appears at the hearing and states that though he has filed his vakalatnama he has not received any instructions from his client with regard to the case and that he is therefore unable to go on with the suit (z). Similarly a party cannot be said to appear by a pleader if the pleader has no instructions other than to apply for an adjournment and on the adjournment being refused withdraws from the suit stating that he has no further instructions to go on with the suit (a). In neither case can it be said that the party appeared by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit. But what if the party himself is also present in person in Court at the time? According to the Madras (b) and Patna (c) High Courts it makes no difference that the party himself is present in Court for mere physical appearance does not constitute appearance. According to the Bombay High Court he must be deemed to have appeared the reason given being that if the pleader is not duly instructed to answer material questions the Court may under O 10 r 1 ask questions relating to the suit to the party himself and may examine his witnesses (d).

A pleader appears at the hearing on behalf of a plaintiff and applies for an adjournment on the ground that he had no time to prepare himself with the case or on the ground that the papers being left with his senior he could not proceed with the case. The application is refused and the pleader being unable to go on with the case the suit is dismissed. Can it be said under these circumstances that the plaintiff appeared by a pleader? It has been held in the undermentioned cases that the plaintiff must be held to have appeared by a pleader and that the order of dismissal could not therefore be said to be one made under r 8 so as to entitle the plaintiff to apply under this rule (c)

Suit.—An application under s 148 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1880 is not a suit within the meaning of r 8 or this rule (f)

Fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action.—If the plaintiff fails to appear and the suit is in consequence dismissed under r 8 the dismissal does not operate as res judicata (g). In such a case however the plaintiff is precluded by this rule from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action. Thus if A sues B for damages for breach of a contract and the suit is dismissed for default of A's appearance A cannot bring a fresh suit to recover damages for breach of the same contract. A's only remedy in such a case is to apply for a review or to apply under this rule for an order to set aside the dismissal. But if the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the first suit the subsequent suit will not be barred under this rule. Thus the dismissal for default of a suit by a reversioner against a Hindu widow for an injunction to restrain her from making a gift of immovable property inherited by her from her husband is no bar to a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff against the widow for a declaration that a gift of the property made by the widow after the first suit is inoperative (h). Similarly if A sues B for the rent of certain lands and the suit is dismissed for default of A's appearance under r 8 the dismissal does not operate as a bar to a suit by A against B for enhanced rent (i) or for possession of the lands (j). For other cases in which it was held that the cause of action in the subsequent suit was not the same as in the first suit see cases cited in foot note (l)

If the right of redemption has not been extinguished the rule will not apply to a suit for redemption (l). The Privy Council case of Shankar Bahadur v Daya Shankar (1) seems to have been decided on the English rule that the dismissal of an action for redemption operates as a foreclosure.

This rule does not apply to a suit for partition. The reason is that the right to enforce partition is a legal incident of a joint tenancy and as long as such tenancy subsists so long may any of the joint tenants sue for partition of the joint property (n).

The dismissal under r 9 of a suit filed by the Voluntary Liquidator against a shareholder for the recovery of money alleged to be due to the company is a bar to a subsequent application by the Official Liquidator to have the name of the defendant placed in the list of contributories in respect of the same claim (o).

This rule does not apply when an application for probate is dismissed for default (p) nor when an adjudication order is annulled under sec 43 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 for default of appearance of the insolvent on the day fixed for hearing his application for discharge (q).

(1) A plaintiff left the Court house believing that a part heard case which preceded his case would occupy some time he returned in about half an hour and found that his suit had been called on and dismissed owing to his absence He then applied to set aside the order of dismissal Hell refusing the application that the above circumstances did not amount to sufficient cause for non appearance Manilal v Gulim Husain (1883) 13 Bom 12

(2) Where it was the duty of an attorney's clerk to examine every evening the board for the next day and to inform his master what cases in which he was engaged as attorney were on the board for hearing and the clerk neglecting his duty did not inform the master and no one appearing for the plaintiff the suit was dismissed it was held that the absence was caused by a bona fide mistake and the suit was restored on payment by the attorney of the costs of the hearing The Oriental Corporation v The Mercantile Corporation Ltd (1866) 2 B H C 267

(3) In two cases the High Court of Bombay said that the rule of practice to be observed in the subordinate Courts in the Bombay Presidency is that when a party arrives late before the Judge and finds that his suit has been dismissed before his arrival he is entitled to have his suit restored though there may be no sufficient cause for his late arrival on payment of such costs as may have been incurred by reason of his default by the defendant Chhotalal v Ambalal (1923) 27 Bom L R 68 89 IC 25 (23) A B 423 Sorabji v Ramji (1924) 26 Bom L R 321 90 IC 337 (24) A B 39 In a later case it was held that there was no such hard and fast rule and that the Court had a discretion in each case to deal with the matter Currimbhoy v Moos (1929) 31 Bom L R 468 117 IC 593 (23) A B 500

(4) A litigant should not be deprived of a hearing unless there has been something equivalent to misconduct or gross negligence on his part Arunachala v Subbaramiah (1923) 46 Mad. 60 63 68 IC 971 (23) A M 63 [delay caused by inevitable accident] As to negligence of pleader see the undermentioned case (s)

Inherent power to restore suit dismissed for default—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (t) Bombay (u) and Rangoon (v) that this rule does not take away the inherent power of a Court to restore a suit dismissed for default if there be a just and reasonable cause for restoring it even if no sufficient cause is shown within the meaning of this rule for the plaintiff's non appearance Thus where a case was called on at 12 o'clock and the plaintiff's pleader being under the impression that the case would be taken up at 2 o'clock was engaged in other cases in other Courts and the plaintiff himself was waiting in his pleader's room and the suit was dismissed for default of appearance it was held that though there was no sufficient cause for non appearance within the meaning of this rule the case was one in which the Court should in the exercise of its inherent powers restore the suit to the file (w) Similarly where a plaintiff believing that his case which was fourteenth on the list would not be reached immediately did not attend the Court but went to bring his principal 9 witness and the suit being called on in the meantime his counsel applied for an adjournment on the ground that his client was not in Court but the application was refused and the suit dismissed, it was held that even if there was no sufficient cause within the meaning of this section the Court had inherent power to restore the suit having regard to the special facts of the case (x). On the other hand it has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that a Court has no power apart from the provisions of this rule to restore a suit or apart from the provisions of r 13 to set aside an ex parte decree (y). The Patna High Court has followed the Madras ruling (z).

Appeal—An appeal lies under O 43 r 1 (c) from an order rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) made under this rule but no appeal lies from an order granting the application (a). As regards an order rejecting an application to set aside the dismissal of a suit made by a single Judge sitting on the original side of the High Court it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that it is appealable not only under O 43 r 1 (c) but also as a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent (b) but that an order granting the application is not appealable either under O 43 r 1 (c) or as a judgment under cl 15 of the Letters Patent (c).

Where an application is made by a plaintiff under this rule but the application is dismissed for default no appeal lies from the order of dismissal (d).

Revision—If there is no sufficient cause for setting aside the dismissal the Court cannot do so as a matter of grace because it involves a heavy claim and if it does so the High Court will set aside the order in revision even though the suit has been tried and decreed (e).

Whether this rule applies to proceedings in execution—As has already been stated in the notes on sec 141 the provisions of O 9 do not apply to proceedings in execution. Therefore if an application for execution is dismissed for default it cannot be restored under this rule (f). It is competent however to the applicant to present a fresh application for execution (g). The High Court of Lahore has held that if an application for execution is dismissed for default the Court may restore it in the exercise of its inherent power under sec 151 of the Code (h). A different view has been taken by the High Courts of Patna and Madras (i).

An application to set aside a sale on the ground of irregularity under O 1 r 90 is also a proceeding in execution and the provisions of this Order do not apply to it (j). A judgment debtor who is properly sold in execution of a decree applies under O 1 r 90 to set aside the sale on the ground of material irregularity in conducting the sale. Notice of the hearing of the application is given to B the decree holder and to C the auction purchaser. Three cases might occur. First where none of the parties appears at the hearing of the application and the application is dismissed for non appearance. Secondly where B and C appear at the hearing but A does not and the application is dismissed for A's non appearance. Thirdly where A alone appears at the hearing and an ex parte order is made granting A's application and setting aside the sale. Since O 9 does not apply the dismissal of the application in the first case cannot be treated as a dismissal under O 9 r 3 and the provisions of O 9 r 4 do not apply (j). Similarly the dismissal in the second case cannot be treated as a dismissal under O 9 r 8 and the provisions of O 9 r 9 do not apply (k). For the same reason the ex parte order made in the last case cannot be treated as one under O 9 r 6 and the provisions of O 9 r 13 do not apply.

The provisions of O 9 do not apply to proceedings under O 21 rr 9, 10 (l).

Dismissal for default of application to restore suit—This rule provides for the revival of a suit dismissed for default. Does it apply where an application to set aside the dismissal of a suit is itself dismissed for default? A suit by A against B is dismissed for A's default. A applies under this rule to set aside the dismissal. A does not appear at the hearing of the application and the application also is dismissed for default. Can the application be restored under this rule? No according to the Patna High Court the reason given being that such an application is a proceeding in execution and that O 9 cannot therefore apply to such an application (m). On the other hand the other High Courts (n) have held that such an application may itself be treated as an application to restore the suit provided it is made within the period prescribed for the original application. In later cases in Allahabad (o) and Calcutta (p) it was said that the second application may be entertained under s 151. The same rules apply to applications to restore an application to set aside an ex parte decree which has been dismissed for default.

Limitation—Where no application to set aside a dismissal is made within the period of limitation the Court has no inherent power under s 141 to set aside the dismissal after the expiry of the period (q). See notes above. Remedies in case of dismissal under r 8. The High Court of Bombay has made a rule under sec 147 applying sec 5 of the Indian Limitation Act 1908 to applications under this rule. The rule so made has been held to be intra vires (r).

10 [S 105] Where there are more plaintiffs than one, and one or more of them appear, and the others do not appear, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff or plaintiffs appearing, permit the suit to proceed in the same way as if all the plaintiffs had appeared, or make such order as it thinks fit.

11 [S 106] Where there are more defendants than one, and one or more of them appear and the others do not appear, the suit shall proceed and the Court shall, at the time of pronouncing judgment, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the defendants who do not appear

12 [S 107] Where a plaintiff or defendant, who has been ordered to appear in person, does not appear in person, or show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Court for failing so to appear, he shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing rules applicable to plaintiffs and defendants respectively, who do not appear

appearance without sufficient cause shown by party ordered to appear in person

Where party directed to appear in person—This rule applies to all cases where a party has been ordered to appear in person and fails to do so. This is clear from the fact that the words "under the provisions of section 60 or section 43b (now Order 3 and Order 23 r 3 respectively)" which occurred in the corresponding s. 107 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted from the present rule (s)

Setting aside Decrees ex parte

13 [S 103] In any case in which a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant, he may apply to the Court by which the decree was passed for an order to set it aside, and if he satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree as against him upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit

parte against defendant

Provided that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendant only it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendants also

Old section—This rule corresponds with s. 103 of the Code of 1882. The words "as against him" have been added after the words "shall make an order setting aside the decree." The proviso to the rule is also new. See as to the effect of these changes note. Proviso to the Rule

Remedies in case of ex parte decree—A defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed under r. 6 for default of appearance at the hearing has the following courses open to him (f) —

(1) he may appeal from the ex parte decree under s. 96

(a) Tanveer thammal v. Vallamma (1914) 41 Mad 226 (A.C. 19) | (b) Jethalal v. J. Rajulal (1914) 46 Bom 141 15
632 C 44 ( ) A.H. 6

(-) he may apply for a review of judgment under O 47 r 1 (u)

(3) he may apply under this rule for an order to set aside the ex parte decree provided the application is made in cases to which the Limitation Act 1908 applies within 30 days from the date of the decree or where the summons was not duly served when he has knowledge of the decree (i) and in cases to which the Limitation Act 1877 applies within 30 days from the date of executing any process for enforcing the judgment (u) As to knowledge of the decree it has been held that it must be knowledge of a particular decree passed against the defendant in a particular Court in favour of a particular person and for a particular sum and not merely the knowledge that a decree has been passed by some Court against him (x)

Where the right to make the application is barred under the Act of 1877 and the bar arose before the Limitation Act of 1908 came into force the provisions of that Act could not revive the right (y) But where the right is not barred the law of limitation to be applied to applications under the present rule made after January 1 1909 is art 164 of the Limitation Act of 1908 and not art 164 of the Limitation Act of 1877 though the ex parte decree was passed when the Limitation Act of 1877 was in force ( )

The first two remedies that is the remedies by way of appeal and review are open to any person against whom a decree is passed whether the decree is ex parte or not But the third remedy the one provided by this rule can only be resorted to if the decree is passed ex parte that is to say passed against the defendant for default of appearance under r 6 The remedy given by this rule is not open to a defendant if the decree is passed on grounds other than his non appearance

Whether remedies concurrent—A defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed is at liberty as stated above to apply to set aside the decree under this rule or to appeal from the decree or to apply for a review of the judgment He is entitled to apply under this rule to set aside the decree and at the same time to appeal from the decree Further he is entitled to appeal from the decree without a previous application to set aside the decree under this rule (a) Similarly he is entitled to apply for a review without previously applying under this rule (b) If he applies under this rule and his application is rejected he is entitled under O 43 r 1 (d) to appeal from the order rejecting the application But he is not bound to appeal from the order he may appeal under s 96 from the ex parte decree itself

If a defendant against whom an ex parte decree is passed does not apply under this rule to set aside the decree but appeals from the decree two questions arise namely—

- (1) Whether the appellate Court can consider the reason for the defendant's non appearance at the hearing and determine whether the lower Court was right in proceeding ex parte or whether the only question which it could consider is whether the evidence on the record is sufficient to support the ex parte decree in other words whether the decree can be sustained on the merits and
- (2) whether if the appellate Court comes to the conclusion that the suit ought not to have been heard ex parte it has the power to remand the case for re-hearing to the lower Court

Upon the points there is a conflict of decisions In a case under the Code of 1884 the Calcutta High Court held that the only question which the appellate Court could

3 on the ground of fraud in respect of the service of summons upon him. The Court after going into the question of fraud rejects the application and then institutes a regular suit to set aside the ex parte decree, basing his suit on the very fraud that was alleged by him in the application. The suit is barred as res judicata (x). In a recent Calcutta case I sued B in a Munsif's Court on a hand note and obtained an ex parte decree for Rs. 50. B applied to set aside the decree but the application was refused. B then sued A in the Munsif's Court to set aside the decree on the grounds (1) that the summons was not duly served and (2) that the decree was obtained by perjured evidence. It was held that the issue as to service of summons was not res judicata, the reason given being that the suit included matters which could not have been raised on the application to set aside the decree (y). This decision it is submitted is not good law.

Application by legal representative of deceased defendant.—Under the Code of 1859 it was not settled whether his legal representative could apply for an order to set aside the ex parte decree against a deceased defendant. The High Court of Calcutta held that he could (z). The High Courts of Madras (a) and Allahabad (b) held that he could not. But the Allahabad Court conceded that if the application was made by the defendant and he died during the pendency of the application the proceedings could be continued by his legal representative (c). Under this Code (s. 14f) such an application may be made by the legal representative of the deceased defendant (d).

Grounds on which ex parte decree may be set aside.—The grounds are stated in the second paragraph of the rule, the one being that the summons was not duly served upon the defendant (e) and the other that though the summons was duly served the defendant was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing (f). A summons cannot be said to be duly served if it is a misleading document having no relevance to the real proceedings which are contemplated and having no reference to the order ultimately passed (g). When a summons was served upon a purdashin lady to whom the serving officer was not able to obtain access by affixing a copy of the summons on the outer door of her dwelling house under Order 1 and it appeared that the lady had no knowledge of the suit against her the Court set aside the ex parte decree passed against her on the ground that she was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing at the hearing of the suit (h). But duly does not mean personally and a summons may be duly served by substituted service (j).

Sufficient cause.—Where an ex parte decree has been passed against a defendant who has failed to appear at the hearing he is not entitled to have the decree set aside as a matter of course even if he applies on the same day for the purpose. It is a matter for the discretion of the Court (j). The fact that a defendant was contemplating an appeal from a preliminary decree in a suit for partition is no ground for his failure to attend proceedings in connection with the division of property and for setting aside the final decree for partition (l). In a Rangoon case under the Land Acquisition Act 1901 the Collector failed to appear as he was on tour at that time and there was considerable pressure of work. One of the Judges of a Division Bench held that this was a sufficient cause for his non appearance while the other Judge held that it was not (l). For other cases see note to O 9 r 9 Appearance.

Upon such terms as to payment into Court.—In restoring a case under this rule the Court may make it a condition that costs (m) or the decretal amount or some portion thereof be paid into Court (n). If a decree is set aside on failure to comply with a condition imposed by a Court an appeal will lie under O 43 r 1 (d) and the appellate Court will consider whether the condition was a reasonable one (o).

High Court of Calcutta Original Side.—The High Court of Calcutta has held that this rule does not apply in terms on the Original Side of the High Court. The principle however of this rule is applied on that side and Pankin C.J. said that the High Court on its Original Side has a discretion which it may exercise independently of the rule and that it may set aside an ex parte decree even in a case in which there has been an element of negligence (p). The same High Court has also held that an application to set aside an ex parte decree not being one under this rule is not governed by art. 164 of the Limitation Act (q).

Inherent power to set aside ex parte decree.—See notes to r 9. Inherent power to restore suit dismissed for default.

Ex parte decree against minor defendant.—It is no ground for setting aside an ex parte decree passed against a minor defendant that the Nazir who was appointed guardian ad litem of the minor did not appear and defend the suit if the failure to defend was owing to the fact that the Nazir did not receive instructions from any person to defend the suit. It would be otherwise if fraud, collusion or gross negligence on the part of the guardian ad litem were proved (r). See notes to r 9. Minor plaintiff.

Proviso to the rule.—Cases under this proviso fall into two classes:

I Where the decree is ex parte against all the defendants but the application to set aside the decree is made only by some of them.

II Where against some of the defendants the decree is passed ex parte but against others who have appeared and defended the suit it is passed on the merits and the application to set aside the decree is made by one or more of the defendants against whom the decree was passed ex parte.

In cases under both classes the question is whether if the decree is set aside as against the applicant the Court can set aside the decree as against the other defendants also so as to reopen the whole suit and if so in what cases? No provision was made in the old section as to these cases. The present rule expressly provides for the two cases. The first para. of r 13 says that where a defendant against whom a decree is passed ex parte applies for an order to set it aside and satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served upon him etc. the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree as against him [that is the applicant] (s). The proviso to r 13 says that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against such defendant only it may be set aside as against all or any of the other defendants. The object is to provide for case where it may be necessary in the ends of justice to set aside the decree not

3 only against the applicant but also against the other defendants (f) This would be a general rule be so

(1) where the decree is one and indivisible (u)

(-) where the suit would result in inconsistent decrees if the decree were not set aside as against the other defendants also (v)

(3) where the relief to which the applicant is entitled in the suit could not effectively be given otherwise than by setting aside the decree as against the other defendants also (w)

(4) where the decree proceeds on a ground common to all the defendants (x)

These four cases may be considered under the two classes referred to above

Class I—Where the decree is ex parte passed against all the defendants but the application to set aside the decree is made by some of them only

Illustrations

(a) B C and D who constitute a joint Hindu family execute a mortgage of the joint property in favour of A. A sues B C and D to enforce the mortgage. D is served with the summons but not B and C. None of the defendants appears at the hearing and an ex parte decree is passed against all the defendants for a sale of the mortgaged property. B and C apply for an order to set aside the decree on the ground that the summons was not served upon them. Here the decree being one and indivisible the Court may set aside the decree not only as against B and C but also as against D though D was served with the summons and there was no sufficient cause for his non appearance. Ajodhya Pershad v Sh o Pershad (1900) 5 C W N 38. Ashfaq Husain v Gauri Sahai (1911) 33 All 261 33 I A 379 I C 955

(b) A sues B and his minor sons C and D members of a joint Hindu family to recover Rs. 1000 alleged to have been advanced to B as manager of the family. None of the defendants appears at the hearing and an ex parte decree is passed against all the three. All the three defendants apply to have the decree set aside. As to C and D it is proved that no summons was served upon them. As to B it is proved that the summons was duly served upon him. Here the decree being one and indivisible (y) the Court may set aside the decree not only as against C and D but also as against B though the summons was served upon him and there was no sufficient cause for his non appearance. Moreover this is a case where the relief to which the minors C and D are entitled could not effectively be granted unless the decree was set aside as against B also. For if the decree were allowed to stand as against B B's share in the joint family property could be attached and sold though the sons might succeed in showing at the re trial of the suit that the debt never was incurred or that it had been discharged or that from its nature the joint family property was not liable. The sale of the father's share in the joint family property would be a manifest injury to the son and this could only be avoided by setting aside the decree against the father also and reopening the whole suit. Phura Mal v Har Krishan Das (1902) 24 All 343 at pp 460 and 461 is served with the summons but B is not. Neither defendant appears at the hearing and a decree ex parte is passed against both the defendants. B applies to have the decree set aside and it is set aside as against him but not as against A. At the hearing B establishes that A has no title whatever to the property. There would in such a case be two absolutely inconsistent decrees namely the ex parte decree held by A against A declaring A to be jointly in possession with A and B and the decree against A passed at the hearing that A was not in joint possession with A and B. This is therefore a case in which the decree must be set aside not only as against B but as against A also see Bhura Mal v Har Kishan Das (1902) 24 All 383 at p 388.

(c) A alleging that A and B are in joint possession of certain immovable property sues A and B and asks for a declaration that he is in joint possession with them. A

(d) A sues A and B on a promissory note executed by A. B is A's nephew and he is joined as a defendant on the ground that A and B are members of a joint Hindu family and that the note was for a debt binding on the family. Neither defendant appears at the hearing and an ex parte decree is passed against both the defendants. The decree against A proceeds on the ground that the note was passed by him and against B on the ground that the debt was incurred for a family purpose. B applies for an order to set aside the decree alleging that the summons was not served upon him and that the debt in respect of which the note was passed by A was not incurred for a family purpose. It is not disputed that the amount was actually advanced to A. Such being the case the decree may be set aside as against B but it must not be set aside as against A. Justice does not require it for the contention of B that the debt was one not binding on him is a defence peculiar to him alone and not one common to him and A. Gopala Chelli v Subbar (1913) 26 Mad 604.

(e) A sues B, C and D personally and as managers of a devasam to recover Rs. 270 being revenue paid by him on behalf of the defendants. None of the defendants appears at the hearing and an ex parte decree is passed against them personally and against the devasam property. If B alone applies under this rule and shows sufficient cause for his non appearance at the hearing the decree may be set aside so far as it ordered payment by B personally and from the devasam property but it cannot be set aside so far as it directs C and D to pay the amount personally. Lalia Koni v Marutha eera (1909) 31 Mad 454.

Class II—Where against some of the defendants the decree is passed ex parte but against others who have appeared and defended the suit it is passed on the merits and the application to set aside the decree is made by one or more of the defendants against whom the decree was passed ex parte.—In this case the question arises whether if the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside as against the applicant only but must be set aside also as against the defendants against whom the decree was passed on the merits the Court has the power to set aside the decree as against such defendants also. It is submitted that it has. The words the decree in the proviso mean the decree passed in the suit not only against the defendants who did not appear but also against the defendants who did appear. The words other defendants in the proviso mean defendants other than the applicant against whom the decree is passed whether as against them it was passed ex parte or after a hearing ( )

(a) A sues A and B alleging that A and B are in joint possession of certain immovable property and asking for a declaration that A is in joint possession with them. A appears and defends the suit. B does not appear. The Court finds that A and B are in joint possession and that A is entitled to joint possession with them and a decree is passed against A and B declaring that A is entitled to joint possession with them. Here the decree so far as regards A is passed after a hearing and as regards B it is ex parte.

(2) See the judgment of Banerjee J. in Mahomed H. and Co. v. T. Kurren (1899) 15 Cal 155, 159, 160 and cf.

Altman J in Bhura Mal v. Har Kishan Das (1902) 24 All 383, 400.

13 But there is only one decree and the words the decree in the proviso can only refer to that decree. Therefore if B applies for an order to set aside the decree and the decree is set aside as against him it must also be set aside as against A otherwise in the event of B succeeding in the suit this absurd position would arise that A and B being in joint possession of the property A would be in possession of a decree declaring him to be jointly in possession along with A and B whilst B would be in possession of a decree in his favour declaring that A is not entitled to joint possession with him and A. See Lhura Mal v. Har Kishan Das (1902) 24 All 383 at p. 400.

(b) A and B both Mahomedans pass a promissory note to X B dies leaving three heirs H1 H2 and H3. X sues A (surviving maker of the note) and H1 H2 and H3 as heirs of B. A and H1 appear at the hearing, and defend the suit. H2 and H3 do not appear. A decree is passed against all the defendants the liability of H1 H2 and H3 under the decree being limited to the extent of the property of B inherited by them as B's heirs. Here the decree so far as regards A and H1 is passed after hearing and as regards H2 and H3 it is ex parte. H2 and H3 apply to have the decree set aside all going that the summons was not served upon them. The Court is satisfied that the summons was not served. Upon these facts the High Court of Calcutta held under the old section that the decree should be set aside not only as against H2 and H3 but also as against A and H1 the ground of the decision being that the decree was one and indivisible. Mahomed Harudulla v. Tokurenni 1 I L R (1899) 2 Cal 130.

(c) A sues B and B's mother C Native Christian upon a promissory note jointly passed by them. B appears at the hearing and defends the suit. C does not appear. A decree is passed against both defendants for the amount of the note. Here the decree so far as regards B is passed after a hearing and as regards C is ex parte. C applied for an order to set aside the decree all going that the summons was not served upon her. The Court finds that the summons was not served upon C. Upon these facts the High Court of Bombay held under the old section that if the decree were set aside as against C it should not be set aside as against B also. B having appeared and defended the suit. Minakshi v. Sitaram (1911) 18 Bom 147. If the Bombay decision means that the setting aside of a decree ex parte against a defendant does not necessarily revive the suit as against a defendant who has appeared and defended the suit the decision is still good law. But if it means that where a decree is passed ex parte against A and after a hearing against B the Court can set aside the decree only against A and cannot set it aside as against B the decision is no longer law as the proviso to the rule.

(d) A sues B and C for a declaration of title to certain lands and D and E (tenants of B and C) for possession of the lands. B and C appear and defend the suit. D and E do not appear. The Court passes a decree against all the four defendants, as against A and C declaring that the lands belong to A and as against D and E directing them to deliver possession of the lands to A. Here the decree against D and E is ex parte for they did not appear at the hearing. D and E apply for an order to set aside the decree all going that the summons was not served upon them. The Court is satisfied that the summons was not served. Should the decree be set aside as a whole that is against all the defendants A C D and E or should it be set aside against D and E only. The decree should not be set aside as a whole for the decree is not one and indivisible. The relief granted to A as against B and C is a declaration of title to the lands. The relief granted to A as against D and E is that they should deliver up possession of the lands to A. In fact the decree though nominally one really consists of two decrees each as against one set of defendants, the relief granted against each set being separately specified. Hence the decree may be set aside as against D and E but not as against B and C. If the relief granted against B and C is distinct from that granted against D and E who alone applied for an order to set aside the decree. Mohammed Ali v. Varghese (1919) 4 C W N 467.

(e) Issues B C and D the holders of a holding, for rent and an ex parte decree is passed against them B alone applies to set aside the decree. The decree may be set aside as against B but it should not be set aside as against C and D the reason being that a decree for rent can be passed against some holders of a holding without impleading the other holders. Keshav Chandra v Joyfulnessa (1927) 32 C.W.N. 507 (28) A.C. 397

Whether this rule applies to execution proceedings—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution. See notes under the same head to r 9 above

Dismissal for default of application to set aside ex parte decree—See note to r 9 above. Dismissal for default of application to restore suit

Application to set aside ex parte decree after it has been executed—The fact that an ex parte decree has been satisfied does not preclude the defendant from applying to the Court for an order to set it aside under this rule. A obtains an ex parte decree against B and attaches B's goods in execution of the decree. B pays the amount of the decree under protest and applies for an order to set aside the decree on the ground that the summons was not served upon him. The Courts may make an order setting aside the decree notwithstanding that the decree has been satisfied (a)

Effect of setting aside ex parte decree—When an ex parte decree is set aside all proceedings from the stage of the non appearance of the defendant are equally set aside (b)

Ex parte decree against firm—A decree against a firm cannot be said to be ex parte against a partner in the firm because he has not appeared at the hearing. An ex parte decree against a firm can be set aside on the ground that the summons was not duly served on the firm. If the summons was duly served upon the firm the decree cannot be set aside because one of the partners was not served. Under O 30 r 3 it is not necessary to serve every partner. Issues 1 & 2 (Co) a firm. The firm consists of two partners 1 and 2. The summons is served on 1 alone as a partner 2 is not served with the summons. Neither 1 nor 2 appears at the hearing and an ex parte decree is passed against the firm. The summons having been duly served on the firm the decree against the firm cannot be set aside because 2 was not served and he did not appear at the hearing (c)

Appeal—Where an application under this rule is dismissed an appeal lies from the order dismissing the application whether the dismissal was on merits or for default (d) [O 43 r 1 cl (d)]. But where the application is granted no appeal lies from the order granting the application (e). Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree has been dismissed for default and a fresh application is made to set aside such dismissal and the fresh application also is refused no appeal lies from the order refusing the fresh application (f)

Revision—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that an order setting aside an ex parte decree is not subject to revision under s 115 the reason given being that the validity of the order may be attacked under s 103 in an appeal from the final decree (g). The High Court of Madras has held that an order setting aside an ex parte decree may be set aside in revision if it is not based on any ground recognised by law (h)

ORDER X

Examination of Parties by the Court

1 [S 117] At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall ascertain from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies such allegations of facts as are made in the complaint or written statement (if any) of the opposite party, and as are not expressly or by necessary implication admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made. The Court shall record such admissions and denials.

2 [S 118] At the first hearing of the suit, or at any subsequent hearing, any party appearing in person or present in Court, or any person able to answer any material questions relating to the suit by whom such party or his pleader is accompanied may be examined orally by the Court, and the Court may, if it thinks fit, put in the course of such examination questions suggested by either party.

Object of examination under this rule.—The object of examination under this rule is not to take evidence or ascertain what is to be the evidence in the case but to determine the matters in dispute between the parties (i)

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (2)]

4 [S 120] (1) Where the pleader of any party who appears by a pleader or any such person accompanying a pleader as is referred to in rule 2 refuses or is unable to answer any material question relating to the suit which the Court is of opinion that the party whom he represents ought to answer, and is likely to be able to answer if interrogated in person, the Court may postpone the hearing of the suit to a future day and direct that such party shall appear in person on such day

(2) If such party fails without lawful excuse to appear in person on the day so appointed, the Court may pronounce judgment against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit

Direct that such party shall appear in person—Under this rule an order directing a party to appear in person can only be made if the pleader who represents him has refused or is unable to answer material questions (a) See O 9 r 12

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order pronouncing judgment against a party under sub r (2) [O 43 r 1 cl (c)] Where in a suit by A against B C and D the Court struck off B's defence owing to his failure to appear in person but ultimately decided the case on the merits and passed a decree against all three defendants their defences being similar it was held that B was not entitled to appeal from the order striking off his defence but that he was at liberty to appeal from the final decree and in that appeal to object to the order striking off his defence [a 10a] (o)

Res judicata—A dismissal of a suit under sub r (2) operates as res judicata so as to bar a subsequent suit in respect of the same matter (p)

ORDER XI

Discovery and Inspection

1 [R S C O 31, 1, Cf S 121] In any suit the plaintiff or defendant by leave of the Court may deliver interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite parties or any one or more of such parties and such interrogatories when delivered shall have a note at the foot thereof stating which of such interrogatories each of such persons is required to answer Provided that no party shall deliver more than one set of interrogatories to the same party without an order for that purpose. Provided also that interrogatories which do not relate to any matters in question in the suit shall be deemed irrelevant, notwithstanding that they might be admissible on the oral cross examination of a witness.

Discovery by interrogatories—Every party to a suit is entitled to know the nature of his opponent's case (g) so that he may know beforehand what case he has to meet at the hearing (r). But he is not entitled to know the facts which constitute exclusively the evidence of his opponent's case the reason being that it would enable an unscrupulous party to tamper with his opponent's witnesses and to manufacture evidence in contradiction and so shape his case as to defeat justice (s). The nature of a plaintiff's case is disclosed in his plaint. The nature of a defendant's case is disclosed in his written statement. But a plaint or a written statement may not sufficiently disclose the nature of a party's case and to make good the deficiency either party may administer interrogatories in writing to the other through the Court. Interrogatories may also be administered by a party to his opponent to obtain admissions from him to facilitate the proof of his own case. The party to whom interrogatories are administered must answer them in writing and on oath (r 8). This is called discovery by interrogatories. The party to whom the interrogatories are administered discloses or discloses by his affidavit in answer to the interrogatories the nature of his case.

Every suit contemplates two sets of facts namely, (1) facts which constitute a party's case and (2) facts by which a party's case is to be proved (see O 6 r 2). The first set of facts discloses the nature of a party's case. The second set forms the evidence of his case. Thus if A sues B for damages for breach of a contract A must prove (1) the contract and (2) breach of the contract. These two facts constitute A's case and determine the nature of A's case. Therefore B may administer interrogatories to A to elicit particulars of (1) the contract and (2) the breach thereof. He may also interrogate A to obtain admissions from him to facilitate the proof of his own case. But he is not entitled to administer interrogatories to ascertain the evidence by which A will prove these two facts. Thus B may not ask who was present at the time when the alleged contract was made in other words it is not permissible to ask the names of A's witnesses (t). But if the name and address of a person is itself a relevant fact an interrogatory as to that name and address is not rendered inadmissible merely because it involves the disclosure of a witness's name (u). In a suit for the recovery of the amount of a hundi drawn by the defendant for an advance of Rs 5000 made by the plaintiff and to have been dishonoured by non payment the defendant is entitled to discovery of the form in which consideration was paid and particulars of the time and place when and where defendant accepted the hundi and the names and addresses of persons by whom and the time and place at which the hundi was presented for payment. All these are material facts which constitute the plaintiff's case (v). See notes to O 6 r 4. Object of particulars. See also note below. Interrogatories relating to names of persons.

What interrogatories may be allowed—In England interrogatories are allowed for the following purposes—

- (1) To ascertain the nature of your opponent's case or the material facts constituting his case (w).

(2) To support your own case either

- (a) directly by obtaining admissions or
(b) indirectly by impeaching or destroying your adversary's case (2)

Case (1) has already been dealt with. The following is an illustration of Case 2. A sues B to recover P<sup>o</sup> 5 000 for making model machinery for exhibition. The defence is that the machinery was defective and unworkable. A may interrogate B whether the machinery did not obtain a prize at the exhibition. If it did it is clear that the answer would tend to destroy B's case and support A's case (y). Moreover the answer will serve as an admission from B and the getting of admissions by interrogatories is always allowed for it supports the party's case. ( )

There is one exception to the rule in Case 2 (b). A sues to eject B from a piece of land alleging that the land belongs to him and that B is wrongfully in possession thereof. This is an action of ejectment. A is plaintiff in ejectment and B is defendant in ejectment. In an action of ejectment the plaintiff must prove his own title affirmatively. It is not enough for him to impeach or destroy the defendant's title. If he does not establish his own title to the land he will not be entitled to a decree though he may succeed in impeaching or even destroying the defendant's title. The reason is that the defendant being in possession he cannot be dispossessed of the land except by proof of title on the part of the claimant. Hence the plaintiff in ejectment should not be allowed to interrogate the defendant merely for the purpose of destroying or impeaching the defendant's title (a). And this is the Exception above referred to. But the plaintiff in ejectment is entitled to interrogate the defendant as to any matter relating to the defendant's title that may support his case directly (b). The same principles apply in the case of discovery by production of documents.

The High Court of Calcutta has said that interrogatories in India should not be allowed for the first of the above purposes that is to ascertain the nature of your opponent's case but that they may be allowed for the second that is to support your own case (c). This is on the ground that where a party has not sufficiently disclosed his case it is the Court that has to determine the exact nature of his case by procedure under O 9 r 7 and O 14 rr 12 and that it is not therefore permissible to the opposite party to get that information by discovery. But these rules are it is submitted intended not to supersede but to supplement discovery and there is no reason why any distinction should be drawn between the English and the Indian practice (d).

What interrogatories may not be allowed — The c may be divided into three

1. A party is not entitled to a ministerial interrogatories for admission of facts which constitute exclusively the evidence of his adversary's case or title (e).

4 partly is not entitled to interrogate as to any confidential communications between him and his legal advisers

3. A party is not entitled to execute interrogatories which would invade claims as injurious to public interests.

Interrogatories relating to names of persons—Interrogatories relating to the names of persons not already parties to the action are only allowable where the object is either to make the proceedings complete and effective for all purposes or to enable the plaintiff more effectively to substantiate the case which he makes against the existing defendant (f) Such interrogatories are not allowable in any other case Thus in a suit by the vendor against the purchaser for specific performance of a contract for sale the plaintiff is not entitled to interrogate the defendant for the purpose of discovering whether he was acting as agent for an undisclosed principal The only object of such an interrogatory is to give the plaintiff the opportunity of releasing the defendant and of securing for the plaintiff some other person liable under the contract in substitution for and not jointly with the defendant (g)

As to interrogatories as to names of witnesses see note above Discovery by interrogatories and notes to O 6 r 4 Object of particulars As to interrogatories as to names of informants in defamation cases see the undermentioned cases (h)

Refusal by company to register transfer—Where an article of a company's articles of association empowers the directors without assigning any reason to decline to register any transfer of shares not fully paid up made to any person not approved by them or made by any member jointly or alone indebted to the company and the company refuses to register a transfer the company is not entitled in an action for a declaration that the refusal was wrongful to refuse to state which of the grounds mentioned in the article the directors had acted under although it might refuse to say what reasons influenced them in exercising their discretion before that ground (i)

Foreign law—An interrogatory involving a question of foreign law is not permissible unless the party interrogated is shown to be an expert in that law (j)

Time for delivery of interrogatories—A plaintiff may under this rule deliver interrogatories to a defendant even before the filing of the written statement But there is this difference if the English practice is to be followed here that in what are called common law actions interrogatories if delivered before filing the written statement will as a rule be struck out under r 7 as unnecessary and vexatious unless sufficient reasons are given by the plaintiff to explain why the interrogatories are necessary at that stage of the suit (l) while in suits of the nature of chancery actions (l) they may as a rule be allowed though no written statement has been filed (m)

A defendant as a rule is not allowed to deliver interrogatories to the plaintiff before he has filed his written statement (n)

Leave of Court—The application for leave to administer interrogatories is as a rule made ex parte In determining whether leave should be granted the Court should consider whether it is a fit and proper case for administering interrogatories Leave should be refused if the interrogatories are scandalous or are an abuse of the process of the Court But it is not the duty of the Court when granting leave to consider what particular questions the party interrogated should be compelled to answer The proper time for considering that question is after the party interrogated has made his affidavit in answer [r 8] (o) See r 2 below

Where opposite party is a minor or lunatic—Where a party to a suit is a minor or a lunatic interrogatories may be administered to his next friend or guardian ad litem as the case may be see r 23 below

(1) Not every question which could be asked to a witness in the box may be put as an interrogatory. Thus questions which are put only to test the credibility of a person will not be allowed although of course they may be asked in cross examination (g)

Impleading party for discovery—A person cannot be made a party to a suit solely for the purpose of discovery (s)

Probate proceedings—O 11 applies by virtue of s 266 of the Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 to proceedings in probate (u)

Particular interrogatories
to be submitted

Power of Court under this rule.—It is to be noted that the Court has no power under this rule to settle interrogatories but to state only what interrogatories shall be administered (c). Further the allowance by the Court of interrogatories to be administered to a party does not amount to a decision that the party is bound to answer them but leaves him at liberty to take any objection to answers which he might otherwise have taken (c). See p. 67 below.

Running down cases—In running down cases only such interrogatories should be allowed as may be necessary for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs within this rule (x)

3 [R S C, O 31 r 3 Cf S 123] In adjusting the costs of the suit inquiry shall at the instance of any party be made into the propriety of exhibiting such interrogatories, and if it is the opinion of the taxing officer or of the Court, either with or without an application for inquiry, that such interrogatories have been exhibited unreasonably, vexatiously, or at improper length, the cost occasioned by the said interrogatories and the answer thereto shall be paid in any event by the party in fault

Costs of interrogatories.

4 [New R S C, O 31, r 4] Interrogatories shall be in Form No 2 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

Form of interrogatories

5 [R S C O 31 r 5 Cf S 124] Where any party to a suit is a corporation or a body of persons, whether incorporated or not, empowered by law to sue or be sued whether in its own name or in the name of any officer or other person any opposite party may apply for an order allowing him to deliver interrogatories to any member or officer of such corporation or body, and an order may be made accordingly

Corporations

Delivery of interrogatories to an officer of a corporation—A corporate body cannot answer for itself and if it is necessary that some officer should answer for it His answer is the answer of the Company and can be read against the Company Therefore he is only bound to answer with reference to knowledge acquired in the course of his employment by the Company and as the result of inquiries made by him of the other officers and agent of the Company with regard to their knowledge acquired in the same way He is not bound to answer as to his own knowledge or to make inquiries of the other officers or agents of the Company as to their knowledge acquired accidentally or in some other capacity (y)

6 [R S C O 32 r 6 Cf S 125] Any objection to answering any interrogatory on the ground that it is scandalous or irrelevant or not exhibited bona fide for the purpose of the suit, or that the matters inquired into are not sufficiently material at that stage, or on any other ground, may be taken in the affidavit in answer

Objections to interrogatories by answer

(y) Welbeck Incandescent Gas Light Co v [1900] Ch. 1 S. Light Inc. Incandescent Co

Scandalous interrogatories—Certainly nothing can be scandalous which is relevant ( ) Interrogatories which tend to incriminate a party are not scandalous if they are relevant (a)

Irrelevant interrogatories—The discovery by interrogatories as distinguished from cross examination must be directly relevant to the matter in issue (b) Thus in an action for damages against the defendant for seducing the plaintiff's daughter the defendant cannot be asked how rich he is as it is perfectly irrelevant in such cases whether the defendant is rich or poor the true measure of damages being the amount of compensation to be paid to the plaintiff for the injury he has sustained by the seduction of his daughter But interrogatories as to whether the defendant has had sexual intercourse with the daughter and whether he had stated that he believed that she had not had such intercourse with any other man are allowable (c) Similarly interrogatories will not be allowed if the defence at which they aim would be no defence in law to the suit (d)

Where a party seeks discovery of documents and the opposite party alleges that the documents are not relevant the procedure to be followed is that laid down in r 19 sub r (a) below A party should not be compelled by means of interrogatories to give discovery of document the relevancy of which is denied (e)

Not exhibited bona fide for the purpose of the suit—Though an interrogatory may be relevant it may be objected to on the ground that it is put with a view to serve an ulterior object beyond the scope of the suit

Not sufficiently material at that stage—An interrogatory may be perfectly relevant to a suit and put bona fide for the purposes of the suit but if it is premature it will not be allowed (f) This may be illustrated by the following cases—

- (1) A sues B for breach of an alleged trust and for profits made by B by such breach B denies the alleged trust A is not entitled to interrogate B so as to require from him an account of profits of the alleged trust fund unless the trust is proved (g) but it is otherwise if the breach of trust is admitted (h)
- (2) In Fennessy v Clark (i) the plaintiff's interrogatories as to the amount of damages were held to be premature as it was not yet decided whether the plaintiff was entitled to any damages at all Cotton J said "The Court is always unwilling before the right to relief is established to make an order for discovery which may be injurious to the defendant and will only be useful to the plaintiff if he succeeds in establishing his title to relief"

Or any other ground—Besides the three specific grounds mentioned in the rule a party interrogated may object to answer an interrogatory on the ground that it is prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous (r 7) or on the grounds specified in the notes to r 1 What interrogatories may not be allowed on p 51 above

Fishing interrogatories not allowed—The questions asked must not be fishing that is to say they must refer to some definite and existing state of circumstances and must not be put merely in the hope of discovering something which may help the party interrogating to make out some case (j) See Ogden on 11 a line 9th Ed p 118 For instances of fishing interrogatories see 41s Kalar v Gobind Das (k)

Contracts by way of wager—In cases where the defence of wager is set up the Court will refuse to allow the party setting up this defence to interrogate his opponent generally as to his business transactions apart from the particular transactions in the suit the reason being that it is manifestly unfair to compel a person to disclose his general dealings on the chance that thereby his opponent may discover something that will support his case (l)

Defamation—Where a statement of claim in an action for slander alleges publication to one named person and publication also to various other persons unnamed it is not generally permissible to ask the defendant whether he uttered the words complained of to any person or persons other than the person named and if so to give their names. Such an interrogatory is a fishing interrogatory the object being to find out some cause of action against the defendant other than the specific cause of action alleged in the plaint (m)

7 [New R S C, O 31, r 7] Any interrogatories may be set aside on the ground that they have been exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, or struck out on the ground that they are prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous, and any application for this purpose may be made within seven days after service of the interrogatories

Setting aside and striking out interrogatories

Setting aside and striking out interrogatories—4 as trustee in the bankruptcy of C sues B for a declaration that a piece of land purchased by B and C in 1883 was purchased by B and C in partnership B denies the partnership A exhibits interrogatories to B asking for particulars of purchases of land by B and C previous and subsequent to 1883 to prove that they had been co partners in various other purchases similar to that of 1883 The interrogatories are irrelevant and oppressive and must be struck out To ask the defendant to take the trouble to go through his books and papers for so many years is vexatious and oppressive (n)

The present rule does not apply where the interrogatories are merely irrelevant. An objection that an interrogatory is irrelevant must be taken in the affidavit in answer (r 6) and is no ground for setting aside the interrogatory under this rule (o)

There is no foundation for the opinion that a person who has a ground for refusing to answer [an interrogatory] is precluded from availing himself of that ground because he has not applied to have the interrogatory struck out (p)

8 [R S C, O 31, r 8, S 126] Interrogatories shall be answered by affidavit to be filed within ten days, or within such other time as the Court may allow

Affidavit in answer

Answers as to matters done by agent or servant of party interrogated—A party to a suit is not excused from answering interrogatories relevant to the question in issue on the ground that they are as to matters which are not within his own knowledge but are only within the knowledge of his agents or servants if such knowledge has been acquired by them in the ordinary course of their employment. He is bound to obtain the information from such agents or servants unless he shows that it would be unreasonable to require him to do so as for instance if either such agents or

11 [R S C O 32 r 11 S 127] Where any person interrogated omits to answer, or answers insufficiently, the party interrogating may apply to the Court for an order requiring him to answer, or to answer further, as the case may be And an order may be made requiring him to answer or answer further, either by affidavit or by in loco examination, as the Court may direct

Order to answer or answer further

Application for further answer to interrogatories—An application for a further answer to interrogatories ought to specify the interrogatories or parts of interrogatories to which a further answer is required (t)

Answers insufficiently—With regard to an answer to interrogatories what the Court has to consider is this simply whether the answer is insufficient not to go into the question of the truthfulness of the answer but to see whether it is sufficient or not and if it is insufficient then only can it require a further answer (u)

When an answer is couched in a form which makes it embarrassing that is to say which prevents the person who asks for it from using it without having thrust upon him irrelevant matters as part of it the answer is insufficient and the proper course to pursue is to ask that a further answer shall be made (v)

Privilege—Where in an answer to interrogatories the party interrogated declines to give further information on the ground of privilege and the privilege is properly claimed in law the Court will not require a further answer to be put in unless it is clearly satisfied either from the nature of the subject matter for which privilege is claimed or from statements in the answer itself or in documents so referred to as to become part of the answer that the claim for privilege cannot possibly be substantiated There is no existence of reasonable suspicion which is sufficient to justify the Court in requiring a further affidavit of documents is not enough when a claim for privilege in an answer

12 [R S C, O 31, r 12, S 129] Any party may, with out filing any affidavit, apply to the Court Application for discovery of documents for an order directing any other party to any suit to make discovery on oath of the documents which are or have been in his possession or power, relating to any matter in question therein. On the hearing of such application the Court may either refuse or adjourn the same, if satisfied that such discovery is not necessary, or not necessary at that stage of the suit, or make such order, either generally or limited to certain classes of documents, as may, in its discretion, be thought fit. Provided that discovery shall not be ordered when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.

13 [R S C, O 31, r 13, S 129, 2nd para] The affidavit Affidavit of documents to be made by a party against whom such order as is mentioned in the last preceding rule has been made, shall specify which (if any) of the documents therein mentioned he objects to produce, and it shall be in Form No 5 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require.

Discovery and production of documents—Besides discovery by way of answer to interrogatories there is another species of discovery called discovery of docu- ments. The parties to a suit may have in their possession or power documents relating to the matters in question in the suit. These documents may be divided into two classes—

- (i) those which the adversary is entitled to inspect and
- (ii) those which he is not entitled to inspect

Documents which belong to class (ii) are described and classified below under the head Grounds of objection to production of documents. As to class (i) it may be said that the adversary is entitled to inspection of all documents which do not come within class (ii). Speaking generally we may say that the adversary is entitled to inspection of all documents which do not of themselves constitute exclusively the party's evidence of his case or title. But how is inspection to be obtained? If A wants to inspect documents in the possession of B which he is entitled to inspect it is clear that he cannot inspect them unless they are produced by B. A must therefore call upon B to produce the documents. But how can A do this unless he knows what documents are in the possession or power of B? To enable him to obtain this information A is entitled to discovery from B of the documents in his possession or power (x). For this purpose A may apply to the Court for an order requiring B to make an affidavit called O 11 affidavit of documents stating what documents are in his possession or power relating to the matters in dispute in the suit. When the Court makes the order B is bound to make his affidavit of documents and if he fails to do so he will be subjected to the penalties specified in r 21 below. After B has disclosed his documents by affidavit A may require him to produce for his inspection such of the documents as he is in law entitled to inspect.

Contents of affidavit of documents—A party who is ordered to make his affidavit of document should set forth in the affidavit all documents which are or have been in his possession or power relating to all matters in question in the suit. As to documents which are not but have been in his possession or power he must state what has become of them and in whose possession they are in order that the opposite party may be enabled to get production from the persons who have possession of them. For the same reason if there are any documents in which he has a joint property with other persons not before the Court he must state the names of those persons. Rule 13 provides that every affidavit of documents should also specify which of the documents therein set forth the declarant objects to produce for the inspection of the opposite party together with the grounds of such objection (see App C Form No 5). These grounds are three in number and are detailed below. The Court examines these grounds when it is called upon to make an order for production of the documents in a party's possession for the inspection of the opposite party (r 14).

Grounds of objection to production of documents—Production of documents can be resisted as of right on three grounds (1) as disclosing the party's evidence (2) as being within the doctrine of legal professional privilege and (3) as being injurious to public interests.

1 A party is not bound to produce for the inspection of his opponent documents which of themselves evidence exclusively the party's own case or title (y)—Documents constituting evidence of the party's case or title are not protected unless they are solely or exclusively evidence of it. Where a document is or may be evidence for the adversary as well as the party the party cannot withhold inspection of it from the adversary (z) although his own evidence may be thus disclosed (a). It is not enough for a man to say such and such documents are the title deeds of his property: it is no ground for refusing their production if they are necessary to support the adversary's case (b). But a document is protected from production and inspection if it exclusively evidences a party's own case and does not support the adversary's case (c). To entitle the party to this protection the privilege must be properly claimed: that he must state in his affidavit that the documents constitute evidence of his own case or title, that they contain nothing supporting or tending to support the adversary's case or title, and that they contain nothing impugning his own case or title (d). As to discovery in actions of ejectment see notes to r 1 above. What interrogatories may be allowed.

3 safely and effectually (f) The following are amongst the confidential communications between a client and his legal adviser that are protected from production and inspection (1) statement of facts drawn up by the client for submission to his solicitor and documents prepared by him for the purpose of providing the solicitor with evidence and information for the conduct of his case (g) (2) advice given by the solicitor with reference thereto (h) (3) entries in the solicitor's diary of communications between himself and his client (i) (4) memoranda or minutes made by the client of the communications between himself and the solicitor (j) (v) communications between solicitor and counsel with reference to the client's case (k) (6) draft pleadings (l) (7) case laid before counsel for his opinion and other briefs for counsel (m) (8) solicitor's bill of costs for it is virtually the solicitor's history of the transaction in which he was concerned (n) But the communication is not privileged unless it is of a confidential nature (o) And further it must have been made to the legal adviser with a view to obtain professional advice (p) It is not necessary that it should have been made either during an actual or even an expected litigation. A communication with a legal adviser is protected though it relates to a transaction which is not the subject of litigation provided it is a communication made to him for the purpose of obtaining professional advice (q) But no privilege attaches to communications between a solicitor and his client which are in themselves facts of a criminal or unlawful proceeding (r) Where one of the trustees of a will is a solicitor and acts as the solicitor for the trustees communications passing between him and his co-trustees which would be privileged if the solicitor were not a trustee are privileged notwithstanding that he is a trustee (s) But confidential communications between a principal and an agent who is not a legal agent e.g. a commercial agent are not privileged whether they are made after litigation has become imminent and after legal advice has been taken or even after litigation has commenced (t) Similarly reports made by a servant to his master regarding the subject matter of the suit are not privileged (u) See Evidence Act 1872 ss 126 129

3 A party is not bound to produce any public official document if its production would be injurious to public interests (t)—This head of privilege applies as a rule when a party to a suit is a public officer See Evidence Act 1872 ss 193 124

In all the three heads of privilege mentioned above the privilege must be claimed in the affidavit of documents and the grounds of privilege must be sufficiently disclosed If the affidavit of documents does not sufficiently raise the claim of privilege the party may be allowed to put in a further affidavit in support of that claim (w)

Is a party bound to give discovery of documents which will tend to criminate him or expose him to a penalty or forfeiture? No according to the English law (x) But apparently yes according to the Indian law See Evidence Act s 132 where the term witness obviously includes a party to a suit

Conclusiveness of affidavit of documents Further affidavit—If a party states in his affidavit of documents that he has no documents relating to the matters in question in the suit other than those set forth in the affidavit his oath is conclusive and the other party cannot cross examine upon it nor adduce evidence to contradict it nor administer interrogatories asking whether he has not in his possession or power documents other than those set forth in his affidavit (y) The oath of the party being conclusive the Court will not order him to make a further affidavit of documents though the opponent may state on oath that the party has got other documents in his possession (z) the reason being that in all questions of discovery the oath of the party making the discovery is conclusive as against the oath of the party claiming the discovery (a) The only case in which the Court may require a party to make a further affidavit is where there is a reasonable probability or presumption or even ground for suspicion derived from certain sources that he has other relevant documents in his possession (b) The sources into which the Court may look for this purpose are (1) the affidavit of documents itself (c) the documents therein referred to and (3) the pleadings (c) Unless the affidavit is shown from any of these sources to be insufficient the general rule is that no further affidavit can be ordered But this rule is qualified where the basis on which the affidavit has been made turns out to be wrong Thus if the party making the affidavit has misconceived his case so that the Court is practically certain that if he had acted on a proper view of the law he would have disclosed further documents then the Court will refuse to recognise the affidavit as conclusive and order a further affidavit (d)

The affidavit of documents is also conclusive as to the facts constituting the ground of objection to production Thus if a party sets forth five documents in his affidavit and objects to produce two of them on the assertion that they relate exclusively to his own title and that they contain nothing tending to support the adversary's title the Court will not go behind the affidavit (e) and will not order production unless the Court is reasonably satisfied or reasonably certain from the sources specified in the preceding paragraph that the nature of the documents as described by the party has been misconceived by the party or that the documents are of such a character that the party cannot properly make such an assertion (f) Veré suspicion that the documents are not of the character described by the party though it is sufficient to justify the Court in ordering the party to make a further affidavit of documents (see preceding paragraph) does not entitle the Court to order their production (g)

In a suit for the price of material supplied to the defendant in which the defence was that the materials were defective the defendant objected to produce his engineer's report on the ground that it formed evidence of his own case exclusively but the Court ordered production on the ground that the defendant had set forth the nature of the report in his written statement and the statement showed that the report was not of the character described by the defendant (h)

Several plaintiffs or several defendants—Where there are several plaintiffs or several defendants all must join in making the affidavit of documents unless some specific reasons to the contrary are shown. The fact that some of the parties reside in England is no reason why they should be excused from making such affidavit (x).

Minors and lunatics—The next friend or guardian ad litem as the case may be of a minor or a lunatic may be required to make an affidavit of documents (r 23).

Affidavit of documents from a co-defendant—An affidavit of documents may be required by a defendant from a co-defendant if there is an issue joined between them but not otherwise (t). See notes to r 1 above. Opposite party.

Advocate General—No order can be made against the Advocate General whether he be plaintiff or defendant requiring him to give discovery on oath. Hence no affidavit of documents can be required from the Advocate General. But an affidavit of documents may be required from the relators (u). See s 9.

Official Liquidator—The Official Liquidator being an officer of the Court should not in the absence of special circumstances be required to make an affidavit as to documents in his possession though he is bound to produce to the adverse litigant the documents which the latter requires to see (z).

Marine Insurance—The affidavit of ship's papers which underwriters are entitled to require from the plaintiff in an action on a policy of marine insurance on cargo is not limited to documents in the possession of the plaintiff or other persons interested in the insurance but extends to all material documents in whomsoever's possession they may be (w).

Sealing up parts of documents—Where one part of a document relates to matter in dispute in the suit and another part does not the latter may be sealed up and so concealed from inspection. Similarly where protection from discovery can be claimed for one part of a document and not for another part the part which can be protected may be sealed up (x). In some cases the Judge has ordered the sealed parts to be unstamped in order that he might inspect them himself (v). See r 19 sub r (2).

Duty of solicitor—Where after a party has made his affidavit of documents his solicitor finds that there are other documents which have not been disclosed it is the duty of the solicitor to bring those documents to the notice of his opponent at the earliest possible opportunity (y).

Inspection of property being subject matter of suit—See O 39 r 7(1)(a).

A party is entitled under this rule to inspection of letters referred to in an affidavit of the opposite party though the affidavit has not been filed provided it is sworn and a copy thereof is furnished to him (z)

Inspection by party or his pleader—No one is entitled under this rule to inspection except a party or his pleader. The term party includes the authorized agent of the party (w). But if such agent was formerly in the employ of the opposite party and in charge of his books the Court ought not to permit inspection to be taken by him (x).

16 [R S C, O 31, r 16] Notice to any party to produce any documents referred to in his pleading or affidavits shall be in Form No 7 in Appendix C with such variations as circumstances may require inspection or objects to give inspection, or offers inspection elsewhere than at the office of his pleader, the Court may, on the application of the party desiring it make an order for inspection in such place and in such manner as it may think fit. Provided that the order shall not be made when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.

(2) Any application to inspect documents, except such as are referred to in the pleadings, particulars or affidavits of the party against whom the application is made or disclosed in his affidavits of documents, shall be founded upon an affidavit showing of what documents inspection is sought, that the party applying is entitled to inspect them, and that they are in the possession or power of the other party. The Court shall not make such order for inspection of such documents when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.

Served with notice — No order for inspection can be made under this rule unless notice has been served under r. 10 (a).

Sub rule (2) — This sub rule provides for the inspection amongst others of documents not disclosed in the affidavit of documents and the Court may under this sub rule direct a party to give inspection of such documents. But an opportunity should be given to such party to make an affidavit in answer and if he in such affidavit denies possession of the document the affidavit will be conclusive on that fact (b). But he cannot merely rely on his previous affidavit of documents in answer to an application under this sub rule for such an affidavit is conclusive for the purposes only of discovery as distinguished from inspection (c).

Appeal — No appeal lies under the Code from an order for inspection. Nor does an appeal lie under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent for an order directing inspection to be given is not a judgment within the meaning of that clause (d).

Bankers Books Evidence Act — In ordering inspection under the Bankers Books Evidence Act 1891 the Court is guided by the general rule regulating the inspection of documents before trial (e).

Provided that, notwithstanding that such copy has been supplied, the Court may order inspection of the book from which the copy was made.

(2) Where on an application for an order for inspection privilege is claimed for any document, it shall be lawful for the Court to inspect the document for the purpose of deciding as to the validity of the claim of privilege.

(3) The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit at any time, and whether an affidavit of documents shall or shall not have already been ordered or made, make an order requiring any other party to state by affidavit whether any one or more specific documents, to be specified in the application, is or are, or has or have at any time been, in his possession or power, and, if not then in his possession, when he parted with the same and what has become thereof. Such application shall be made on an affidavit stating that in the belief of the deponent the party against whom the application is made has, or has at some time had, in his possession or power the document or documents specified in the application and that they relate to the matters in question in the suit, or to some of them.

Specific documents.—To justify an application under sub r (3) the party making the application must in his affidavit name and specify so that they can be identified the particular documents of which he desires discovery. It is not sufficient to make a general affidavit based on a priori reasoning that certain classes of documents must be in his opponent's possession or power (f).

20 [R S C, O 31, r 20 S 135] Where the party from whom discovery of any kind or inspection is sought objects to the same, or any part thereof, the Court may, if satisfied that the right to the discovery or inspection sought depends on the determination of any issue or question in dispute in the suit, or that for any other reason it is desirable that any issue or question in dispute in the suit should be determined before deciding upon the right to the discovery or inspection, order that such issue or question be determined first, and reserve the question as to the discovery or inspection.

Issue to decide upon right to inspection—The object of the rule is to enable the Court to decide an issue in a suit as distinguished from the suit itself for the purposes of discovery (g) See notes to r 6 above Not sufficiently material at that stage

21 [R S C O 31, r 21, S 136] Where any party fails to comply with any order to answer interrogatories, or for discovery or inspection of documents he shall, if a plaintiff, be liable to have his suit dismissed for want of prosecution, and if a defendant, to have his defence, if any, struck out, and to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended, and the party interrogating or seeking discovery or inspection may apply to the Court for an order to that effect, and an order may be made accordingly

Dismissal of suit—This rule cannot be applied unless there has been an order for discovery under r 12 or for inspection under r 18 (h) And even where such an order has been made it is only when the default is wilful and as a last resort that the Court should dismiss the suit or strike out the defence (i) If the parties concerned are purdanashin ladies this should be taken into account before making the order (j) The word production which occurred after discovery in the corresponding s 136 of the Code of 1892 has been omitted in the present rule It has hence been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (k) and Madras (l) that this rule does not apply to cases where there has been non compliance with an order for production of documents made under r 14 According to a Lahore decision (m) this rule applies also to orders made under r 14

Contempt—Besides the penalty prescribed by this rule a party to a suit filed in a Chartered High Court who has failed to answer or give inspection is liable to be committed for contempt by that Court This power has been conferred on Chartered High Courts by their Letters Patent (n) An order of commitment for contempt is appealable according to the Bombay decisions (o) but not according to the Allahabad decisions (p)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule under O 43 r 1 (f) below (q)

ORDER XII

Admissions

1 [R S C, O 32, r 1] Any party to a suit may give notice, by his pleading, or otherwise in writing, that he admits the truth of the whole or any part of the case of any other party

Different kinds of admissions—The object of obtaining admissions is to do away with the necessity of proving facts that are admitted [see Evidence Act 18, s 58] Admissions are of three kinds namely—

I Admissions in pleading—

- (1) actual that is those contained in the pleadings (O 7 r 5) or in answer to interrogatories (O 11 r 22)
- (2) constructive that is those which are merely the consequence of the form of pleading adopted (O 8 rr 3 4 5)

II Admissions by agreement

III Admissions by notice

Admissions by notice are dealt with in this Order

The importance of admission consists in the fact that either party may at any stage of the suit move for judgment on the admissions made by the other side (r 6)

2 [R S C, O 32, r 2, S 128] Either party may call upon the other party to admit any document, saving all just exceptions, and in case of refusal or neglect to admit, after such notice, the costs of proving any such document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs, and no

costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice is given, except where the omission to give the notice is, in the opinion of the Court, a saving of expense

Admissions between co defendants—Admissions between co defendants to which the plaintiff is not a party cannot be entered as evidence against the plaintiff (r)

3 [New R S C O 32, r 3] A notice to admit documents shall be in Form No 9 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

Form of notice

4 [New R S C, O 32 r 4] Any party may, by notice in writing, at any time not later than nine days before the day fixed for the hearing, call on any other party to admit, for the purposes of the suit only, any specific fact or facts mentioned in such notice. And in case of refusal or neglect to admit the same within six days after service of such notice, or within such further time as may be allowed by the Court, the costs of proving such fact or facts shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs. Provided that any admission made in pursuance of such notice is to be deemed to be made only for the purposes of the particular suit, and not as an admission to be used against the party on any other occasion or in favour of any person other than the party giving the notice. Provided also that the Court may at any time allow any party to amend or withdraw any admission so made on such terms as may be just

Notice to admit facts

5 [New R S C O 32, r 5] A notice to admit facts shall be in Form No 10 in Appendix C, and admissions of facts shall be in Form No 11 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require

Form of admissions

6 [New R S C, O 32, r 6] Any party may at any stage of a suit, where admissions of fact have been made, either on the pleadings, or otherwise, apply to the Court for such judgment or order as upon such admissions he may be entitled to, without waiting for determination of any other question between the parties and the Court may upon such application make such order, or give such judgment, as the Court may think just

Scope of the rule—This rule is new. It is a reproduction of O 3<sup>a</sup> r 6 of the English Rules. It enables either party at any stage of the suit to move for judgment on the admissions which have been made by the other side. Either party may, by availing himself of this rule, get rid of so much of the suit as to which there is no controversy (s). The rule however is permissive: it does not preclude a party who does not avail himself of it and proceeds to trial in the ordinary way from relying at the trial on the admissions made by the opposite party (t).

The Court may make such order or give such judgment as the Court may think just — A judgment on admissions is not a matter of right but is in the discretion of the Court. If a case involves questions which cannot be conveniently disposed of on a motion under this rule the Court may in the exercise of its discretion refuse the motion (u).

There is no hard and fast rule that where the defendant admits part of the plaintiff's claim and denies the rest of the claim the Court should if it gives judgment under this rule for the plaintiff as to the portion of the claim admitted by the defendant refuse to allow the plaintiff to proceed with the suit as to the remainder of his claim. If there is a clear and unambiguous admission by the defendant as to part of the plaintiff's claim the Court has jurisdiction to enter judgment as to that part of the plaintiff's claim and it is in its discretion having regard to the nature of the case and the allegations contained in the pleadings and the admissions made in Court whether it should allow the plaintiff to proceed to prove the remainder of his claim (i) A sues B for Rs 8,800. B admits that only Rs 4,500 are due and alleges as to the rest of A's claim that it was in respect of goods as to which there was a separate arrangement between the parties. The issue as to the balance of A's claim being an issue independent of the other part of the claim the Court may pass judgment for A for Rs 4,500 and give leave to A to prove his claim to the balance. It is clear that even if the issue as to the balance of A's claim were decided in B's favour it would not having regard to B's admission reduce A's claim below Rs 4,500 (ii)

In the United Telephone Co v Donohoe (x) the plaintiffs sued the defendant for infringement of a patent claiming injunction and damages. The defendant admitted ten instances of infringement but denied he had committed any others. The plaintiffs thereupon moved for judgment upon the admissions in the pleadings. In the Court of first instance the Vice Chancellor granted an injunction against infringement by the defendant of the plaintiffs patent but he refused an enquiry as to damages. The Court of Appeal held that the plaintiffs were entitled to an enquiry as to damage but that it must be limited to the instances of infringement admitted and that the judgment having been obtained upon a motion for judgment upon the pleadings the plaintiffs were bound to take the negative as well as the affirmative allegations therein. I referring to this case Sanderson C J said in the Calcutta case cited above (y) that the question whether the Judge who in the first instance heard the application would have had jurisdiction to give judgment on the admissions and to allow the plaintiffs to proceed to prove the rest of their claim as to the other alleged infringements if such an application had been made was not before the Court.

Admissions on pleadings—Under this rule either party may move for judgment upon admissions of fact made on the pleadings or otherwise. Admissions in pleadings are either actual or constructive. Actual admissions consist of facts expressly admitted either in pleadings or in answer to interrogatories [O 11 r 22]. The patent case cited in the preceding paragraph is an instance of actual admissions. Constructive admissions on the other hand are admissions which are inferred or implied from pleadings as a consequence of the form of pleading adopted [O 8 rr 3 4 5]. Constructive admissions usually arise where a defendant has not specifically dealt with some allegation of fact in the plaint of which he does not admit the truth [O 8 r 3] for as we have seen every allegation of fact in the plaint if not denied specifically or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted in the written statement will be taken to be admitted except as against persons under disability [O 8 r 5]. Constructive admissions also arise where a defendant denies an allegation of fact in the plaint exactly and does not answer the point of substance [O 8 r 1].

Illustrations

1. A alleging that he and B having agreed to carry on certain business in partnership, draft articles of partnership were prepared and approved by B and that they both thereupon proceeded with the partnership undertaking, sues B for a declaration that he and B were partners and claims that the partnership may be dissolved. B in his written statement admits that he agreed to enter into partnership as alleged by A but adds that terms of the arrangement between himself and the plaintiff were not definitely agreed upon as alleged. This is an express denial of the fact of partnership [O 8 r 4] and it will therefore be construed as an admission by B of the partnership. A is therefore entitled under this rule to a decree for dissolution of partnership without adducing any evidence to prove the partnership. But though the written statement will be construed as an admission of the fact of partnership it will not be construed as an admission of the terms of the partnership. B may therefore claim an inquiry as to the terms of the arrangement of partnership and if such inquiry is claimed the Court will direct it by its decree (i).

2. A defendant by his written statement simply puts the plaintiff to proof of the several allegations in the plaint. The denial not being specific [O 8 r 3] the defendant will be deemed to have admitted the facts alleged in the plaint [O 8 r 5] so as to entitle the plaintiff to a decree under this rule without adducing any evidence in support of his case (a).

In applying the present rule in India it is to be noted that when a plaintiff applies for a decree upon conclusive admission in a written statement the Court may in its discretion refuse to pass the decree if it thinks in the special circumstances of the case that the defendant must not be held to have admitted facts not specifically admitted in his written statement (f). See the proviso to r. of O 8 and notes thereto.

An order on admissions on the pleadings will not be made unless the admissions are clear and unequivocal (c). Moreover a plaintiff moving for judgment on admissions in the defendant's written statement must have a clear case and the mere admission by the defendant of a right asserted by the plaintiff but which he in fact exercises in law is not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a judgment establishing his right (d).

Judgment upon admissions made otherwise than on pleadings—A judgment may be given under this rule not only upon admissions made in the pleadings but upon admissions otherwise made. The words or otherwise in this rule are not confined to admissions made under r 1 or r 4 of this Order but are of general application and justify the giving of an immediate judgment when an admission is made by letter of facts which show that the defendant has no defence to the action (e). A judgment may be given under this rule even upon a verbal admission if it is clearly proved (f).

Orders which may be made under this rule—This rule was framed for the express purpose that if there was no dispute between the parties and if there was on the pleadings such an admission as to make it plain that the plaintiff was entitled to a particular order he should be able to obtain that order at once upon motion. It must however be such an admission of facts as would show that the plaintiff is clearly entitled to the order asked for whether it be in the nature of a decree or a judgment or anything else. The rule was not meant to apply when there is any serious question of law to be argued. But if there is an admission on the pleadings which clearly entitled the plaintiff to an order then the intention was that he should not have to wait but might at once obtain any order which could have been made on an original hearing of the action (g). An order amounting to what is called a preliminary decree in this Code may appropriately be made under this rule upon a simple motion. Where such an order was applied for under the corresponding English rule by a plaintiff in a suit for partition and the defendant contended that that would be giving a decree to the plaintiff and that the plaintiff should wait until the action was set down for trial the Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to an order directing the usual inquiries upon the admissions of the defendant and that he was not bound to wait (h) [O 20 r 18]. Such orders have also been made in administration actions (i) [O 20 r 19] in actions for dissolution of partnership (j) [O 20 r 15] in actions for partnership accounts (k) [O 20 r 14], in actions for accounts between principal and agent (l) [O 20 r 16] and in actions for the execution of the trusts of a settlement (m).

Practice—Motions in England under the corresponding English rule are brought on upon an ordinary motion day after notice to the other side. As to form of application see Daniel's Ch. Forms 270. The practice in England is when an order is made amounting to what is called a preliminary decree in this Code to adjourn the further hearing of the case without requiring any further prior hearing the words generally used in the order being and without requiring any further prior hearing than this motion of the said cause the further hearing of the said cause is adjourned (n). See Beeton on Decrees Vol I p 399 Form No 5.

At any stage—A plaintiff may move for judgment upon admissions at the written statement at any stage of the suit and notwithstanding that he has joined in on the defence (o).

Co plaintiffs—An application under this rule for an order against a defendant on admissions of fact must be made by all the plaintiffs and not merely by some of them. If the application is made by some of the plaintiffs only it must be refused (p).

ORDER XIII

Production, Impounding and Return of Documents

1 [Ss 135 140] (1) The parties or their pleaders shall produce, at the first hearing of the suit, all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely and which has not already been filed in Court, and all documents which the Court has ordered to be produced

Documentary evidence to be produced at first hearing

O 13,

(2) The Court shall receive the documents so produced provided that they are accompanied by an accurate list thereof prepared in such form as the High Court directs

Shall produce at the first hearing —This rule does not exclude the discretion of the Court to receive documentary evidence at a subsequent stage of the proceedings (a) See r 2 below and note

Form of list of documents produced by Parties—See App H Form no 3

2 [S 139] No documentary evidence in the possession or power of any party which should have been but has not been produced in accordance with the requirements of rule 1 shall be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings unless good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non production thereof, and the Court receiving any such evidence shall record the reasons for so doing

Unless good cause is shown —This rule has been enacted to prevent fraud by the late production of suspicious documents But no suspicion can attach to certified copies of public documents such as records of Government or records of judicial proceeding Such copies therefore may be received in evidence though they have not been produced at the first hearing (f) The rule however is not confined to public documents only The Court may in its discretion admit other documents also at a subsequent stage of the proceedings (u) See notes to r 1 above

Appeal—The fact that further documentary evidence is admitted after the first hearing is not a good ground of appeal (v) Nor can an appellate Court reject evidence admitted by the Court of first instance simply on that ground (w)

3 [S 140] The Court may at any stage of the suit reject any document which it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible, recording the grounds of such rejection

Rejection of inadmissible documents—Questions as to the admissibility of evidence should be decided as they arise and should not be reserved until judgment in the case is given (x)

When a Court is doubtful as to whether a document is admissible or not and its decision is open to appeal it is better to admit than to exclude the document (y)

Shall be endorsed.—The rule as to endorsement of documents admitted in evidence must be strictly followed. In Sadik Hu san Khan v Hashim Ali Khan (2) where some of the documents were not so endorsed the Judicial Committee said

Their Lordships, with a view of insisting on the observance of the wholesome provisions of this rule will in order to prevent injustice be obliged in future on the hearing of Indian appeals to refuse to read or permit to be used any document not endorsed in the manner required. Documents admitted on the record without making the endorsement prescribed by this rule cannot be regarded as being legally before the Court (a) but documents should not be endorsed until they are proved (b). Where a document has been duly proved and put in before a commissioner appointed to take evidence and endorsed by him it becomes part of the record and is evidence notwithstanding the fact that the trial Court did not endorse it as required by this rule (c). The High Court of Madras has held that a mere endorsement under this rule does not necessarily imply that the Court has considered the question of the admissibility of the document (d).

ORDER XIV

Settlement of Issues and Determination of Suit on Issues of Law or on Issues agreed upon

1 1 [ S 146 ] (1) Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one
Material issues party and denied by the other

(2) Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence

(3) Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other shall form the subject of a distinct issue

(4) Issues are of two kinds (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law

(5) At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to depend

(6) Nothing in this rule requires the Court to frame and record issues where the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence

Of the framing of issues—The plaint and written statement in a suit are called pleadings [O 6 r 1]. Section 53 of the Evidence Act enacts that no fact need be proved at the hearing which a party has admitted by his pleadings unless the Court requires proof thereof. Admissions on pleadings may be either actual or constructive (g) [O 8 rr 3 & 4]. Issues are to be framed in respect only of those facts which have been alleged by one party and either denied or not admitted by the other party (h). They must however be confined to material facts that is to points on which the right decision of the case depends. The practice of raising issues which do not state the main questions in the suit but only various subsidiary matters of fact upon which there is not agreement between the parties is embarrassing and must be avoided (i). Where an issue though in terms covering the main question in the cause does not sufficiently direct the attention of the parties to the main questions of fact necessary to be decided and a party may have been prevented from adducing evidence a fresh issue may be directed to try the principal question of fact (j).

The duty of raising issues rests under the Code of Civil Procedure on the Court and it would be unsafe to presume from the failure of the Court to raise the necessary issues an intention of the defendant to admit the facts which the plaintiff was bound to prove (k). See also notes to O 8 r 5.

Omission to frame issues—When a material fact stated in the plaint is denied or is not admitted in the written statement the Court must frame an issue on the fact denied. What is the consequence of an omission to frame an issue of fact? The answer depends on the following considerations. If though no issue is framed on the fact the parties adduce evidence on the fact and discuss it before the Court and the Court decides the point as if there was an issue framed on it the decision will not be set aside in appeal on the ground merely that no issue was framed. The reason is that mere omission to frame an issue is not fatal to the trial of a suit (l). But if the point denied in the written statement is not tried at all or if tried is tried imperfectly so as to cause failure of justice the case will in appeal be remanded for a re-trial after framing the necessary issue (m). In other words omission to frame an issue is an irregularity which may or may not affect the disposal of a suit on the merits. If it does the appellate Court should remand the case for a new trial to the lower Court after framing the necessary issue. If it does not the appellate Court should not remand the case (n). In Mitna v S. J. F. & Co. (n) their Lordships of the Privy Council said—

In this case the omission to raise the issues was brought before the notice of the appellate Court. The appellate Court expressed its regret and their Lordships are glad

1 to observe that it did express its regret that the Principal Sudder Ameen had omitted to settle the issues. The [appellate] Court however nevertheless conceived that it was not under any positive obligation to remand the case but seeing that the parties had gone to trial knowing what the real question between them was that the evidence had been taken and that the conclusion had been in the opinion of the appellate Court correctly drawn from that evidence they thought it within their competence to affirm that decision without sending the case back for a re-trial. Their Lordships sitting here are not prepared to say that the Court had not power to do so under the 35th section [now O 41 r 25] of the Civil Procedure Code. Their Lordships think that under all the circumstances of the case substantial justice having been done there has not been that fatal mis-trial of the cause which vitiates all the proceedings and renders a new trial necessary.

Delay in raising an issue—In Sayad Muhammad v Fattah Muhammad (o) their Lordships of the Privy Council said. It does not quite appear at what period of the suit the question of the sound disposing mind of the Diwan was raised nor is it very material except in one respect. Whatever system of pleading may exist the sole object of it is that each side may be fully alive to the questions that are about to be argued in order that they may have an opportunity of bringing forward such evidence as may be appropriate to the issue and it may perhaps be not altogether immaterial to observe that the question of the capacity of the Diwan does not appear to have been prominently raised at all events in the first instance. Their Lordships are however of opinion that they must assume that the question of his capacity was open upon the proceedings sufficiently to give each Court below the right to form a judgment upon the matter.

Wrong issue—If the first Court frames and tries wrong issues the appellate Court should lay down the proper issues and remand the case for a new trial (p). This is however not necessary if the first Court frames a wrong issue but the judgment gives a finding on the correct issue. In such a case the appellate Court need not remand the case (g).

Relief not founded on pleadings—As a rule relief not founded on the pleading should not be granted. But where the substantial matters which constitute the title of all the parties are touched though obscurely in the issues and they have been fully put in evidence and have formed the main subject of discussion in the Court the Court may grant a relief though it may not be founded on the pleadings. Thus in a case where the plaintiff and the defendant each claims to be exclusively entitled to certain lands the Court may if the above conditions are satisfied declare each to be entitled to a moiety (r). Similarly the Court may in a suit for ejectment pass a decree for redemption (s). But if a case not alleged by the plaintiff in his pleading is disclosed in the evidence the Court should not deal with it unless a specific issue is raised on it and the defendant is given an opportunity of meeting it (t).

Variance between pleading and proof—It is impossible to conclude parties by inferences of fact which are not only not consistent with the allegations that are to be found in the pleadings which constitute the case which the defendant has to meet but which are in reality contradictory of the case made by the plaintiff. It will introduce the greatest amount of uncertainty into judicial proceedings if the final determination of causes is to be founded upon inferences at variance with the case that the plaintiff has pleaded and by joining issue in the cause has undertaken to prove (u).

This principle applies only to cardinal facts and cardinal issues and not to subordinate facts and issues based thereon. In applying the principle the whole of the circumstances must be taken into account and carefully scrutinized (1)

2 [ S 146 6th para ] Where issues both of law and of

Issues of law and of fact

Issues of law and of fact
fact arise in the same suit, and the Court is of opinion that the case or any part thereof may be disposed of on the issues of law only, it shall try those issues first, and for that purpose may, if it thinks fit, postpone the settlement of the issue of fact until after the issues of law have been determined.

Or any part thereof —These words are new

cases may be framed

3 [S 147] The Court may frame the issues from all or any of the following materials —

- (a) allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any persons present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties,
- (b) allegations made in the pleadings or in answers to interrogatories delivered in the suit,
- (c) the contents of documents produced by either party

Issues not to be inconsistent with pleadings—Issues whether raised from the allegations in the pleadings or from other materials should not be inconsistent with the pleadings (u). Thus if issues B to set aside a document on the ground that it was not executed by him and that it is a forgery the Court should not raise an issue as to whether the document was executed under coercion or undue influence. The latter ~~assumes~~ assumes that the document was executed by the plaintiff while the case set up by the plaintiff is that it was not executed by him at all (x). But the plea that the document in suit was obtained by the defendant by fraud is not inconsistent with the fact that it was obtained by undue influence. Therefore where fraud is pleaded in the defence and the plaintiff's counsel alleges at the hearing that the plaintiff was subjected to undue influence the Court may allow issues both as to fraud and undue influence (y).

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order refusing to frame an issue as to whether a party to a suit ( )

The High Court of Madras once held that an appeal lies under cl. 1 Patent from an order made at the settlement of issues fixing a distant date of the suit (a). But this decision has been disapproved in later cases.

May amend the issues or frame additional issues—As a general rule the Court should not frame even additional issues from materials other than those specified above in r 3 Lodhasappa v Pradhanappa (1925) 27 Bom L P 1318 91 I C 426 (b) A B 33 The Court may however under special circumstances allow issues to be raised upon a matter which does not strictly come within the proper scope of the proceedings provided no injustice is done to either party (d) It follows that the Court should not frame any additional issue so as to make for either party a case which he had no intention of making for himself (e) Nor should it frame an additional issue so as to convert a suit or defence of one character into a suit or defence of a different and inconsistent character Thus if A sues B for damages for wrongful occupation of his land treating B as a trespasser he should not be allowed to raise an additional issue claiming rent of the land from B treating him as his tenant (f) But if a suit is brought on a mortgage and it transpires at the hearing that the witnesses to the mortgage deed were not present at its execution but had put their names on the document on the acknowledgment by the executant of his signature it is perfectly competent to the Judge to frame an additional issue as to whether the deed of mortgage was valid under s 59 of the Transfer of Property Act though the invalidity of the deed is not set up as a defence in the written statement

Disposal of the Suit at the first hearing

1 [S 152] Where at the first hearing of a suit it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment

Parties not at issue

2 [S 153] Where there are more defendants than one, and any one of the defendants is not at issue with the plaintiff on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for or against such defendant and the suit shall proceed only against the other defendants

One of several defendants not at issue

Admission of claim by one of several defendants—A sues B and C upon a promissory note jointly passed by them. B appears and admits the claim and a decree is passed against him. The decree against B is no bar to the further prosecution of the suit against C (1). See notes to O 1 r 6. Joint liability on a contract

3 [S 154] (1) Where the parties are at issue on some question of law or of fact, and issues have been framed by the Court as hereinafore provided, if the Court is satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once adduce is required upon such of the issues as may be sufficient for the decision of the suit and that no injustice will result from proceeding with the suit forthwith, the Court may proceed to determine such issues, and, if the finding thereon is sufficient for the decision, may pronounce judgment accordingly, whether the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit

Parties at issue

Provided that, where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the parties or their pleaders are present and none of them objects

(2) Where the finding is not sufficient for the decision, the Court shall postpone the further hearing of the suit, and shall fix a day for the production of such further evidence, or for such further argument as the case requires

4 [S 155] Where the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit and either party fails without sufficient cause to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment, or may, if it thinks fit, after framing and recording issues, adjourn the suit for the production of such evidence as may be necessary for its decision upon such issues

ORDER XVI

Summoning and Attendance of Witnesses

1 [S 159] At any time after the suit is instituted, the parties may obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents

Difference between the old section and the present rule—This rule corresponds with s 159 C P C 1852 except as to the time for application for witness summonses for which see next paragraph

Time for application for witness summonses—Under s 159 of the Code of 1852 the application for summonses to witnesses was to be made after the writ of summons was delivered or sent for service on the defendant and before the day fixed in the summons for the appearance of the defendant Under the present rule the application may be made at any time after the institution of the suit

Whether witness summonses can be refused—A party is entitled as of right to summonses to witnesses (j) So long as the application is made after the institution of the suit the Court is bound to issue the summons It does not matter that the party has himself originally undertaken to bring his witnesses and has failed to do so (k) Nor does it matter that the application is made at such a late stage of the proceedings that the witnesses cannot be present in Court before the final disposal of the suit (l) The Court may in either of the cases refuse to allow the application for the attendance of the witness but it has no power to refuse to issue summonses (m) The only case in which the Court has power to refuse to issue summonses is where the application is not made bona fide as where a decree holder attaches property belonging to a muth and on the head of the muth objecting to the attachment applies to summon him as his own witness requiring his personal attendance in Court with the sole object of putting pressure upon him to relinquish his claim In such a case the Court may in the exercise of its inherent power to prevent the abuse of its own process [s 101] refuse to issue the summonses (n)

Remedy of party when witness summons refused—Where a party applies for summonses to witnesses but the application is refused he cannot appeal from the order of refusal He must wait until the suit is disposed of and if the decree in the suit goes against him he may appeal from the decree and set forth the refusal of the lower Court to issue summonses as a ground of objection in the memorandum of appeal (s 100) If the appellate Court finds that the refusal has injuriously affected the decision of the case it may set aside the decree and direct the lower Court to issue the summonses but if it finds that the refusal has not injuriously affected the decision it should not interfere with the decree (o) [see s 99]

The reason is that a witness is entitled to demand his travelling expenses at any time even after he has given his evidence (g). If a witness is summoned by the plaintiff he is entitled to claim his travelling expenses from the plaintiff though he has not been examined by the plaintiff but is examined by the defendant as his witness (r). See also the undermentioned case (s).

Remedy of witness if travelling expenses not paid—The only remedy is by an application to the Court that heard the case—no separate suit will lie to recover such expenses (1)

Default on part of process server—Where a plaintiff pays into Court the process fee and the expenses of his witness but the summons is not served owing to default on the part of the process server it is illegal to dismiss his suit for want of proof in the absence of the witness (u)

He need only be warned that his attendance will be required on the day to which the hearing may be postponed (w)

(2) Where the Court sees reason to believe that such evidence or production is material, and that such person has, without lawful excuse, failed to attend or to produce the document in compliance with such summons or has intentionally avoided service, it may issue a proclamation requiring him to attend to give evidence or to produce the document at a time and place to be named therein, and a copy of such proclamation shall be affixed on the outer door or other conspicuous part of the house in which he ordinarily resides

(3) In lieu of or at the time of issuing such proclamation, or at any time afterwards, the Court may, in its discretion, issue a warrant, either with or without bail, for the arrest of such person, and may make an order for the attachment of his property to such amount as it thinks fit, not exceeding the amount of the costs of attachment and of any fine which may be imposed under rule 12

Provided that if the person whose attendance is required pays into Court the costs and fine aforesaid, the Court shall order the property to be released from attachment

Scope of the rule—P 11 applies to the case where the person served appears and satisfies the Court as to his failure to appear. The present rule applies to the case where the person does not appear or appears but fails so to satisfy the Court (y)

Imposition of fine—Neither the issue of a proclamation nor an order for attachment under r 10 above is a condition precedent to the imposition of a fine under this rule ( )

Order releasing property from attachment—In a case under the Code of 1882 the Court accepted the fine and costs even after sale of the property attached and refused to confirm the sale as the price realised was absurdly low. The auction purchaser appealed from the order but it was held that no appeal lay from the order (α). If a similar case arises under the new Code it will have to be considered in the light of rule 13 of this Order and of O 21 r 89 [which cannot apply unless the Crown is regarded as a decree holder] r 90 and r 91.

ORDER XVII

Adjournments

- 1 [S 156] (1) The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, at any stage of the suit grant time to the parties or to any of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing

Court may grant time and adjourn hearing of the suit

- (2) In every such case the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to

Costs of adjournment

the costs occasioned by the adjournment

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded

May adjourn—This rule gives a discretion to the Court to grant time to the parties and to adjourn the hearing of a suit. On the one hand no adjournment should be granted if no sufficient cause is shown (d). On the other hand the Court should not refuse an adjournment if sufficient cause is shown (e). What is sufficient cause is a question of fact in each case.

Payment of costs as a condition precedent—A sues B for damages. At the hearing of the suit B applies for an adjournment. The hearing is adjourned on the terms that B should pay Rs 50 to A for costs before the next hearing and that if he fails to do so his defence would be struck off and the suit would be proceeded with ex parte. B fails to pay the cost. The Court may proceed with the suit ex parte (f). But the Court cannot do so if the payment of costs was not a condition precedent to the hearing of B's case (g).

Pauper suit—The Patna High Court has held that payment of costs by the plaintiff may be made a condition precedent to his being granted an adjournment although he is suing in forma pauperis (h).

- 2 [S 157] Where on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned the parties or any of them fail to appear the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by Order IX or make such other order as it thinks fit

Distinction between O 9 and O 17—The provisions of O 9 by themselves do not apply to a case in which the plaintiff or defendant has already appeared but has failed to appear at an adjourned hearing of the suit. For such a case the procedure is laid down in O 17 which deals with adjournments (i)

One of the modes directed by Order IX—The effect of this rule is to assimilate the procedure in cases where there is default of appearance at an adjourned hearing with that in cases where there is such default at the first hearing. The result is that though a party may have appeared at the first hearing but fails to appear at an adjourned hearing the procedure laid down in Order 9 will apply that is to say if the plaintiff fails to appear at an adjourned hearing the Court may make an order dismissing the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 and the plaintiff may if so advised then apply under this rule and O 9 r 9 for an order to set the dismissal aside (j) and if the defendant fails to appear at an adjourned hearing the Court may pass an ex parte decree under this rule and O 9 r 6 and the defendant may if so advised then apply under this rule and O 9 r 13 for an order to set it aside (k). If both parties fail to appear at the hearing the Court may make an order dismissing the suit under this rule and O 9 r 3 and the plaintiff may then if so advised either bring a fresh suit or apply for an order to set the dismissal aside under this rule and O 9 r 4 (l)

After a decree has been passed the Court has no jurisdiction to dismiss the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 for plaintiff's default. This is because once a decree has been made in a suit the suit cannot be dismissed unless the decree is reversed on appeal (m)

May proceed under O 9 or make such other order as it thinks fit—The High Court of Bombay has held that where the plaintiff has made a case which if uncontradicted would entitle him to a decree but does not appear at an adjourned hearing the Court should not dismiss the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 but should decide the case on the merits. The reason given is that O 9 r 8 does not apply where the plaintiff has made a case which if uncontradicted would entitle him to the relief claimed (n). On the other hand the Allahabad High Court has held that the words "or make such other order as it thinks fit" do not empower the Court to dispose of the suit on the merits but only to grant a further adjournment and if the Court does not adjourn the hearing it should proceed under this rule and O 9 that is to say dismiss the suit under O 9 r 8 if the plaintiff does not appear and pass an ex parte decree under O 9 r 6 if the defendant does not appear (o). In Calcutta it has been held that where there are no materials on the record the Court should proceed under r 2 above but if there are materials on the record the Court ought to proceed under this rule (p). It has been held in some cases that if the Court refuses a further adjournment and dismisses the suit if the plaintiff does not appear or passes an ex parte decree if the defendant does not appear but omits to state whether the order was made under this rule or r 3 below the order must be taken to have been made under this rule (q) unless it clearly appears from the proceedings that there has been a decision on the merits (r)

There does not seem to be any doubt that default of appearance before hearing in a case of general adjournment as distinguished from an adjournment granted under r 3 to enable a party to perform any act necessary to the further progress of the suit is within this rule and under r 3 so that if the plaintiff does not appear the Court may dismiss the suit under this rule and O 9 r 8 and if the defendant does not appear it may pass an ex parte decree under this rule and O 9 r 6 (5)

Adjourned hearing—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the word adjourned in this rule refers to an adjournment upon the application of parties granted under r 1 and not an adjournment necessitated by the rules of the Court relating to the regulation of its own business (1)

Fail to appear—See notes to O 9 r 9 Appearance

Non appearance on day fixed for judgment—A suit cannot be dismissed for non appearance of parties on the day fixed for delivery of judgment (u)

Remedy—See notes to the next rule under the head Remedy

3 [S 158] Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith

Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce evidence etc

Scope of the rule—The provisions of this rule do not apply unless—

(1) the hearing is adjourned on the application of a party to the suit as distinguished from an adjournment by the Court of its own motion (1)

(2) the hearing is adjourned on the application of the party who subsequently makes the default (u)

(3) the adjournment is granted to enable the party to produce his evidence or to cause the attendance of his witnesses or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit and

(4) the party fails to perform any of the acts for which the adjournment was granted within the time allowed by the Court

Any other act—A suitor B to recover possession of certain land. A contends that the suit is not properly valued. The Court thereupon appoints a commissioner on the application of A to value the land and directs A to pay into Court Rs 100 being the commissioner's fee within a specified time. If A fail to make the payment within the prescribed time the Court may proceed under this rule. The payment of the commissioner's fee is an act necessary to the further progress of the suit within the meaning of this rule (x)

Procedure to be followed under this rule—Rule 2 applies to cases where the hearing is adjourned no matter for what purpose and the parties or any of them fail to appear at the adjourned hearing. The present rule is directed to cases where the hearing is adjourned at the instance of a party for some one or other of the purposes specified in the rule and the party fails to perform the specified act or acts for which the adjournment was granted within the time allowed by the Court (y) In such a case the rule says the Court may notwithstanding such default proceed to decide the suit forthwith These words do not mean that the Court may dismiss the suit if the plaintiff is in default or pass a decree against the defendant if the defendant is in default ( ) What they mean is that the Court may further adjourn the hearing or it may without granting any further adjournment proceed to try the suit and take such evidence as may be tendered by the parties and decide the suit on the merits (a) Thus where an adjournment is granted to the plaintiff to amend the plaint but the plaintiff fails to amend the plaint and the Court refuses a further adjournment the Court should not dismiss the suit for default but decide it on the merits (b) The word forthwith means without granting any further adjournment [contrast the words at once pronounce judgment in O 15 r 4] Where the adjournment is not for the purpose of performing any act necessary to the further progress of the suit in other words it is a general adjournment default of appearance at the adjourned hearing comes within r 2 above and not under this rule (c)

Remedy—Where a suit is disposed of under the first part of r 2 above it is open to the party aggrieved by the order to proceed under O 9 r 9 or O 9 r 13 as the case may be see notes to r 2 above One of the modes directed by Order 9 But where a case is decided under the present rule the decision amounts to a decree and the remedy of the party aggrieved: by way of appeal (d) or by way of review (e) As to what points may be taken in appeal and what in review see the undermentioned case (f)

Case where default under this rule is coupled with default of appearance under rule 2—If the hearing of a suit is adjourned on the application of the plaintiff to enable him to produce his evidence or to perform any other act as mentioned in this rule and the plaintiff does not appear at the adjourned hearing should the Court proceed under this rule or under rule 2? The High Court of Madras has held that the Court should in such a case proceed under r 2 and dismiss the suit for default so that the plaintiff may have an opportunity to apply under O 9 r 9 to set aside the dismissal (g) A similar view has been taken by the High Court of Bombay (h) The High Court of Lahore has held that if there are no sufficient materials on the record the Court should proceed under r 2 above (i) but if there are sufficient materials it should proceed to decide the suit under this rule (j) In Allahabad the balance of authority seems to be in favour of the view that the Court should proceed under r 2 and not under this rule (k)

Hearing of the Suit and Examination of Witnesses

1 [S 179, Explan] The plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin

Right to begin —The right to begin is to be determined by the rules of evidence. As a general rule the party on whom the burden of proof rests should begin. Sections 101-114 of the Indian Evidence Act I of 1872 deal with burden of proof. Section 102 of the Act provides that the burden of proof lies on that party who would fail if no evidence at all were given on either side. Thus if A sues B for the recovery of a piece of land of which B is in possession the burden of proof lies on A for if no evidence were given on either side B would be entitled to retain his possession.

Unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff — Facts mean all material facts. Thus where a defendant admits only some of the facts alleged by the plaintiff it does not give him the right to begin (o)

Preliminary issue raised by defendant that suit does not lie — Where the defendant raises a preliminary issue that the suit is barred as res judicata the defendant has the right to begin (p)

Preliminary issue raised by respondent that appeal does not lie — In such a case according to the Bombay High Court the appellant has the right to begin. The decision was put on the ground of established practice in the Bombay High Court (q)

2 [S 179, 1st para, S 180 1st and 2nd paras] (1) On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit or on any other day to which the hearing is adjourned the party having the right to begin shall state his case and produce his evidence in support of the issues which he is bound to prove

(2) The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any) and may then address the Court generally on the whole case

(3) The party beginning may then reply generally on the whole case

The other party shall then state his case —Where there are two sets of defendants and their interests are practically the same the rule is that after the plaintiff has closed his case both the defendants should state their case before any evidence is given by either defendant (7)

Some of the defendants supporting plaintiff's case—Where there are several defendants and some of them support the plaintiff's case the rule is that the plaintiff and such of the defendants as support his case wholly or in part must address the Court and call their evidence in the first place and then the other party that is the other defendants should address the Court and call their evidence (8)

Hearing of arguments—If in a case where a party having an opportunity of addressing the Court does not do so the judgment cannot be set aside because it was delivered without hearing arguments (1)

3 [S 180 3rd para] Where there are several issues the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning, may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party, and, in the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so produced by the party beginning, but the party beginning will then be entitled to reply generally on the whole case

Evidence of witnesses It is the duty of the Judge to examine every witness tendered unless it appears clearly that the object of summoning a large number of witnesses is to obstruct or delay justice (u) It is not right for the Judge to select a certain number of witnesses and send away the rest because he thinks that they would only prove the same facts as those already deposed to (t) or because he is satisfied on the evidence already recorded (w) If he does so the Appellate Court may remand the case with a direction to him to take the evidence of the witnesses tendered by the party but not examined by the Judge (x)

Evidence shall be taken in open Court —As to the examination of witnesses on commission see Order 26 below

5 [S 182] In cases in which an appeal is allowed the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing, in the language of the Court by or in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative and, when completed, shall be read over in the presence of the Judge and of the witness and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same, and shall sign it

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

Presence of parties—Where evidence is taken in the absence of the opposite party it will be rejected by the Court of appeal if the objection to the reception of the evidence was taken before the Court trying the suit. If no such objection was taken the appellate Court will not remand the case especially if the other evidence in the case is sufficient to support the decision of the lower Court (y) See Indian Evidence Act 1872 s 107

Shall be read over—There is a difference of opinion whether if the deposition is not read over to the witness as required by this rule or interpreted to him as required by r 6 below it is admissible in evidence in trials for perjury and forgery it being held in some cases that the deposition is not admissible in evidence (z) while in others that it is (a). The former view proceeds on the ground that the deposition not being read over or interpreted to the witness it does not prove itself under s 80 of the Evidence Act 1872 and that it cannot be proved in any other way having regard to the provisions of s 91 of that Act. The latter view proceeds on the ground that though the deposition does not in such a case prove itself under s 80 of the Evidence Act it may be proved in any other way e.g. by the Judge who took it down and that s 91 of the Act is no bar to such proof

Where a witness understands English and the deposition is read over by him instead of being read over to him it is a substantial compliance with the rule (b)

Signature of witness—The rule does not require a witness to sign his evidence (c)

Signature of Judge—A prosecution for perjury cannot be maintained if the deposition is not signed by the Judge. The signing of the deposition by the Judge is made essential to the application of s 80 of the Evidence Act 1872 by the section itself (d)

6 [S 183] Where the evidence is taken down in a language different from that in which it is given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence as taken down in writing shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it is given

When deposition to be interpreted

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

Shall be interpreted —See notes to r 5 above. Shall be read over

7 [New] Evidence taken down under section 138 shall be in the form prescribed by rule 5 and shall be read over and signed and as occasion may require, interpreted and corrected as if it were evidence taken down under that rule

Evidence under section 138

8 [S 184] Where the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Judge, he shall be bound, as the examination of each witness proceeds, to make a memorandum of the substance of what each witness deposes and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge and shall form part of the record

Memorandum when evidence not taken down by Judge

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

Where evidence not taken down by Judge—If the evidence is taken down not by the Judge but by some other person the Judge also should make or cause to be made a memorandum as provided by this rule even if the evidence was taken down by the other person in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge as required by r 5 above. If evidence is dictated to a typist by a Judge and no memorandum is made by him the provisions of this rule and of rr 5 and 14 are not complied with. But the case is then one not of illegality but of irregularity (c)

9 [S 185] Where English is not the language of the Court but all the parties to the suit who appear in person, and the pleaders of such as appear by pleaders, do not object to have such evidence as is given in English taken down in English the Judge may so take it down

When evidence may be taken in English

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

10 [S 186] The Court may, of its own motion or on the application of any party or his pleader, take down any particular question and answer, or any objection to any question, if there appears to be any special reason for so doing

Any particular question and answer may be taken down

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

11 [S 187] Where any question put to a witness is objected to by a party or his pleader, and the Court allows the same to be put, the Judge shall take down the question, the answer, the objection and the name of the person making it, together with the decision of the Court thereon

Questions objected to and allowed by Court

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

Where no objection is taken—If evidence has been admitted without objection in the Court of first instance it must not be rejected by the appellate Court (f)

12 [S 188] The Court may record such remarks as it thinks material respecting the demeanour of any witness while under examination

Remarks on demeanour of witnesses

Remarks on demeanour of witnesses—See the undermentioned case (g)

13 [S 189] In cases in which an appeal is not allowed, it shall not be necessary to take down the evidence of the witnesses in writing at length, but the Judge, as the examination of each witness proceeds, shall make a memorandum of the substance of what he deposes, and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Judge and shall form part of the record

Memorandum of evidence in unappealable cases

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (4)]

14 [S 190] (1) Where the Judge is unable to make a memorandum is required by this Order he shall cause the reason of such inability to be recorded and shall cause the memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl. (4)]

15 [S 191] (1) Where a Judge is prevented by death, transfer or other cause from concluding the trial of a suit, his successor may deal with any evidence or memorandum taken down or made under the foregoing rules as if such evidence or memorandum had been taken down or made by him or under his direction under the said rules and may proceed with the suit from the stage at which his predecessor left it

Power to deal with evidence taken before another Judge

(2) The provisions of sub rule (1) shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to evidence taken in a suit transferred under section 24

Chartered High Courts—This rule so far as it relates to the manner of taking evidence does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl. (4)]

16 [S 192] (1) Where a witness is about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court, or other sufficient cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court why his evidence should be taken immediately, the Court may upon the application of any party or of the witness, at any time after the institution of the suit, take the evidence of such witness in manner hereinbefore provided

Power to examine witness immediately

(2) Where such evidence is not taken forthwith and in the presence of the parties, such notice as the Court thinks sufficient, of the day fixed for the examination, shall be given to the parties

(3) The evidence so taken shall be read over to the witness, and, if he admits it to be correct, shall be signed by him and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same and shall sign it, and it may then be read at any hearing of the suit

Chartered High Courts—This rule so far as it relates to the manner of taking evidence does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl. (4)]

Notice—For form of notice see App II form No 6

17 [S 193] The Court may at any stage of a suit recall any witness who has been examined and may (subject to the law of evidence for the time being in force) put such questions to him as the Court thinks fit

Court may recall and examine witness

18 [New] The Court may at any stage of a suit inspect any property or thing concerning which any question may arise

Lower of Court to inspect

View by Judge—This rule does not entitle a Judge to put his own view on inspection in the place of evidence. Thus in an action of deceit brought on the ground that a particular article used by the defendant is a colourable imitation of the plaintiff's the conclusion of the Judge on a view by him of the two articles—such as two rival omnibuses that the defendant's article is calculated to deceive is not sufficient by itself to support an injunction. The Judge must be satisfied by independent evidence that there is at least a reasonable probability of deception (h)

ORDER XIX

Affidavits

1 [S 194] Any Court may at any time for sufficient reason order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that the affidavit of any witness may be read at the hearing on such conditions as the Court thinks reasonable

Lower to order a point to be proved by affidavit

Provided that where it appears to the Court that either party bona fide desires the production of a witness for cross examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorizing the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit

2 [S 195] (1) Upon any application evidence may be given by affidavit, but the Court may at the instance of either party, order the attendance for cross examination of the deponent

Power to order attendance of deponent for cross examination

(2) Such attendance shall be in Court unless the deponent is exempted from personal appearance in Court or the Court otherwise directs

3      3 [S 196] (1) Affidavits shall be confined to such facts as the deponent is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications, on which statements of his belief may be admitted provided that the grounds thereof are stated

Matters to which affidavits shall be confined

(2) The costs of every affidavit which shall unnecessarily set forth matters of hearsay or argumentative matter, or copies of or extracts from documents, shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid by the party filing the same

Grounds of belief—The grounds of belief must be stated with sufficient particularity to enable the Court to judge whether it would be safe to act on the deponent's belief (s)

ORDER XX

Judgment and Decree

r 1      1 [S 198] The Court, after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders

Judgment when pronounced

See s 33 above

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (c)]

Evidence taken before another Judge—As a general rule judgment must be given upon evidence taken by the Judge before himself and not upon evidence taken before another person (j) In the three following cases the Judge may give judgment upon evidence recorded by some other Judge or person—

- (1) Under O 18 r 15 when the Judge who has heard the evidence is prevented by death transfer or other cause from concluding the trial of the suit
- (2) Under O 26 r 1 where the evidence has been taken by a commissioner of a witness residing within the jurisdiction who is exempted under the Code from attending the Court or is unable to attend from sickness or infirmity
- (3) Under O 26 r 4 where the evidence has been taken by a commissioner of a witness residing beyond the jurisdiction and of other persons specified in the rule

Notice to parties—Notice should be given in the manner prescribed by s 140 A judgment delivered without notice to parties is not a judgment pronounced within the meaning of this rule (k)

Judgment not pronounced—A judgment not pronounced in Court does not operate as a judgment it operates only as minute or memoranda made by the Judge who wrote it (l) The posting of a notice on the notice board of the Court announcing the result of a case is not a sufficient compliance with this rule (m)

Non compliance with rules 1 2 and 3—Where a judgment is not pronounced dated or signed in conformity with the requirements of the Code it constitutes a mere irregularity within the meaning of s 99 it affords no ground for reversal in appeal of the decree based on it (n)

Power to pronounce judgment written by judge's predecessor

2 [S 199] A Judge may pronounce a judgment written but not pronounced by his predecessor

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (5)] The High Court of Bombay has held that where a Judge of the High Court dictates his judgment to a shorthand writer but does not see or approve the transcript the transcript cannot be treated as his judgment but a letter from him to the Prothonotary stating his final decision and the exact order made and a king that it should be communicated to the parties in Court may be treated as a judgment although it gives no reasons (o)

Written by his predecessor—It does not matter that the judgment was written by the Judge's predecessor after he had taken leave or left the judicial post which he occupied when he heard the case or after he had been transferred (p) The fact that the transferred officer himself pronounces the judgment does not make any difference (q)

May pronounce—The word may leaves a Judge the option to pronounce a judgment according to his own view of the case though it may be different from the judgment written by his predecessor or who heard the case (r)

Non compliance with rules 1 2 and 3—See notes to r 1 above under the same head

3 [S 202] The judgment shall be dated and signed by the Judge in open Court at the time of pronouncing it and, when once signed, shall not afterwards be altered or added to, save as provided by section 152 or on review

Judgment to be signed

Chartered High Courts—This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction [O 49 r 3 cl (5)]

Shall not afterwards be altered—A decree cannot be altered by a Court even with the consent of parties except in the mode prescribed (s) When a District Judge delivers a judgment in open Court but subsequently the judge of the decree pending the production by the plaintiff of a certified copy of the judgment

- (2) The words notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable in sub rule (1) are also new see notes below under those words

In so far as the decree is for the payment of money—This rule applies to money decrees only and not to mortgage decrees (f)

Sufficient reason—The possibility of the judgment debtor obtaining a cross decree in another pending litigation has been held not to be sufficient cause for postponing payment of the decretal amount (g)

Notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable—These words are new They have been added to overrule the decision of the Bombay High Court in Ragho v Dipchnad (h) In that case it was held that if A executed a bond to B payable by instalments with a proviso that if default was made in payment of any one of the instalments the whole amount should become due and payable forthwith and if on default being made by A in payment of any one instalment B sued A to recover the whole of the balance due the Court could not at the time of passing the decree order the amount decreed to be paid by instalments for to do so it was said, would be inconsistent with the terms of the bond Under the present rule the Court has the power to order payment of the amount decreed by instalments notwithstanding the terms of the bond

Interest—Where a decree is made payable by instalments under sub rule (1) the rate of interest is in the discretion of the Court (i)

Summary Suit—It is irregular for the Court in a summary suit instituted under O 3, where the defendant has failed to obtain leave to appear and defend to pass an order at his instance for the payment of the decretal amount by instalments (j)

Sub rule (2)—Sub rule (1) applies where an application is made by the judgment debtor at the time of passing the decree Sub rule (2) applies where an application is made after the passing of the decree In the latter case no order can be made for payment by instalments nor can payment be postponed except with the consent of the decree holder Sub rule (2) has been altered by Burma Schedule Notification and an order can be made for payment by instalments under the altered rule even without the consent of the decree holder but after notice to him (k)

Taking of security—Immovable property given by the judgment debtor as security under sub rule (2) may be realized by the decree holder in execution and he is not obliged to have recourse to a regular suit for the purpose O 34 r 14 does not apply to a charge created by the decree itself or one created by the act of parties subsequent to the decree. It applies only to a charge existing prior to the decree (l)

Limitation—An application by a judgment debtor under this rule for payment of the amount of a decree by instalments should be made within 6 months from the date of the decree [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art. 13]

Execution of decree payable by instalments—In the case of an ordinary instalment decree that is a decree payable by instalments in certain specified rates

continuation of the original suit (g) Such an application cannot be dismissed for default under O 9 r 3 for that would involve dismissal of a claim which has already been decreed (r)

Decree for possession and mesne profits—In a suit for the recovery of possession of immovable property the plaintiff may claim mesne profits which have accrued due during a period prior to the institution of the suit He may also claim mesne profits which have accrued due subsequent to the institution of the suit The decree to be passed in such a case will now be as follows —

- 1 That the defendant do put the plaintiff in possession of the property specified in the schedule annexed to the decree [To this extent the decree is final]
- 2 { That the defendant do pay to the plaintiff the sum of Rs with interest thereon at the rate of per cent per annum to the date of realization on account of mesne profits which have accrued due prior to the institution of the suit [To this extent the decree is final]
Or [where accounts have to be taken of the mesne profits]—
That an inquiry be made as to the amount of mesne profits which have accrued due prior to the institution of the suit [To this extent the decree is preliminary see s 2 Explan]
- 3 That an inquiry be made as to the amount of mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the point of time specified in cl (c) of the section [To this extent the decree is preliminary] See Sch I App D Form No 23

The inquiry referred to above may be held before an officer of the Court appointed in that behalf who must report to the Court the result of the inquiry After that is done and the parties are heard on the report a final decree will be passed in respect of the mesne profits

Where decree silent as to mesne profits—Where a preliminary decree is silent as to mesne profits the Court has no power to direct such enquiry by its final decree (s)

Mesne profits where no date fixed—Where a preliminary decree awards possession and mesne profits but is silent as to the date up to which mesne profits are awarded the decree holder is entitled to mesne profits up to the date of delivery of possession to him (t)

Joint Hindu family—This rule applies not only where the plaintiff sues for possession of the whole of an immovable property but also where he sues for possession of a portion thereof But the portion must be a specified portion that is a portion to the profits of which the plaintiff is exclusively entitled Hence the provisions of the rule do not apply to a suit for partition by a member of a joint Hindu family for until partition no member is entitled to a specific share of the property (u) This does not mean that a member of a joint Hindu family is not entitled in a suit for partition to claim his share of the rent and profits of the joint property from which he may have been wrongfully excluded He is entitled to such share (v) But the Court in deciding

Procedure—Where an appellate Court disagreeing with the lower Court finds that the plaintiff is entitled to possession it should pass a preliminary decree for possession and direct an inquiry as to mesne profits it is not proper merely to remand the case to the lower Court for disposal (x) The Madras High Court has added a clause to this rule as to which see the case in footnote (y)

Mesne profits—The expression mesne profits is defined in s 2 cl (1) as meaning those profits which the person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom together with interest on such profits but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession

The claim for mesne profits is virtually a claim for damages Hence there is no rigid rule for determining the amount of mesne profits and the amount must be assessed in every case by a proper exercise of judicial discretion (z) Mesne profits are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to the justice of the case Hence in calculating mesne profits payments of revenue and cesses made by the defendant should be deducted (a) But the costs of collecting the rents or profits should not be allowed to the defendant unless he entered on the property in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right (b)

Wrongful possession by the defendant is the very essence of a claim for mesne profits and the very foundation of a decree therefor and this rule cannot apply if the possession of the defendant has not been wrongful (c) Hence a defendant cannot be rendered liable for mesne profits during the period the property was under attachment by virtue of an order made under s 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code (d) Where a defendant has been in wrongful possession for a certain period and is subsequently dispossessed by a third party the defendant can only be charged with mesne profits for the period for which he was in wrongful possession. He cannot be charged with mesne profits that have accrued due subsequently to his dispossession though the person who dispossessed him may not have done anything to recover the rents or profits (e) The reason is that if a defendant is dispossessed by a third party he cannot be said to have even impliedly received the profits nor could he with ordinary or extraordinary diligence have received them But where a defendant who has been in wrongful possession abandons the land without giving notice to the plaintiff he will be held liable for mesne profits (f)

Where a person buys immovable property from a defendant pending a suit against him for recovery of the property and for mesne profits and a decree is eventually passed against the defendant the plaintiff is entitled to recover mesne profits not only from the defendant but from the purchaser pendente lite (g) The purchaser however is liable only from the date on which he entered into possession (h)

If one of three zamindars lets the lands on a patni lease and the patnidar lets them for cultivation and a suit is brought by the other zamindars against him and the patnidar for possession of their shares and mesne profits and a decree is passed for them the mesne profits recoverable from the zamindar defendant should be based upon the rent received by him from the patnidar and not upon the produce value of the land but the mesne profits recoverable from the patnidar should be based upon such value. The liability of the zamindar defendant is not in such a case joint and several with the patnidar (v).

Interest forming part of mesne profits—It will be seen from the definition of mesne profits that mesne profits consist of two items namely (1) profits of the property and (2) interest on such profits. Hence if a decree awards mesne profits but says nothing about interest that is interest on the profits it must be construed as including not only the profits but the interest on such profits. This was decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Orish Chunder v Shoshi Shikareswar (j). If the profits were payable from month to month the interest thereon would be calculated month by month and if they were payable from year to year the interest would be calculated year by year. Calculating in this manner the interest on the profits must be allowed up to the date of ascertainment of the aggregate amount of mesne profits (k) but in no case should it be allowed for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree (l). The reason is that the item of interest we are now considering forms an integral part of mesne profits and since mesne profits cannot be allowed for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree so also the interest forming part thereof cannot be allowed for a longer period. It must not however be supposed that because mesne profits are defined as meaning profits plus interest on such profits therefore the Court must always allow interest on such profits. Mesne profits as stated above are in the nature of damages which the Court may award according to the justice of the case. And since the item of interest now under consideration forms part of mesne profits it is equally in the discretion of the Court whether to allow such interest or not (m) for the same reason the Court may while allowing the claim for interest direct the interest to be calculated not month by month or year by year but in a manner less advantageous to the plaintiff. The mode of calculation indicated in the beginning of this paragraph applies only to those cases where the decree is silent as to the mode in which interest is to be calculated.

After the aggregate amount of mesne profits is ascertained the plaintiff may apply to the Court for a final decree for the amount so ascertained and for interest on that amount and the Court may award interest at such rate as it thinks fit (n). The date from which interest may be allowed is the date of the preliminary decree and not the date on which the amount is ascertained (o). The rate of interest allowed is usually 6 per cent (p). See J1.

Application for ascertaining future mesne profits—The right to apply for ascertainment of future mesne profits arises not on the date of the decree directing an inquiry as to such profit but on the happening of any one of the three events pointed in sub rule (1) (i) (g). The application is an application in the suit and if the suit is pending the law of limitation does not apply (r).

12 Notice through Court—The notice of relinquishment of possession should be given through the Court. But where a judgment debtor gives such notice directly to the decree holder and the latter does not object that it should be sent through the Court he is not entitled to mesne profits after the date of the notice (s)

Three years from the date of the decree—Decree means a decree capable of execution. Thus if an appeal is preferred from a decree for mesne profits and the decree is confirmed in appeal the period of three years is to be computed from the date of the appellate decree (t). Similarly if a decree for mesne profits is taken to the Privy Council and is confirmed the period of three years is to be counted from the date of the King's order in Council (u). See notes to s 36. What decree may be executed

When a decree awards possession with mesne profits to be ascertained in an inquiry but specifies no time down to which mesne profits are to be computed the decree cannot be construed as giving mesne profits for a period longer than three years from the date of the decree (v). The plaintiff therefore is not entitled to mesne profits for more than three years from the date of the decree though possession was not delivered to him until after the expiration of the three years note the words whichever event first occurs in sub r (1) of (c). But in no case can mesne profits be awarded to the plaintiff for any period subsequent to an offer by the defendant to restore him possession (w).

Limitation—As regards mesne profits accrued due prior to the institution of the suit the defendant is only liable for the mesne profits accrued due during the three years before the date of the suit. A claim for mesne profits during a period preceding the three years next before the date of the suit is barred under the Limitation Act 1908 sch. I art 103 (x).

Court Fee—Where in a suit for recovery of immovable property and for mesne profits antecedent to as well as subsequent to the institution of the suit the decree directs the profits to be ascertained in execution the court fee is payable with respect to the claim for such profits but the fee cannot be claimed until the amount actually due on account of the profits has been ascertained (y).

Burden of proof—The burden of proving the amount of mesne profits actually received is on the person who has received them while that of proving the amount of profit that might with ordinary diligence have been received is on the person claiming them (z).

Order supplementing preliminary decree—Where after the passing of a preliminary decree for accounts an order is made determining the period and the mode of accounting the order itself is a preliminary decree and appealable as such (a). See notes to s 97. Two preliminary decrees

Appeal—Under the Code of 1882 [s. 44] the amount of mesne profits was determined in execution proceedings and the decision determining mesne profits being an order in execution proceedings was appealable as a decree. Under the present rule the amount of mesne profits is to be determined by the decree itself and a party aggrieved

13 [ S 213 ] (1) Where a suit is for an account of any property and for its due administration under the decree of the Court, the Court shall, before passing the final decree, pass a preliminary decree ordering such accounts and inquiries to be taken and made, and giving such other directions as it thinks fit.

(2) In the administration by the Court of the property of any deceased person if such property proves to be insufficient for the payment in full of his debts and liabilities, the same rules shall be observed as to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors and as to debts and liabilities provable, and as to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities respectively, as may be in force for the time being within the local limits of the Courts in which the administration suit is pending with respect to the estates of persons adjudged or declared insolvent, and all persons who in any such case would be entitled to be paid out of such property, may come in under the preliminary decree, and make such claims against the same as they may respectively be entitled to by virtue of this Code

Judicature Act 1875 s 10—The words of the present rule are almost the same as s 10 of the Judicature Act of 1875.

Administration suit—Where a person dies leaving a will his estate is administered by his executor and where he dies intestate it is administered by his administrator. The administration of the estate of a deceased person consists first in paying his funeral expenses next his debts and then the legacies under his will (if any). The residue of his estate is then divided among the residuary legatees under his will or among his heirs if he has left no will. In an administration suit the court takes upon itself to a large extent the functions of an executor or administrator and administers the estate of the deceased.

13 The following persons may maintain an administration suit —

- (1) A creditor of the deceased when his claim is not paid off by the legal representatives of the deceased (d)
- (2) A legatee whether specific or pecuniary where the legacy is not paid to him by the legal representatives of the deceased.
- (3) The next of kin of the deceased for their share in the estate of the deceased.
- (4) An executor or administrator when there are disputes among the legatees or next of kin as to the amount of the property left by the deceased and the amount to which the legatees or next of kin are entitled

Forms of plaint in administration suit—See Sch I App A forms Nos 41 to 43

Preliminary decree—This rule provides that in an administration suit the Court shall pass a preliminary decree before passing the final decree directing accounts to be taken and enquiries to be made. For forms of preliminary decree see Sch. I App D forms Nos 17 and 19 and for forms of final decree see forms Nos 18 and 20.

Insolvent estate—Sub rule (2) provides that when it appears in an administration suit that the estate of the deceased is insolvent the rules laid down in the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909 as to Presidency towns and in the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 as to the other parts of British India where that applies shall apply so far as regards (1) the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors (2) debts and liabilities proveable and (3) the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities. Note that this sub rule does not apply all the rules and principles of insolvency to insolvent estates but only the rules in respect of the three heads enumerated above (e).

Rights of secured creditors under the Provincial Insolvency Act—See s 47 of the Act

Debts and liabilities proveable under the Presidency towns Insolvency Act—See sections 46 and 48 and Schedule II of the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909

Debts and liabilities proveable under the Provincial Insolvency Act—See s 45 and 46 of the Act

Suit to recover assets improperly applied by Administrator General—This section does not apply to a suit brought by a creditor of the deceased against the Administrator General (to whom letters of administration have been granted) and against other creditors of the deceased to recover assets alleged to have been improperly paid by the Administrator General to those creditors in priority to the plaintiff (f).

Effect of decree in administration suit upon prior attachments—A decree in an administration suit is a decree in favour of all creditors of the deceased and as all of them are included in the same decree it would be inequitable that one should be in a better position than another under that decree. The assets are therefore divided amongst all creditors pro rata. Even a creditor who has obtained an attachment on the estate of the deceased prior to the decree in the administration suit is not entitled to priority over the other creditors. An attachment does not create a charge upon the property attached and the Court will stay all proceedings in execution after the passing of the decree in the suit (g).

14 [S 214] (1) Where the Court decrees a claim to pre-emption in respect of a particular sale of property and the purchase money has not been paid into Court, the decree shall—

- (a) specify a day on or before which the purchase-money shall be so paid, and
- (b) direct that on payment into Court of such purchase money, together with the costs (if any) decreed against the plaintiff, on or before the day referred to in clause (a), the defendant shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment, but that, if the purchase money and the costs (if any) are not so paid, the suit shall be dismissed with costs

(2) Where the Court has adjudicated upon rival claims to pre-emption, the decree shall direct—

- (a) if and in so far as the claims decreed are equal in degree that the claim of each pre-emptor complying with the provisions of sub-rule (1) shall take effect in respect of a proportionate share of the property including any proportionate share in respect of which the claim of any pre-emptor failing to comply with the said provisions would, but for such default, have taken effect, and,
- (b) if and so far as the claims decreed are different in degree, that the claim of the inferior pre-emptor shall not take effect unless and until the superior pre-emptor has failed to comply with the said provisions

Difference between the old section and the present rule.—This rule corresponds with § 14 C L C 188 except in the following particulars—

- 1 The words "whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment" are new. See notes below under those words.
- 2 Sub-rule (1) is also new. See notes below. Sub-rule (2) Rival pre-emptors.

Pre-emption.—The right of pre-emption can only be exercised in respect of immovable property if and if both Mahomedan are co-sharers of a house. If A sells his share to X for Rs 1000 and X intends to pre-empt B's share on payment of Rs 1000 that is to say if A sells it to X and X may require B to sell his share to him in preference to X. The same rule applies if A and B are owners of al-jouari houses. If B refuses to sell his share to A A may institute a suit for pre-emption against B and X. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that if the sale by B to X has been completed before

- 14 the date of the suit B having no longer any interest in the property he is not a necessary party to the suit (b). If a decree is passed for A and if he has not paid the amount of purchase money into Court the decree should specify a day on or before which the purchase money should be paid into Court. If the amount is paid within the time fixed by the Court A will be entitled to enter into possession of B's share. But if he fails to pay the amount within that time he will lose the benefit of the decree (c). If a decree is passed for A with costs A may pay into Court the purchase money less the costs (d). As to extension of time for payment see notes below.

It is important to note that the right of pre-emption is a personal right. This leads to the following results—

- 1 If the pre-emptor that is the person entitled to pre-emption transfers the right to a third party the right is lost and the transferee cannot maintain a suit for pre-emption (l).
- 2 It is not settled whether if the pre-emptor dies during the pendency of the suit for pre-emption the right according to Sunni Mahomedan Law is extinguished (h) or whether it survives to his heirs or to his legal representatives (m).
- 3 If the pre-emptor transfers the right of pre-emption during the pendency of the suit for pre-emption the right of pre-emption is lost and the suit will be dismissed. And even if he obtains a decree and transfers the decree the right of pre-emption will be lost and the Court will not allow execution of the decree. But if he obtains a decree and transfers not the decree but the property which is the subject of pre-emption the right of pre-emption is not lost and he may execute the decree though execution will not be allowed to the trans fere (n).

Whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment.—These words have been added to make it clear that the title to the property vests in the plaintiff on payment of the purchase money and that it is not necessary to complete the title that there should be a document in writing, and registered as required by the Transfer of Property Act in the case of a sale of immovable property. The object of inserting these words in the rule is to supersede the opinion expressed by the High Court of Madras that since the passing of the Transfer of Property Act the title to a pre-empted property could not vest in the plaintiff without an instrument of transfer (o).

The plaintiff's title accrues on payment of the purchase money and not from the date of the sale (p). No registered document is necessary to transfer the property (q) from the date of payment though he cannot obtain possession by reason of the defendant being himself in possession in another capacity (r) or by reason of a usufructuary mortgage existing in possession (s).

Mesne profits.—If upon a pre-emption decree the property and the right to mesne profits therefrom vest in the pre-emptor only from the date when he pays the amount of the purchase price finally decreed until that time the original purchaser retains possession and is entitled to the rents and profits (t).

parties and it should be in form No 21 Sch I App D (f) After the accounts are taken a final decree is passed directing that the partnership assets be applied, first in payment of the partnership debts next in payment of the cost of the suit and lastly in payment to each partner of the amount found due to him on taking the accounts. If it turns out on taking the accounts that there is a balance due to the defendant a decree may be passed in favour of the defendant (g) See Sch. I App. D form No --

Appeal—A preliminary decree in a suit for the dissolution of a partnership or the taking of partnership accounts is appealable under s 96 But the appeal must be filed within the period prescribed by the law of limitation. If no appeal is preferred within the period of limitation the party aggrieved by such decree is precluded by virtue of the provisions of s 97 from disputing its correctness in an appeal from the final decree See s. 97 and notes thereto

Letters Patent appeal—Where a commissioner appointed to take accounts applies to the Court for directions and an order is made giving the directions the order being merely one regulating procedure and not a final adjudication of the rights of the parties is not a judgment within the meaning of cl 13 of the Letters Patent of the High Court of Rangoon and is not appealable as such (h) in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party, that an account should be taken, the Court shall, before passing its final decree, pass a preliminary decree directing such account to be taken as it thinks fit

Shall pass a preliminary decree directing accounts—The provisions of this rule must be strictly followed If the fact of agency is established it is the duty of the Court to direct an account to be taken of the dealing between the parties before passing the final decree It is not proper to pass a final decree at the hearing (i) But the Court must be satisfied before directing an inquiry into accounts that the taking of accounts is necessary (j)

Whether decree can be passed in favour of defendant—In a suit for account between principal and agent a decree can, if necessary be passed in favour of the defendant on payment of the necessary Court fee (k) See notes to r 19 below

18 [New] Where the Court passes a decree for the partition of property or for the separate possession of a share thereof, then,—

(1) if and in so far as the decree relates to an estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the Government, the decree shall declare the rights of the several parties interested in the property, but shall direct such partition or separation to be made by the Collector, or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in this behalf, in accordance with such declaration and with the provisions of section 54,

(2) if and in so far as such decree relates to any other immovable property, or to movable property, the Court may, if the partition or separation cannot be conveniently made without further inquiry, pass a preliminary decree declaring the rights of the several parties interested in the property and giving such further directions as may be required.

Receiver not rendered functus officio—A receiver appointed in a suit for partition does not after the passing of the decree under sub-rule (1) become functus officio as regards agricultural land comprised in the suit. The Court may therefore grant an interim injunction restraining a party from interfering with the receiver's possession (m). See a.w. and notes thereto.

Giving such further directions.—These words are wide enough to include a direction for an inquiry into future mesne profits. But under the rule the direction should be in the preliminary decree. If no such direction is included in the preliminary decree the Court has no power to direct an inquiry into future mesne profits by its final decree (n).

Joint Hindu family—In a suit for partition of joint Hindu family property the property not being of the kind referred to in sub rule (1) a preliminary decree may be passed as provided by sub rule (2) (c). See notes to r. 1a above. Joint Hindu family.

Appeal from decree relating to set off

(3) The provisions of this rule shall apply whether the set off is admissible under rule 6 of Order VIII or otherwise

Appeal from decree relating to set off—This rule corresponds with s 216 of the Code of 1882 except as regards the provision as to the Court to which an appeal should lie from a decree passed in a suit in which a set off is claimed. The second paragraph of s 216 ran as follows—

The decree of the Court with respect to any sum awarded to the defendant shall have the same effect and be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal or otherwise as if such sum had been claimed by the defendant in a separate suit against the plaintiff

The present rule provides that appeals from decrees relating to set off shall lie to the Courts to which appeals in respect of the original claim would lie

Decree for defendant where set off is claimed—It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that in a suit by a principal against his agent for account the Court can grant a decree to the agent for the amount found due to him on the taking of accounts between the parties (p). The ground on which the decision is based is that a suit for accounts against an agent necessarily involves an undertaking by the principal to pay to the agent any sum that may be found due to him. Commenting on this case Phillips J in a Madras case (q) said "This I think is taking a somewhat large view of the intention of a plaintiff in such a suit for it could rarely be his intention to bring a suit in order that a decree might be given against him." See notes to O 8 r 6. The amount claimed to be set off must be legally recoverable.

ORDER XXI

Execution of Decrees and Orders

Of execution of decrees in general—The present order is the longest Order in the whole Schedule. It consists of 103 rules. It is proposed here to give a summary of these rules and at the same time a description of the different modes of execution and the procedure to be observed. The references to the rules given in this summary are to the rules of the present Order.

(p) J. Ramchand v. J. Gopal Na. (1910) 32 All. 525 6 I C 163. See also J. on Ch. on Judgments (1904) 22 All. L. J. 83 83 I C 800 (1904) A. A. 854.

(q) Na. Ram v. Zaminda of Tirunel. (1917) 4 Mat. 872, 89-90 53 I C 734 (L.C. def. Na. Ram's claim for excess in L.C. most time-barred).

A obtains a decree against B for Rs 5 000. Here A is the decree holder B is the judgment debtor and Rs 5 000 is the judgment debt. If B fails to satisfy the decree A may apply for execution of the decree against B a person or against his property or both (r 30). But the Court may in its discretion refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment debtor (r 21). Execution against the person of the judgment debtor consists in arresting him and detaining him in jail. Execution against the property of a judgment debtor consists in attaching and selling his property and paying the decree holder the amount of the judgment debt out of the sale proceeds.

Application for execution—All proceedings in execution are commenced by an application for execution (r 10). The application for execution must be in writing [r 11 (2)] and should contain the particulars set forth in rr 11 (2) to 14. The only exception is where the decree is for the payment of money and the judgment debtor is in the precincts of the Court when the decree is passed in which case the Court may order immediate execution on the oral application of the decree holder at the time of passing the decree [r 11 (1)]. If the application complies with the requirements of rr 11 (2) to 14 the Court will direct execution to issue (r 24). If he does not the Court may reject it or may require it to be amended (r 17). If the application is rejected the decree holder may present another application properly framed.

Who may apply for execution—The application for execution must be made by the decree holder. If the decree is transferred by the decree holder the transferee may apply for execution (r 10). If the decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one any one of such persons may apply for execution (r 15). If the decree holder is dead his legal representative may apply for execution (r 16).

Against whom execution may be applied for—If the judgment debtor is living execution will be applied for against him. If he is dead execution may be applied for against his legal representative. In the latter case the decree may not be executed against the person of the legal representative but only against the property of the judgment debtor which has come to the hands of the legal representative and has not been duly disposed of by him (s 50). As to notice to the legal representative see the next paragraph.

Notice before ordering execution—The law does not require any notice to be issued to the party against whom execution is applied for except in the following two cases—

- 1 Where the application for execution is made more than one year after the date of the decree or more than one year after the date of the last order made on any previous application for execution.
- 2 Where execution is applied for against the legal representative of the judgment debtor.

In these two cases the Code provides that the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice (r 2-). There is one case in which it is discretionary with the Court to issue a notice before making an order for execution and that is where the decree is for money and execution is sought against the person of the judgment-debtor (r 3).

Execution against person of judgment debtor—

(i) Decrees for the payment of money—A obtains a decree against B (r 1 s. 5000) and costs. [This is a money decree.] B fails to pay the amount of the judgment-debt. A applies for execution of the decree against B a person [r 11 (-) cl. (j)]. The decree being a money decree the Court may in stead of issuing a warrant for B's arrest issue a notice calling upon him to appear and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison in execution of the decree (r 37). If B appears and satisfies the Court that he is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or other sufficient cause and if there are no circumstances which disentitle B to the indulgence of the Court the Court may make an order disallowing A's application for B's arrest and detention [r 40 (1)] If B does not appear the Court should issue a warrant for his arrest if the decree holder so desires (r 37) If B appears but fails to show cause to the satisfaction of the Court the Court should cause him to be arrested [r 40 (a)]

Where a warrant of arrest is issued it should be executed by an officer of the Court appointed in that behalf (rr 24 25) If when the officer goes to execute the warrant B offers payment of the amount of the judgment debt (which must always be specified in the warrant) the officer should receive the payment and the warrant should not then be executed (r 38) But if no payment is made B should be arrested and brought before the Court as soon as practicable (s 55) If no notice was issued prior to his arrest under r 37 it is open to B to show that he is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or any other sufficient cause [r 40 (1)] If the Court is satisfied that B is unable to pay the amount of the decree from poverty or any other sufficient cause and if there are no other circumstances which would disentitle P to the indulgence of the Court the Court will make an order directing B's release [r 40 (1)] Otherwise the Court will make an order committing B to prison [r 40 (5)] The prison will be a civil prison (s 55) and the term of detention in prison is six months if the amount of the decree exceeds 1 s. 50 and six weeks if the amount of the decree does not exceed 1 s. 50 (s 58) If while in prison, B pays the amount mentioned in the warrant to the officer in charge of the prison or the decree is otherwise fully satisfied as by attachment and sale of the property he will be released from detention (s 58) Otherwise he will be detained in prison until expiration of the term of his detention unless the decree holder requests the Court to release him from detention or omits to pay the subsistence allowance of the judgment debtor A judgment debtor released from detention in any one of the above cases cannot be re-arrested in execution of the same decree [s 58 (-)] though the judgment debt has remained unpaid. This does not mean that his liability to pay the debt ceases for the decree still subsists and it may yet be executed against B's property [s 58 (2)] though not against his person

No woman can be arrested in execution of a money decree [s 56]

(ii) Decrees other than those for the payment of money—A judgment debtor may be arrested and imprisoned not only in execution of a decree for the payment of money but also in execution of other decrees (rr 31 32 33) The procedure to be followed in these cases is as follows If the application is in proper form the Court will issue a warrant for arrest of the judgment debtor (r 24) If the judgment debtor is arrested in execution of the warrant he must be brought before the Court as soon as practicable (s 55) The Court will then make an order committing him to the civil prison. If while in jail the decree is fully satisfied he will be released from detention [s 58 (1)]. Otherwise he will be detained in prison until expiration of the term of his detention, unless the decree holder requests the Court to release him from detention, or omits to pay the subsistence allowance of the judgment debtor as provided by r 39

Execution against property of judgment debtor—This subject may be considered under two heads namely (1) attachment and (2) sale The rules relating to attachment may be stated first and then the rules governing sale for attachment precedes sale Attachment is levied and the sale of the property attached is effected by an officer of the Court under a warrant issued from the Court

Before considering the rules relating to attachment and sale it is to be observed that there are certain kinds of property which are not liable to attachment or sale in execution of a decree These are described in s 60 Subject to these exceptions all saleable property which belongs to the judgment debtor or over which he has a jura in rem power which he may exercise for his own benefit is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree against him (s. 60)

I Attachment—Attachable property belonging to a judgment debtor may be divided into two classes (1) movable and (2) immovable

As to attachment of movable property—See rr 43 to 53

Attachment of immovable property—If the property be immovable the attachment is to be made by an order prohibiting the judgment debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way and prohibiting all other persons from taking any benefit from such transfer or charge. The order must be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to the property and a copy of the order is to be affixed on a conspicuous part of the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the Court house (r 54)

Where an attachment has been made any private transfer of the property attached whether it be movable or immovable is void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment (r 64)

If a claim is preferred to any property attached in execution of a decree by any person other than a party to the suit the procedure prescribed by rr 58 to 63 must be followed. If any questions arise in the course of execution proceedings between the parties to the suit or their representatives they should be dealt with under s 47

If during the pendency of the attachment the judgment debtor satisfies the decree through the Court the attachment will be deemed to be withdrawn (r 55). Otherwise the Court will order the property to be sold (r 64). If the property attached is current coin or currency notes the Court may direct payment to the decree holder in satisfaction of his decree (r 56) for it is not necessary to sell coin or currency notes

II Sale of attached property—If the property attached be movable property which is subject to speedy and natural decay may be sold at once (r 43). Every sale in execution of a decree should be conducted by an officer of the Court except where the property to be sold is a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation which the Court may order to be sold through a broker (r 76)

After the property whether movable or immovable is attached the first step to be taken with a view to its sale is to cause a proclamation to be made stating the time and place of sale and specifying the property to be sold the revenue (if any) assessed upon the property the encumbrances (if any) to which it is liable the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered and such other particulars as the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property (r 66). No sale should take place until after the expiration of at least thirty days in the case of immovable property and of at least fifteen days in the case of movable property calculated from the date on which a copy of the proclamation has been fixed on the Court house of the Judge ordering the sale unless the judgment debtor consents in writing to the sale being held at an earlier date (r 68). The Court may in its discretion adjourn the sale from time to time but if the sale is adjourned for longer period than seven days a fresh proclamation should be made unless the judgment debtor consents to waive it (r 69)

It is important to note that no holder of a decree in execution of which property is sold can bid for or purchase the property without the express permission of the Court (r 72)

Irregularity in the conduct of sale of attached property—No sale of immovable property can be set aside on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the party seeking to set aside the sale has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity (r 80). As regards movable property the rule is that a sale of movable property is not liable to be set aside in any case on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. The only remedy open to the party who has sustained an injury by reason of such irregularity is to institute a suit for compensation against the person responsible for the

Notice of payment into Court—Sub r (2) which requires notice to be given to the decree holder where payment is made into Court is new. Payment of the decretal amount into Court operates as a satisfaction of the decree to that extent though no notice of payment is given to the decree holder as provided by sub r (2). Similarly where a decree is assigned by the decree holder and the judgment debtor pays the decretal amount into Court without notice of the assignment the payment operates as a satisfaction of the decree to that extent though no notice of payment is given to the decree holder and the assignee is not entitled to execute the decree (w). But where interest is awarded by the decree on the decretal amount the decree holder is entitled to interest until he receives notice of the payment into Court (x).

2 [S 258] (1) Where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder the decree holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, and the Court shall record the same accordingly.

Payment out of Court to decree holder

(2) The judgment debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment, and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, and if, after service of such notice, the decree holder fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(3) A payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree.

S 257A CPC 1882 omitted in this Code.—With reference to the present rule it is important to note that s 257A of the Code of 1882 has been omitted in this Code. That section ran as follows—

Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment debt shall be void unless it is made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree and such Court deems the consideration to be under the circumstances reasonable.

Agreement to give time to judgment debtor

Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment debt which provides for payment directly or indirectly of any sum in or towards the sum due or to accrue due under the decree shall be void unless it is made with the like sanction.

Agreement for the satisfaction of judgment-debt

Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of this section shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment debt and the surplus if any shall be returned by the judgment debtor.

(x) F. M. S. v. S. M. S. (1933) 118 Ind. 118.

This section was first enacted by Act XII of 1879 with a view to protect judgment debtors from undue pressure by decree holders. It gave rise to conflicting decisions and as interpreted by the majority of the High Courts was found in practice to be of little service to judgment debtors. It has been therefore omitted in this Code with the result that—

- (1) agreements to give time to the judgment debtor and
- (2) agreements for the satisfaction of a judgment debt which provide for the payment of any sum in excess of the decretal amount may now be entered into between the decree holder and the judgment debtor without the sanction of the Court and if otherwise valid they may be enforced as any other agreement.

Points of difference between old section 258 and the present rule.—The present rule corresponds with s. 258 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars—

- (1) The words of any kind have been inserted in sub r. (1). See notes below. Decree of any kind.
- (2) In para. 3 of s. 258 the words as a payment or adjustment or the decree followed the word recognized. These words have been omitted [see sub r. (3)] to make it clear that the Court cannot recognise an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever. See notes below. Uncertified payment and limitation.

Scope and application of the rule.—This rule provides that—

- (1) where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court or
- (2) where a decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree holder

the decree holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree so that the same may be recorded by that Court.

If the decree holder fails to inform the Court of the payment or adjustment it is open to the judgment debtor to protect himself from execution of the decree by applying to the Court within 90 days from the date of the payment or adjustment (y) to issue a notice to the decree holder to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified. If the payment or adjustment is not certified by either party it shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree. This will appear from the following

A obtains a decree against B for Rs. 2,000. It is subsequently agreed between A and B that A should accept Rs. 1,000 in full satisfaction of the decree. B pays A Rs. 1,000 out of Court but neither the payment nor adjustment is certified to the Court. A applies for execution of the full amount of the decree notwithstanding receipt by him of Rs. 1,000. B objects to execution on the ground that the decree has been adjusted and payment has been made. The payment not being certified cannot be recognised by the Court executing the decree and the Court must direct execution to issue. It will not avail B that A had agreed to certify the payment to the Court but has omitted to do so. See notes below under the head Fraud.

History of sub rule 3.—The Codes of 1859 (s. 206) and 1877 (s. 208) provided that a payment or adjustment made out of Court should not be recognised by any Court executing the decree unless it had been certified to that Court. The Code of 1877 was amended in the year 1879 and the amendment provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognised by any Court and the same provision occurred in the Code of 1882 (z) In the year 1888 the section was again altered by providing that an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by any Court executing the decree and this is the form in which the rule now stands

Sub rule (3) —Sub rule (3) provides that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree The words by any Court executing the decree indicate the extent to which an uncertified payment or adjustment should not be recognized by a Court These words show that the prohibition to take cognizance of an uncertified payment or adjustment is limited to the Court which is called upon to execute the decree It is in execution proceedings alone that an uncertified payment or adjustment cannot be recognized by a Court The rule does not prohibit a Court from taking cognizance of such payment or adjustment in proceedings other than execution proceedings An uncertified payment or adjustment may therefore be recognized by a Court trying a suit for a relief based upon such payment or adjustment (a) This gives rise to the following questions —

1 Whether if the Court orders execution in the case put in the above illustrations (p 636) B can maintain a suit against A for a declaration that the decree has been adjusted and for an injunction restraining A from executing the decree?

2 Whether if A executes the decree notwithstanding the adjustment and B's property is sold in execution B can maintain a suit against A to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree having been adjusted A ought not to have caused the same to be executed?

3 Whether if A executes the decree notwithstanding the adjustment B can maintain a suit against A to recover damages for breach of the contract represented by the adjustment? In other words whether if B is compelled to pay in execution of the decree the full amount of the decree namely Rs 2000 he is entitled to recover back that sum from A as damages for breach of the contract on A's part not to execute the decree?

Each of suits referred to above would involve recognition of an uncertified adjustment and B's success in each would depend inter alia upon the recognition of such adjustment by the Court trying the suit Now it has been made sufficiently clear that the prohibition against the recognition of an uncertified adjustment is confined to Courts executing decrees and does not extend to Courts trying suits Therefore a Court trying any of the above suits would not be precluded from recognizing the adjustment though the adjustment has not been certified But this circumstance is not of itself sufficient to entitle B to a decree for in the first two cases there is an initial difficulty in B's way That difficulty is the bar of s 47 which enjoins that all questions relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of a decree shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit

As regards the first question it is quite true that if B brought a suit for an injunction restraining A from executing the decree the Court trying the suit would recognize the adjustment though it had not been certified But the Court cannot try the suit at all for such a suit is barred under s 47 the principal question in the suit being whether A should be restrained from executing the decree This being a question relating to execution cannot be tried in a separate suit (b) Hence the answer to the first question is in the negative

2 This section was first enacted by Act XII of 1879 with a view to protect debtors from undue pressure by decree holders. It gave rise to conflicting decisions as interpreted by the majority of the High Courts was found in practice to be of little service to judgment debtors. It has been therefore omitted in this Code with the result that—

- (1) agreements to give time to the judgment debtor and
- (2) agreements for the satisfaction of a judgment debt which provide for the payment of any sum in excess of the decretal amount may now be entered into between the decree holder and the judgment debtor without the sanction of the Court and if otherwise valid they may be enforced as any other agreement.

In other words whether if B is compelled to pay in execution of the decree the full amount of the decree namely Rs 2000 he is entitled to recover back that sum from A as damages for breach of the contract on A's part not to execute the decree?

Each of suits referred to above would involve recognition of an uncertified adjustment and B's success in each would depend inter alia upon the recognition of such adjustment by the Court trying the suit Now it has been made sufficiently clear that the prohibition against the recognition of an uncertified adjustment is confined to Courts executing decrees and does not extend to Courts trying suits Therefore a Court trying any of the above suits would not be precluded from recognizing the adjustment though the adjustment has not been certified. But this circumstance is not of itself sufficient to entitle B to a decree for in the first two cases there is an initial difficulty in B's way That difficulty is the bar of s 47 which enjoins that all questions relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of a decree shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit

The answer to the second question is also in the negative and for the same reasons. The suit being one to set aside the sale in execution the principal question would be whether the proceedings in execution should be set aside and this question is also one relating to execution within the meaning of s 47 and the suit would therefore be barred under that section (c). It is therefore immaterial whether the purchaser at the sale in execution is a stranger or the decree holder himself. There are two cases (d) both prior in date to the Allahabad decision cited above in which the property was purchased by a stranger and the suit was to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree had already been satisfied out of Court at the time the sale was held. In both these cases it was held that the person who bought the property having purchased it bona fide at an auction sale the sale to him could not be set aside. But the question whether the suit was barred was not raised in either of those cases. According to the Allahabad decision cited above the suit would be barred under s 47.

The third question stands upon a different footing. The suit therein referred to is one for the recovery of damages for breach of the contract represented by the adjustment. The contract represented by the adjustment was to accept Rs 1000 in full satisfaction of the decree and not to execute the decree for its full amount. If notwithstanding the payment to A of Rs 1000 in pursuance of the adjustment A causes the decree to be executed and B is compelled to pay the amount of the decree (that is Rs 2000) in execution B may sue A to recover back that amount as damages for breach of the contract not to execute the decree. Such a suit is not barred under s 47 for the principal question in the suit is not one relating to execution but to the contract its breach and the amount of damages suffered by B in consequence of the breach. The answer to the third question is therefore in the affirmative (e). The Court trying the suit will take cognizance of the adjustment and will direct A by its decree to repay Rs 2000 as and by way of damages to B though the adjustment has not been certified. It may here be noted that if after the decree is satisfied out of Court A assigns the decree to X and X then proceeds to realize the decree by execution against B B has no cause of action against X and he is not entitled to recover from X as damages the amount paid by him in execution to X even though X took the assignment with the knowledge that the decree had been satisfied (f).

The effect of non certification on the rights of parties may be summarised as follows. If the adjustment is not certified it will not be recognized by any Court executing the decree and if the decree holder applies for execution notwithstanding the adjustment the Court will direct execution to issue and the judgment debtor will not be heard to say that the decree has been adjusted. Nor can he even by instituting a regular suit for injunction obtain a stay of execution for such a suit is barred under s 47. Nor is it open to him if his property be sold in execution to bring a suit to set aside the sale for such a suit also is barred under s 47. His only remedy is to sue the decree holder for damages sustained by him by reason of the breach of the contract represented by the adjustment. He need not however wait until the decree against him is executed. His cause of action arises on the presentation of an application by the decree holder to execute the decree. Therefore where he has paid any money under the adjustment he may sue the decree holder to recover it as soon as the decree holder applies to the Court for execution (g).

Suit by judgment debtor based upon uncertified adjustment—The three kinds of suit referred to above deserve careful consideration for they are typical of the modes in which the question of an uncertified adjustment frequently arises. But an uncertified adjustment may result in a conveyance as in the following case—A obtains a decree against B for possession of immovable property. A then executes an ekramnama whereby in consideration of Rs 186 paid to him by B he relinquishes an eight annas share of the property in favour of B. Subsequently he sells the remaining eight annas share to B by a kabala. Both the ekramnama and kabala are duly registered but neither of them is certified to the Court. A then applies for execution of the decree and obtains possession of the property. B sues A upon the two documents for a declaration of his right to the property and for recovery of possession thereof. Is the suit barred under s 47? It has been held that it is not barred and that B is entitled to a decree. The suit is not one for an injunction and it cannot therefore be said to be directed to interfere with the execution of the decree. In fact the decree has already been executed. Nor is the suit one for setting aside a sale in execution for there has been no sale. The suit is one for the recovery of property conveyed to B by two documents both of which are duly registered. The documents no doubt constitute an adjustment of the decree but as already explained in sub r (3) do not bar a suit upon an uncertified adjustment (h).

The law on the point may be stated in one sentence. An uncertified payment or adjustment may be recognized by any Court except a court executing the decree and a suit based upon such payment or adjustment is maintainable unless it is barred by the provisions of s 47.

Suit by decree holder upon an uncertified adjustment—This is the converse case. A obtains a decree against B for Rs 315 and costs. B pays A Rs 200 and induces A to give up the cost and accept a bond for the balance to be paid at the end of eight months. Neither the payment nor adjustment is certified to the Court. This does not preclude A from suing on the bond for as stated above sub r (3) only prohibits a Court executing a decree from recognizing an uncertified payment or adjustment (i). Since the repeal of s 207A of the Code of 1892 it would not matter that the bond provided for payment of a sum in excess of the balance (j).

Money payable under a decree—A decree directing the sale of mortgaged properties in default of payment is a decree for the payment of money whether there is a direction to pay personally or not (k). Income received by a mortgagee decree holder from the mortgaged property in his possession and for which he has to account and give credit for the surplus is not money payable under a decree within the meaning of this rule (l).

The Madras High Court has held that a decree which gives the judgment-debtor an option of paying money in order to secure a conveyance is not a decree under which money is payable within the meaning of this section (m).

"Decree of any kind"—The words of any kind in sub-rule (1) did not occur in sec 208 of the Code of 1857 or of 1882. They were inserted by the Code of 1908. Under the Codes of 18 and 1882 it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that sec 208 applied to the adjustment of any decree whatever may be the nature of the relief granted by the decree. In the Calcutta case the decree was one for possession of immovable property (n) On the other hand it was held by the Madras High Court that the section referred only to decrees under which money was payable and did not apply to other decrees e.g. decrees for possession of immovable property (o) It was in this state of authorities that the words of any kind were inserted in sub-rule (l) The High Court of Calcutta claims that these words were added to give effect to its rulings and to supersede the Madras rulings (p) The Bombay High Court also holds that the rule applies to the adjustment of any decree as for instance a decree for partition (q) The High Court of Madras holds that the only effect of the addition of the words of any kind is that the decree is not required to be one exclusively for the payment of money as held by that Court under the Code of 1882 but that it may be a complex decree providing partly for the payment of money and partly for any other relief or reliefs (r) delivery of possession of immovable property in other words one of the reliefs granted by the decree must be for the payment of money and unless this is so the adjustment does not require to be certified under this rule The Madras High Court lays stress on the word the before the word decree and says that the words the decree could only refer to what precedes namely a decree under which money is payable (r) Thus if a decree provides for the payment of money as well as for partition of immovable property the adjustment must be certified as required by this rule (s) but not if it is exclusively for partition

Adjustment —A composition scheme between a judgment debtor and his creditors including the decree holder is an adjustment within the meaning of this rule and may be certified as such (t) An oral agreement not to proceed against the judgment debtor beyond a certain limit is an agreement varying the terms of the decree and is therefore an adjustment which cannot be proved if not certified (u)

Where the decree is adjusted in part —A obtains a decree against B and C A then enters into an agreement with B by which B is discharged from liability under the decree The agreement constitutes an adjustment of a part of the decree within the meaning of this rule (v)

Application for final decree —An application for a final decree in a suit on a mortgage is not an application for execution Therefore the Court to which an application is made for a final decree is not a Court executing the decree Hence such Court may recognize payments made by the mortgagor out of Court though the payments have not been certified (u)

Mode of certifying —Sub rule (u) says that if the decree holder fails to shew cause the Court shall certify payment The Court is not bound if the decree-holder does not appear to certify the payment without requiring proof The Court must be satisfied before it certifies payment that payment has been made (x) See notes below

Uncertified payments and limitation

This rule applies only to parties who stand in the relation of decree holder and judgment debtor at the date of payment or adjustment —A obtains a decree

Fraud—There is an earlier decision of the Madras High Court which lends colour to the view that where a decree is adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree holder and he agrees to certify the adjustment to the Court but omits to do so and subsequently applies to the Court for execution of the decree the judgment debtor may object to the execution and prove the adjustment in execution proceedings and the Court executing the decree may take cognizance of the payment notwithstanding the provisions of this rule the reason given being that the suppression of the adjustment from the Court is not only a fraud upon the judgment debtor but a fraud upon the Court (a) But in later cases the same High Court has said that if that be the effect of that decision it is not good law (b) In a Bombay case (c) a decree for Rs 2500 was adjusted by the judgment debtor paying and the decree holder accepting Rs 2000 in full satisfaction of the decree but the adjustment was not certified to the Court The decree holder thereafter applied for execution of the decree He omitted to state in his application as required by O 21 r 11 (e) that the decree was adjusted It was held following an earlier decision of the same Court (d) that it was a case of fraud upon the Court and the application for execution was dismissed But these cases have been overruled by a Full Bench of the same High Court and it has been held that a Court executing a decree can in no case recognize a payment or adjustment not certified as required by this rule (e) The High Court of Calcutta has consistently held that it is not competent to a Court executing a decree to enquire into the fact of a payment or adjustment which has not been certified as required by this rule even if fraud is imputed to the decree holder (f) The same view has been taken by the Chief Court of the Punjab (g) by the High Court of Patna (h) and by the Chief Court of Oadh (i)

The law allows the judgment debtor 90 days to apply to have the payment or adjustment certified [Limitation Act Sch I art 14] If he does not make the application and the decree holder applies for execution within that period he may in answer to the application for execution apply to have the payment or adjustment certified but this must be within 90 days And it has been held that objections filed by a judgment debtor to the decree holder's application for execution may be treated as

2 an application to certify the payment or adjustment provided the objections are filed within 90 days of the adjustment (j) But the judgment debtor is not entitled to an extension of time even if fraud is established on the part of the decree holder Such extension he can claim only under s 18 of the Limitation Act and that section provides only for the case where an applicant has by means of fraud been kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application it does not provide for the case where he has by means of fraud been kept from the exercise of his right to make the application (l)

Uncertified payment and limitation—Sub r (3) of this rule provides that an uncertified payment shall not be recognized by any Court executing the decree The third paragraph of the old section provided that an uncertified payment or adjustment shall not be recognized as a payment or adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree It was accordingly held under that section that there was nothing to prevent an uncertified payment from operating as a part payment within the meaning of s 20 of the Limitation Act so as to extend the period of limitation for applying for execution under that Act (?) The words as a payment or adjustment of the decree have been omitted in sub r (3) Therefore under the present rule the Court cannot recognize an uncertified payment or adjustment for any purpose whatever It follows that an uncertified payment can no longer operate as a part payment so as to extend the period of limitation for an application for the execution of a decree (m) This may be explained by an illustration. A obtains a decree against B in January 1921 for Rs 4 000 B pays A out of Court Rs 2 000 in January 1923 but the payment is not certified A applies for execution of the decree for the balance in January 1925 that is more than three years after the date of the decree but within three years from the date of payment under the decree Under the old section the payment though not certified operated as a fresh starting point for limitation and the application was therefore not barred Under the present rule the payment not being certified cannot be recognized by the Court even for the purpose of limitation and the application must be rejected as barred by limitation

There was at one time a conflict of decision as to the meaning of certify and as to how payments made out of Court should be certified The High Courts of Calcutta (n) Madras (o) Bombay (p) and Rangoon (q) have held that where interest on the decretal amount has been paid by the judgment debtor out of Court or where part payment has been made of the decretal amount by the judgment debtor out of Court the decree holder may apply to certify the payment by an application made expressly for that purpose either prior or subsequent to the application for execution or he may certify the payment by a declaration in an application for execution of the decree that he has received such payment [O 21 r 11 (e)] The Allahabad High Court in a series of decisions (r) maintained that the payment or adjustment must be certified in a separate proceeding distinct from and prior to the application for execution but in the recent Full Bench case of Joti Prasad v Srichand (s) it has fallen into line with the other High Courts

In some cases the decree holder's certification has been treated as an application to take a step in aid of execution and as affording a fresh starting point of limitation under Article 182 (a) so that the application must be made within three years of payment (t) It is submitted that this is not correct. The payment must be made within three years of the decree or of the last starting point of limitation to be effectual under section 20 of the Limitation Act (u) But it may be certified at any subsequent time by the decree holder (t)

Uncertified adjustment and estoppel—Since an uncertified adjustment cannot be recognized by the Court executing the decree it cannot operate as an estoppel against the decree holder. A obtains a decree against B. The decree is adjusted but the adjustment is not certified to the Court. A receives payments under the adjustment and then applies for execution of the decree. The adjustment being uncertified the fact that A has received payments under the adjustment does not estop him from applying for execution (u)

Restitution of uncertified payment on reversal of decree in appeal—If a decree is reversed in appeal the judgment debtor is entitled to recover back all payments made by him under the decree though the payments have not been certified. The decree being reversed in appeal the payment whether certified or not is one made without consideration and the judgment debtor is entitled to a refund by an application to the Court of first instance (x) See s 144

Surety—A surety under sec 145 for the performance of a decree is bound so long as the judgment debtor is bound and is not discharged by a payment which has not been certified (y)

Joint decree holders—See notes to O 21 r 16. Payment by judgment debtor out of Court to one of several holders of a joint decree

Minor—An adjustment of a decree made by a guardian without obtaining the permission of the Court as required by O 32 r 7 cannot be certified under this rule ( )

Assignment of decree—The transferee of a decree cannot execute a decree without first making an application under r 16 below to the Court which passed the decree. When such an application is made it is made to the Court as a Court which passed the decree and not as a Court executing the decree within the meaning of sub r (3). It is therefore open to the judgment debtor to object under rule 16 that the decree having been satisfied there was nothing to assign (a) But apparently if an order for execution is made in favour of the transferee after notice to the judgment debtor he cannot afterwards plead an uncertified payment for under rule 16 execution in favour of a transferee is subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by the decree holder (b) of the uncertified payment may be admitted by a criminal Court (l) It must however be noted that a mere application for execution not followed by execution does not constitute an offence under s 210 of the Penal Code for it is of the essence of the offence under that section that the decree must have been caused to be executed (m)

Courts executing Decrees

Land situate in more than one jurisdiction—This rule is new It gives effect to a ruling of the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case (n) The rule when amplified may be stated thus where immovable property attached in execution of a decree forms one estate of which a part is situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree and the rest beyond such limits the Court executing the decree has the power to attach and sell the whole estate though only a part thereof is situate within the local limits of its jurisdiction

4 [S 223 5th para] Where a decree has been passed in a suit of which the value is set forth in the plaint did not exceed two thousand rupees and which, as regards its subject-matter, is not excepted by the law for the time being in force from the cognizance of either a Presidency or a Provincial Court of Small Causes and the Court which passed it wishes it to be executed in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon, such Court may send to the Court of Small Causes in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon, as the case may be, the copies and certificates mentioned in rule 6, and such Court of Small Causes shall thereupon execute the decree as if it had been passed by itself

5 [S 223, 6th para] Where the Court to which a decree is to be sent for execution is situate within the same district as the Court which passed such decree, such Court shall send the same directly to the former Court But, where the Court to which the decree is to be sent for execution is situate in a different district, the Court which passed it shall send it to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed

Procedure where Court desires that its own decrees shall be executed by another Court

6 [S 224] The Court sending a decree for execution shall send—

- (a) a copy of the decree,
- (b) a certificate setting forth that satisfaction of the decree has not been obtained by execution within the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was passed or where the decree has been executed in part, the extent to which satisfaction has been obtained and what part of the decree remains unsatisfied, and
- (c) a copy of any order for the execution of the decree, or, if no such order has been made, a certificate to that effect

Clause (b)—The omission to transmit to the Court executing the decree the certificate referred to in cl (b) is not a material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 of this Order. Hence it is not a good ground for setting aside a sale in execution (a)

7 [S 225] The Court to which a decree is so sent shall cause such copies and certificates to be filed, without any further proof of the decree or order for execution, or of the copies thereof, unless the Court, for any special reasons to be recorded under the hand of the Judge requires such proof

Proof of jurisdiction—The old section contained the words or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it after the words or of the copies thereof. This gave rise to a conflict of opinion whether a Court to which a decree was sent for execution had the power to inquire whether the Court that passed the decree had jurisdiction to pass it and to refuse execution if it found that the decree was passed without jurisdiction. It was held in some cases that the Court had the power (r) and in others that it had not (g). The effect of the omission of these words is that a Court to which a decree is transferred for execution has now no power to question the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree under execution (r). It has been recently held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court that where a decree presented for execution was made by a Court which on the face of it had no jurisdiction to pass it the executing Court is entitled to refuse to execute it on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction (s). It is not clear whether the decision was intended to apply to a case where a decree passed by one Court is transferred for execution to another Court

11 the time of the passing of the decree, order immediate execution thereof by the arrest of the judgment debtor, prior to the preparation of a warrant if he is within the precincts of the Court

(2) Save as otherwise provided by sub rule (1), every application for the execution of a decree shall be in writing, signed and verified by the applicant or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall contain in a tabular form the following particulars, namely —

Written application

- (a) the number of the suit,
- (b) the names of the parties,
- (c) the date of the decree,
- (d) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree,
- (e) whether any, and (if any) what, payment or other adjustment of the matter in controversy has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree,
- (f) whether any, and (if any) what, previous applications have been made for the execution of the decree, the dates of such applications and their results,
- (g) the amount with interest (if any) due upon the decree or other relief granted thereby, together with particulars of any cross decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed,
- (h) the amount of the costs (if any) awarded,
- (i) the name of the person against whom execution of the decree is sought, and
- (j) the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, whether—
  - (1) by the delivery of any property specifically decreed,
  - (ii) by the attachment and sale, or by the sale without attachment, of any property,

- (iii) by the arrest and detention in prison of any person,
- (iv) by the appointment of a receiver,
- (v) otherwise, as the nature of the relief granted may require

(3) The Court to which an application is made under sub rule (2) may require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree

Sub rule (1) corresponds with s 206 of the Code of 1882 and sub rule (2) with s 230

Difference between old section 256 and sub rule (1)—Section 206 of the Code of 1882 was as follows —

|---|---|
| Power to direct immediate execution of money not exceeding Rs 1 000 | not exceed the sum of one thousand rupees the Court may when passing the decree on the oral application of the decree holder order immediate execution thereof by the issue of a warrant directed either against the person of the judgment debtor if he is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court or against his movable property within the same limits |
|---|---|

- 1 Under s 206 immediate execution could only be issued if the amount of the decree did not exceed Rs 1 000 Under the present rule there is no limit to the amount of the decree But the decree must be one for the payment of money
- 2 As a general rule a decree holder seeking to arrest the judgment debtor must present an application in writing to the Court and the Court may then direct a warrant to issue for the arrest of the judgment debtor who as a rule cannot be arrested without a warrant S 206 of the Code of 1882 dispensed with a written application and enabled the Court to issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment debtor on an oral application Sub rule (1) goes further and empowers the Court to order immediate arrest of the judgment debtor prior to the preparation of a warrant if he is within the precincts of the Court
- 3 Execution can no longer issue against the movable property of the judgment debtor on an oral application as it could under s 206

Privilege from arrest—The privilege from arrest under civil process conferred by s 130 of this Code does not extend to a judgment debtor against whom an order has been made for immediate arrest under this sub rule See s 130 sub s (3)

Alterations in sub rule (2)—Sub rule (2) corresponds with s 230 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

- 1 In cl (g) the words together with particulars of any cross decree whether passed before or after the date of the decrees ought to be executed are ~~new~~
- 2 In cl (j) sub-cl (ii) the words or by the sale without attachment are ~~new~~
- 3 CL (j) sub-cl. (iv) is new

The application shall be verified—An application for execution may be verified by any person acquainted with the facts of the case. It may therefore be verified by a person who holds a general power of attorney from the decree holder notwithstanding that the decree holder may be residing within the jurisdiction of the Court (u). Where the application is made by a person other than the decree holder all that is necessary is that the Court should be satisfied that such person is acquainted with the facts of the case. It is not necessary that it should be verified after the application for permission to verify it has been made nor is it necessary that the verification should be made in the presence of the Court (x).

The application shall state the date of the decree—The date of the decree means the date on which the judgment was pronounced (y). See O 20 r 7.

The application shall specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required—Where an application did not specify the mode in which the assistance of the Court was required, it was rejected (z). See r 17 below.

Sub rule (3)—This sub rule is new. The Court may under this sub rule require the applicant to produce a certified copy of the decree. Such copy however is not a necessary annexure to an application for execution. An application therefore which is not accompanied by a copy of the decree cannot be said to be an application not in accordance with law within the meaning of art 182 ( ) of sch I of the Limitation Act (a).

Amendment of application—See r 17 below.

12 [s 236] Where an application is made for the attachment of any movable property belonging to a judgment debtor but not in his possession, the decree holder shall annex to the application an inventory of the property to be attached, containing a reasonably accurate description of the same.

Application for attachment of movable property not in judgment-debtor's possession

Failure to annex inventory—Where no such inventory as is required by this rule is annexed to the application for execution the application cannot be said to be one in accordance with law within the meaning of art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 (b). When the decree is executed under s 52 against the legal representative of a deceased person no inventory is necessary (c).

13 [s 237] Where an application is made for the attachment of any immovable property belonging to a judgment debtor, it shall contain at the foot—

14 [S 238] Where an application is made for the attachment of any land which is registered in the office of the Collector, the Court may require the applicant to produce a certified extract from the register of such office, specifying the persons registered as proprietors of, or as possessing any transferable interest in, the land, or its revenue, or as liable to pay revenue for the land and the shares of the registered proprietors

Power to require certified extract from Collector's register in certain cases

Alterations in the law—Under the old section in the case of an application for the attachment of land registered in the Collector's Office it was necessary that the application should be accompanied by a certified extract from the register of such office. Under the present rule the Court may at its option require the applicant to produce such extract. The object is to save the applicant the costs of procuring such extract.

15 [S 231] (1) Where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one, any one or more of such persons may, unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary, apply for the execution of the whole decree for the benefit of them all, or where any of them has died, for the benefit of the survivors and the legal representatives of the deceased

Application for execution by joint decree holder

(2) Where the Court sees sufficient cause for allowing the decree to be executed on an application made under this rule, it shall make such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the persons who have not joined in the application

Alterations in the rule—This rule corresponds with s 231 of the Code of 1887 except in the following particulars—

- 1 The words or his or their representatives which occurred in s. 231 after the words one or more of such persons have been omitted in view of the provisions of s 146. See notes below under the head Any one or more of such persons
- 2 The words unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary occurring in sub-rule (1) are new. See notes below under the same words.

5 What is a joint decree—A decree jointly passed in favour of more persons than one is a joint decree. A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs. 5,000 this is a joint decree. It is not the less a joint decree because the shares of A and B in the decretal amount have been determined by the decree. Thus if it is determined by the decree that the share of A is Rs. 2,000 and the share of B is Rs. 3,000 the decree is still a joint decree. But though the decree in such a case is a joint decree the interest of A and B being determined by the decree either of them may apply for execution to the extent of his interest (d).

Application by one of several decree holders for execution of the whole decree—Ordinarily all the decree holders in a joint decree must join in an application for execution of the decree. The present rule provides for the case in which all decree holders are unable or are unwilling to join in the application and enables one or more of the decree holders to apply for execution of the whole decree for the benefit of them all. Where an application is made under this rule by some only of several joint decree holders the Court may in its discretion grant or refuse the application (e). Similarly it is in the discretion of the Court whether or not to give notice to the other decree holders or to the judgment debtor before making an order for execution under this rule it is not obligatory upon the Court to do so (f). If the application is allowed the Court will under sub r (2) make such order as it deems necessary for protecting the interests of the other decree holders and of the judgment debtor (g).

Unless the decree imposes any condition to the contrary—The provisions of this rule do not apply where by the terms of the decree execution has been made dependent on all the decree holders joining in the application (h).

Application by one of several decree holders for execution in respect of his share of the decree—The application under this rule by one of several holders of a joint decree must be for the execution of the whole decree and further it must also be for the benefit of the other decree holders as well as himself. A joint decree cannot be executed by one of several joint holders in respect of what the applicant considers to be his share in the decree (i). Thus if a decree is passed for A and B for Rs. 5,000 the decree is joint and neither A nor B can apply for execution of his proportionate share of the decree. But one of several holders of a joint decree may apply for execution of the decree to the extent of his interest therein if the extent of such interest is determined by the decree. Thus if in a suit for possession of land by A and B against C the Court has declared each of the plaintiffs to be entitled to a moiety of the land the Court may allow either plaintiff to execute the decree to the extent of his one half share though the decree is a joint decree (j).

The rule set forth above that one of several holders of a joint decree is not entitled to execution in respect of his share of the decree but that he must apply for execution of the whole decree applies only in those cases where the whole decree has remained unsatisfied. That rule does not apply where a joint decree has been satisfied in part before the date of the application for execution. In such a case execution cannot issue for the whole decree but only for so much thereof as has remained unsatisfied. This subject is considered in the next following paragraph.

An application for execution by a joint decree holder with regard to a certain portion of the decree giving up the rest the other decree holders being parties to the application and standing by is not illegal as contravening the provisions of this rule but there cannot be any subsequent execution for the balance of the same decree (k)

Payment by judgment debtor out of Court to one of several holders of a joint decree—If obtains a decree against C for Rs 5000 C may pay the amount of the decree into Court (r 1) and the Court will then pay the amount to A on his application. If C does not adopt that course and pays the amount to A out of Court (r 1) C must see that if the decree holder certifies the payment to the Court. If A fails to certify the payment C may apply to the Court to record the payment as certified. If C also fails to do so the Court executing the decree will not recognise the payment and will order execution (r 2) if A notwithstanding payment to him of the amount of the decree out of Court applies for execution of the decree against C.

But if there are two or more decree holders and the payment is made by the judgment debtor to one of them the question arises whether the other decree holders have the right to execute the decree? The following illustrations supply the answer—

I (1) A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs 5000 C pays B his (B's) share of the decretal amount out of Court and the payment is certified to the Court. A then applies under this rule for execution of the whole decree. A cannot execute for more than his own share as the decree has been satisfied as to B's share (l).

(2) If in the above case the payment is not certified to the Court but B admits the payment A will be limited to his share in execution (m). But if B does not admit the payment the Court will allow execution to issue for the whole decree.

II A and B obtain a decree against C for Rs 5000 C pays the whole amount of the decree to B out of Court and the payment is certified to the Court. A then applies for execution of the decree to the extent of his own share. Is A entitled to execute the decree to the extent of his share in spite of the fact that B has certified satisfaction of the whole decree? It has been held that he is for one of several joint decree holders is not competent to grant full discharge of the decree out of Court or to certify to the Court complete satisfaction of more than his own share of the decree without the concurrence of the other decree holders (n). But A has another remedy besides execution against C and that is a suit against B to recover his share from him for B has by his certificate admitted receipt of the whole amount of the decree (o).

Any one or more of such persons.—This expression includes persons claiming under such person. A transferee of a decree within the meaning of r 16 below is such a person (p).

Amendment.—An application for execution of a joint decree by one only of the decree holders should state that the application is made on behalf of all the decree holders. If the application contains no such statement it should be rejected. Leave to amend cannot be granted for while O 21 r 17 allows a defect with reference to rr 11 to 14 to be amended it makes no mention of this rule (q).

Appeal—An order determining any question mentioned or referred to in s. 47 is a decree (s. 2) and is therefore appealable under s. 96. The questions referred to in s. 47 are questions arising between a decree holder on the one hand and the judgment debtor on the other and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. This is illustrated by the following cases—

(1) A and B obtain a decree against C. A alone applies for execution of the whole decree. C (the judgment debtor) contends that A alone should not be allowed to execute the whole decree. Here the question being one between the decree holder on the one hand and the judgment debtor on the other, any order made upon the application is appealable as a decree. If  $\S$  4 a application is allowed C may appeal from the order and if the application is disallowed A may appeal from the order (r).

(2) But if the objection to execution was raised not by C the judgment debtor but by B the other decree holder the question being between the decree holders inter se no appeal will lie from an order either granting or refusing the application (s).

16 [S. 232] Where a decree or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree holder in the decree, is transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee may apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it, and the decree may be executed in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by such decree holder.

Application for execution by transferee of decree

Provided that, where the decree, or such interest as aforesaid, has been transferred by assignment, notice of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections (if any) to its execution.

Provided also that, where a decree for the payment of money against two or more persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others.

Alterations in the law—

1. The words "or if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons the interest of any decree holder in the decree" have been added into the first paragraph to make it clear that the rule is not confined in its application to a transfer of the whole decree but extends to a transferee of the interest of any holder of a joint decree. This was in fact the interpretation put upon the old section (t).
2. The word "if that Court thinks fit" which occurred in the old section in the first paragraph before the words "the decree may be executed" have been omitted. See notes below. Right to execution does not depend upon discretion of Court.

Decree—The expression decree in the first paragraph and the first proviso of this rule is not confined to a money decree. It includes a mortgage decree (u). The second proviso is confined to money decrees.

Rule of procedure—This rule regulates procedure and does not affect substantive rights. The transferee of a decree cannot execute it until he has obtained an order under this rule, but the transfer operates from the date of the transfer and the transferee is entitled without obtaining an order under this rule to object to an attachment of the decree made subsequent to the transfer (v). If a liquidator has transferred a decree before the company is dissolved, he may execute a written assignment for the purpose of this rule after dissolution and after he has ceased to be liquidator (w).

Application for execution by transferee of decree—No order should be made under this rule for the execution of a decree on the application of a transferee of the decree unless—

- I the decree has been transferred by a signment in writing or by operation of law [an oral assignment is not sufficient (x)]
- II the application for execution is made to the Court which passed the decree and
- III where the decree has been transferred by assignment notice of the application has been given to the transferor and the judgment debtor.

The rule does not require an independent application by the transferee for recognition as transferee. All that the rule enjoins is that a transferee seeking execution should give notice of the application for execution to the transferor and the judgment debtor (y). See notes below.

Transfer of decree against a company in liquidation. On the other hand until an order for execution is made in favour of the transferee he has not acquired the status of decree holder. See sec 2 (3).

I Who may apply for execution under this rule—The following persons and no others may apply for execution under this rule ( ) —

- (a) The transferee of a decree under an assignment in writing. [A transferee under an oral assignment has no locus standi to apply for execution under this rule (a)].
- (b) The transferee of a decree by operation of law e.g. the legal representative of a deceased decree holder or the Official Assignee in the case of an insolvent decree holder or the purchaser of a decree at a court sale in execution of a decree against the decree holder (r 53) (b). A transfer of property by A to B which is the subject matter of a suit by A against C does not amount to a transfer by operation of law of a decree subsequently obtained by A against C so as to entitle B to apply for execution under this rule (c). A deed of transfer of property which is the subject matter of a suit may involve a transfer of the decree passed on the very day on which the deed is executed but the transfer in that case is not by operation of law but by an assignment in writing (d). A transfer by operation of law means a

Explanation III—A person who is entitled under a decree to an assignment of a previous decree obtained by A against B but who has not obtained such assignment is not a transferee of the previous decree so as to entitle him to apply for execution of it. But he will be entitled to apply if he has obtained an assignment before the date of the application (m)

Explanation II—A person to whom the holder of a decree for possession of immovable property sells a portion of the property is not a transferee of the decree within the meaning of this rule and he is not therefore entitled to execute the decree. A transfer of property is not the same thing as a transfer of a decree (n)

Explanation I—A transferee of a decree awarding maintenance is entitled to execution under this section. The reason is that though a right to future maintenance cannot be transferred having regard to the provisions of s. 6 cl. (d) of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 there is no objection to a transfer of such right when it is awarded by a decree. The transferee therefore of such a decree is entitled to recover by execution maintenance that has fallen due. He cannot of course attach maintenance before it has fallen due (o). See s. 60 sub s. (1) cl. (n) and notes thereto on p. 201 above.

Benamidar—D obtains a decree against B. C purchases the decree from A in the name of D. Here C is the real transferee and D is benamidar or ostensible transferee. Is D entitled to take out execution of the decree? Yes according to the High Court of Allahabad (p). No according to the High Court of Calcutta but if he has succeeded in taking out execution (as where it is not brought to the notice of the Court that he is a benamidar) the application for execution made by him will save a subsequent application by C from the bar of limitation (q).

Where the alleged transferee of a decree is found to be the benamidar of a judgment debtor the Court is bound by the second proviso to this rule to refuse to allow the decree to be executed against the other judgment debtors in favour of the alleged transferee (r).

It has been held in some cases that the mere fact that an order for execution has been made on the application of a benamidar does not preclude the real transferee from applying under this rule to continue the execution proceedings himself but the real transferee will be bound by proceedings in execution up to that date (s). The High Court of Madras has held that where a decree has been transferred by assignment in writing the transferee alone can apply for execution under this rule though he may be a mere benamidar and that the real transferee is not entitled to apply under this rule (t). But in a latter case in which the real transferee his benamidar the ostensible transferee and the original decree holder or transferor were all dead and there was a contest between their legal representatives the Madras High Court said that rule 16 was not exhaustive and that the Court had power to inquire who was the real owner entitled to execution (u).

II Application for execution by a transferee should be made to the Court which passed the decree—A transferee of a decree must apply for execution

16 to the Court which passed the decree though the decree has been sent for execution to another Court (t) The Court to which a decree has been transmitted for execution has no jurisdiction to make an order for execution on the application of a transferee of the decree If such an order is made it is illegal and it must be set aside in appeal (u) As to the definition of Court which passed the decree see s 37 and notes thereto

III Notice shall be given to the transferor and the judgment debtor—The notice which is required by the first proviso is not notice of the assignment but notice of the application for execution of the decree (x) The provisions of the rule as to notice are mandatory and if execution is issued without notice the proceedings in execution are void (y) The object of the notice is to enable the transferor and the judgment debtor to raise such objections as regards the assignment as may be available to them eg that the consideration money was not fully paid or that the transferee is a benamidar for some of the judgment debtors (z) The object of issuing notices to the transferor and the judgment debtor is to determine once and for all and in the presence of all parties concerned the validity of the assignment (a) It cannot be said that notice is necessary each time the assignee comes in to get the decree executed (a) for after the first order in his favour he has acquired the status of a decree holder The transferee cannot accept the assignment and at the same time plead fraud to escape paying the consideration for the assignment (b) If the property of the judgment debtor is attached without hearing his objections the attachment is illegal even if the Court subsequently hears his objections and confirms the attachment after such hearing (c) Where the judgment debtor is dead the notice required by this rule should be given to his legal representative (d) Where no notice is given as required by this rule it is in the discretion of the Court to grant time to the transferee to enable him to serve the notice (e) The Patna High Court has held that the notice required by this rule need not be in writing (f)

Where on an application by the transferee of a decree to have his name substituted as decree holder no objection is taken by the judgment debtor as to the validity of the transfer the judgment debtor will be precluded from questioning the validity of the transfer on an application by the transferee for execution of the decree (g) Similarly where no objection is taken by the judgment debtor that no notice was given to the transferor he will be precluded from raising that objection at a subsequent stage of the execution proceedings (h)

There is nothing to preclude a transferee of a decree from applying under s 39 to the Court which passed the decree to send the decree for execution to another Court (i) But the notice required by this rule must be issued by the Court which passed the decree and not by the Court to which the decree is sent for execution (j)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that the mere issue of a notice under this rule does not operate as a revivor within the meaning of arts 182 and 183 of the Limitation Act (k) but the High Courts of Allahabad and Madras have held that it does. According to these Courts a mere application by the transferee for substituting his name for that of the decree holder operates as a revivor of the decree and gives a fresh starting point of limitation for executing the decree (l). And the Madras Court has held that an application by the transferee to bring the representative of the deceased judgment debtor on the record to serve him with notice under this rule has the same effect (m).

Execution does not depend upon discretion of Court—In the old section the words were and if that Court thinks fit the decree may be executed &c. It was accordingly held under that section that the Court had a discretion to grant or refuse an application for execution made by a transferee (n). The words if that Court thinks fit have been omitted in this rule. Therefore if the conditions specified in this rule are satisfied a transferee of a decree is entitled to execution as of right like the original decree holder.

Transfer of decree for the payment of money against two or more persons to one of them—This subject may be considered under the following two heads—

- 1 Where the whole decree has been transferred
- 2 Where the decree is a joint one and part only of the decree has been transferred

First as regards transfer of the whole decree—Where a decree for the payment of money has been transferred by assignment or by operation of law to one of several judgment debtors the decree is wholly extinguished. The transferee cannot execute the decree against the other judgment debtor but his remedy against them is by a regular suit for contribution as if the decree had been satisfied by him. The object of the second proviso to the rule is not to deprive the judgment debtor transferee of all relief but to impose upon him the duty of proceeding by what was considered a more appropriate procedure that is a suit for contribution (o). The provision of this rule cannot be evaded by the judgment debtor who satisfies the decree taking a transfer of the decree in the name of a benamidar (p).

(a) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs 5000. B satisfies the decree by paying Rs 5000 to A. In such a case B is bound to pay to C his (C's) share of the judgment debt. If C fails to contribute his share B's remedy is by way of suit against C to recover the amount. [This illustration is merely introductory.]

(b) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs 5000. B purchases the decree from A. Here B's position is exactly the same as in (a) that is to say the decree must be taken as having been satisfied by B. B cannot therefore execute the decree against C and his only remedy is to bring a suit against C for contribution. Saroop Chunder v. Troylokhonath (1866) 9 W. P. 230.

(c) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs 5000. A dies and on his death the decree passes to B as his heir. The position is the same as in (b). Banarasi v. Maharan (1887) 5 All. 27.

16 (d) A obtains a decree against B and C for Rs 5000. B pays the amount of the decree to A. At B's request A transfers the decree to F. F being merely a beneficiary for B is not entitled to execute the decree against C. Next as regards transfer of a portion of a joint decree—Where a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons and the interest of any decree holder in such decree has been transferred by assignment or by operation of law to one of several judgment debtors the decree is extinguished to the extent of the interest so transferred, and execution can only issue for the rest of the decree.

The decree is extinguished to the extent of Rs 2000 and neither B (as decree holder) nor C (as transferee of A's interest in the decree) can execute the decree against D for more than Rs 3000. Pogore v Tukurooldeen (1876) 20 W P 343 Banarsi v Mahirani (1883) 10 All 27

Decree for the payment of money—The expression decree for the payment of money in the second proviso to the rule does not include mortgage decrees (q). Such a decree is not a decree for the payment of money until a personal decree is passed against the mortgagor (r).

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that the expression decree for the payment of money against two or more persons means a personal decree for the payment of money against two or more defendants. Hence the proviso does not apply where the decree is not against the defendants personally. A obtains a decree against B as the legal representative of X and against C as the legal representative of Y for Rs 5000 to be paid out of the estate of X and Y. A dies leaving B as his heir and on his death the decree passes to him by operation of law. The decree not being a personal decree against B and C B is entitled as transferee of A's decree to have the decree executed against the estate of Y (s). The High Court of Madras has dissentied from this view. According to that Court the fact that one of the defendants is directed by the decree to pay the amount of the decree out of the family property in his hands does not make the decree any the less a decree for payment of money against him (t).

Again the expression decree for the payment of money against two or more persons means a decree against two or more persons jointly. Hence the rule laid down in the second proviso does not apply where the decree is not passed against the defendants jointly. In a suit by A against B and C A obtains a decree against B for Rs 90 and against C for Rs 30. A then assigns the decree to C. The decree not being a joint decree C may execute the decree passed against B for Rs 90 (u).

Award—The Calcutta High Court has held that a transferee of an award filed in Court under the provisions of the Arbitration Act 1899 is entitled to apply for execution under this rule (v). See notes to r 29 below.

Transfer pending execution—The Patna High Court has held that if a decree holder applies for execution and pending execution assigns his interest in the decree an application by the transferee for execution is not a fresh application for execution but one to continue the pending execution proceedings and no notice under this rule is necessary (u). But quære whether the judgment debtor is not entitled to object to the validity of the assignment. It has already been stated that the legal representative of a decree holder cannot be substituted on the record of the execution proceeding but must make an application for execution under rule 16 (x). Under the Code of 1882 the definition of decree holder included a person to whom a decree is transferred whether by assignment or by operation of law and it was possible to hold that he could come in immediately to carry on a pending proceeding (y). Under the present Code the position is different and the transferee does not acquire the status of a decree holder until an order for execution is made in his favour [sec 2 (3)]. The dictum in Akhoy v Surendra ( ) that the heirs could have applied immediately to carry on proceedings is perhaps an echo of decisions under the old Code. In Mulhu Chettiar v Lodd Goundas (a) section 146 was referred to. But as that section begins with the words save as otherwise provided it is excluded by O 21 r 16. It is submitted that the conclusion arrived at in Palaniappa v Valliammai (b) is correct and that the transferee in a pending execution if he applies at all must apply for execution and not for substitution.

Appeal—An order determining any question between the judgment debtor and the representative of the decree holder (s 47) is a decree (s 2) and is therefore appealable as such (s 90). A transferee of a decree is a representative of the decree holder within the meaning of s 47. Therefore an order refusing to recognize the transferee of a decree or dismissing his application for execution on the objection of the judgment debtor is a decree and appealable as such (c).

Suit by transferee—A transferee of a decree whose application is rejected under this rule on the ground that the transfer is not valid is not precluded from instituting a regular suit for a declaration of the validity of the transfer. Such a suit is not barred by the provisions of s 47 (d).

Equities enforceable against original decree holder—See s 40 and notes thereto.

Transfer of decree against a company in liquidation—Where a decree against a company in liquidation is transferred pending the winding up proceedings and the liquidator refuses to recognize the transferee the transferee may apply to the executing Court under s 47 (3) to be substituted for the original decree holder to enable him to prove his claim before the liquidator. S 171 of the Indian Companies Act 1913 is no bar to the granting of such an application (e).

Transfer of de re pending attachment—The attachment of a decree for the payment of money does not prevent a valid transfer of the decree and the transferee is entitled to be substituted in place of the transferor and to apply under this rule for execution (f)

17 [S 215] (1) On receiving an application for the execution of a decree as provided by rule 11, sub rule (2), the Court shall ascertain whether such of the requirements of rules 11 to 14 as may be applicable to the case have been complied with and, if they have not been complied with, the Court may reject the application, or may allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time to be fixed by it.

(2) Where an application is amended under the provisions of sub rule (1), it shall be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law and presented on the date when it was first presented.

(3) Every amendment made under this rule shall be signed or initialed by the Judge

(4) When the application is admitted, the Court shall enter in the proper register a note of the application and the date on which it was made, and shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application.

Provided that in the case of a decree for the payment of money, the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be correspond with the amount due under the decree

Changes in the law—This rule corresponds with s. 240 of the Code of 1894 except in the following particulars—

- 1 The words "may allow the defect to be remedied" in sub rule (1) have been substituted for the word "may allow it [application] to be remedied" a less, more comprehensive and covering the case of omission to produce a copy of the decree as now required by r 11 (2)
- 2 Sub rule (2) is new. See notes below. Sub rule (3) limitation.

Sub rule (1) - This rule lays down the procedure to be adopted by the Courts on receiving an application for execution. Sub r (1) empowers the Court to reject if application or allow an amendment. The Court should in each case exercise its discretion and where an amendment ought to be allowed it should allow the amendment. Thus where an application is not signed it should not reject the application, but allow it to be amended. (b) The amendment may be allowed even after the application for execution is registered provided the execution of the decree has not at the date of the application for amendment become barred by limitation (i) But the High Court of Madras has held that where an application for amendment is made after the expiration of 12 years provided by s 48 the Court has a discretion either to accept or to reject it (j)

Sub rule (2) limitation—Article 182 of the Limitation Act provides inter alia that the first application for execution must be made within three years from the date of the decree. If the decree has not been executed and it is necessary to make further application each successive application must be made within three years from the date of the last application. But the last application in each case must have been one in accordance with law otherwise it will not be a fresh starting point for limitation. An application which does not comply with the requirements of rules 11 to 14 of this order is not one in accordance with law (l). Sub rule (2) is therefore important with reference to limitation for if an application is defective with reference to rules 11 to 14 and is returned for amendment within a fixed time it will when so amended be an application in accordance with law as from the date when it was first presented. Under the old section it was held that where an order was made for amending an application for execution and the amendment was made the application should be deemed to have been presented not on the date when it was first presented but on the date when it was amended. The result was that if the amendment was not made until after the expiration of the period of limitation on the application was time barred though the amendment was made within the time fixed by the Court (i). Those decisions are no longer law. Compare s 140. On the other hand substantial compliance with rules 11 to 14 is all that is necessary and if the application does so comply with the rules it will be in accordance with law and will be effectual to stay the progress of limitation whether the Court admits or rejects or returns it for amendment (m). Sub r (2) applies only if the application is returned for amendment for non-compliance with the provisions of rr 11 to 14 and the application is subsequently amended. Sub r (2) does not in terms apply to cases where an application is returned for amendment for some other reason (n).

The last day for presenting an application for execution is 31st July 1920. The decree holder presents the application on that day. The application does not comply with the requirements of O 21 r 11 (2). The Court may under this rule return the application for amendment and fix a date within which it should be amended. If the application is amended within the time fixed by the Court it will be deemed to have been presented on 31st July 1920. Further it will be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law within the meaning of art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 so as to give a fresh starting point of limitation.

Where on an application for execution presented by an agent it is objected that the agent is not duly authorized and the agent thereupon files a power of attorney the Court should not dismiss the application but treat it as having been filed on the date on which the power of attorney was filed (o).

for execution is registered provided the execution of the decree has not been barred by limitation (1). In *Prasanna Kumar v. - (a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction shall be entered upon both decrees, and
- (b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the holder of the decree for the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction on the decree for the smaller sum

(2) This rule shall be deemed to apply where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees and as well in respect of judgment debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment debts due by the assignee himself

(3) This rule shall not be deemed to apply unless—

- (a) the decree holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits, and

(b) the sums due under the decrees are definite

(4) The holder of a decree passed against several persons jointly and severally may treat it as a cross decree in relation to a decree passed against him singly in favour of one or more of such persons

(a) A holds a decree against B for Rs 1000. B holds a decree against A for the payment of Rs 1000 in case A fails to deliver certain goods at a future day. B cannot treat his decree as a cross decree under this rule.

(b) A and B co-plaintiffs obtain a decree for Rs 1000 against C and C obtains a decree for Rs 1000 against B. C cannot treat his decree as a cross decree under this rule.

(c) A obtains a decree against B for Rs 1000. C who is a trustee for B obtains a decree on behalf of B against A for Rs 1000. A cannot treat C's decree as a cross-decree under this rule.

(d) A B C D and E are jointly and severally liable for Rs 1 000 under a decree obtained by F. A obtains a decree for Rs 100 against F singly and applies for execution to the Court in which the joint decree is being executed. F may treat his joint decree as a cross decree under this rule.

Changes in the law —

- 1 The words "where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross decree" in sub rule (1) are new. They give effect to certain decisions noted below under the head "Application of the rule".
- 2 The words "separate suits" in sub rule (1) are new. They have been added to show that for the purposes of execution a counter claim is not a separate suit (p).
- 3 Sub rule (4) and the illustration thereto that is all (d) are both new. This sub rule gives effect to the decisions noted under the head "Sub rule (4)".

Application of the rule—The meaning of sub rule (1) may be explained by the following illustration. A holds a decree against B for Rs 5 000. B holds a decree against A for Rs 3 000. A and B each applies for execution of his decree to Court X which has jurisdiction to execute both decrees. The decrees being cross decrees they will be set off against each other. Hence B, who is the holder of the decree for the smaller amount, will not be allowed to take out execution of his decree. Execution will only be allowed of A's decree to the extent of Rs 2 000 being the difference between the amount of his and B's decree. If the decree held by B was also for Rs 5 000 no other party should be allowed to take out execution and satisfaction should be entered upon both decrees.

This rule does not apply unless—

- (1) the cross decrees are for the payment of two sums of money
- (2) the decrees have been obtained in separate suits [see notes above under the head "Alterations in the rule"]
- (3) both the decrees are capable of execution at the same time [ill (1)] and by the same Court and
- (4) the decree holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been passed is the judgment debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both the suits [ills (b) and (c)].

If the cross decrees fulfil the above conditions it is also necessary that both decrees should be before the executing Court for execution and that applications should have been made for execution of both decrees. If either decree holder omits to apply for execution of his decree the other decree holder may take out execution of his decree for its full amount (q). Note the words with which the rule begins.

Cross decrees in separate suits—An order for payment of me no profits made under s 141 is a decree by virtue of s 2 (p). Hence it has been held that there is no distinction for the purposes of this rule between a decree in a suit and a decree in a proceeding under s 141. A obtains a decree against B. In execution of the decree B's property is sold and it is purchased by A. The decree is reversed in appeal and A is directed to deliver possession of the property to B and to pay to B Rs 712 for me no profits. B applies for execution against A in respect of Rs 714. A claims to set off another decree obtained by him against B. The set off may be allowed under this rule (r).

8 Cross decrees for the payment of two sums of money—1 s e B or a mortgage and obtains a decree for Rs 1 800 to be realized by sale of the mortgaged property B obtains a decree against A for Rs 2 000 Here A's decree though it is one for sale in enforcement of a mortgage and not strictly for the payment of money may be set off against B's decree by virtue of the provisions of r 20 of this order (a).

Where execution is taken out for the smaller sum—This rule provides that where application are made for the execution of cross decrees one for a larger amount and the other for a smaller amount execution should be taken out only for the difference This means that the decree for the smaller amount cannot be executed at all and no separate execution should issue of that decree (1) It is to be noted however that if the Court in contravention of the provisions of this rule allows execution to issue of the decree for the smaller sum and a sale is made in such execution the sale is not void the reason being that a purchaser under a sale in execution is not bound to inquire whether the judgment debtor had a cross judgment of a higher amount (a).

Same character in both suits—The provisions of this rule do not apply unless the decree holder in one suit is the judgment debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits A holds a money decree against B B holds a decree for sale passed in a suit brought by him as mortgagee against C the mortgagor and against A a purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property from C A applies for execution of his decree against B B is not entitled to set off his decree against A's decree The reason is that A does not fill the same character in both the suits The decree held by A is in his favour personally which he may execute against B by the arrest of his person or the attachment of his property This cannot be said of B's decree against A for B is not ordered by the decree personally to pay any sum of money but is only given an option to pay if he wishes to save the property in which he is interested (a) If in the case put above C the mortgagor was the holder of the money decree against B instead of A and C applied for execution against B B (the mortgagee) could have set off his decree against C (a) But a firm name is only a description of the individual partner and so a decree against a firm can be set off against a decree against a partner (x).

Assignment of decree—If A who has obtained a decree against B attaches in execution of his decree a decree held by B against C A is an assignee of B's decree within the meaning of this rule (y) [See O 21 r 53 (3)] It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that a decree obtained against the assignor in a suit pending at the date of the assignment may be set off against the decree assigned if the assignee had notice of such suit (1) A obtains a decree against B for Rs 5 000 B then sues A for Rs 4 000 Pending B's suit C obtains a transfer of A's decree with notice of the suit A decree is then passed for B in his suit against A C applies for execution against B of the whole decree for Rs 5 000 He is not entitled to execute for more than Rs 2 000 as the transfer was taken with notice of B's suit See notes to s 49.

Sub rule (4)—This sub rule gives effect to the decisions in the undermentioned cases where it was held that the holder of a decree passed jointly and severally against several judgment debtors one of whom holds a decree against such decree holder may treat his joint decree as a cross decree (a) See ill (1) to the sub rule.

19 [S 247] Where application is made to a Court for the execution of a decree under which two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other, then,—

- (a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction for both shall be entered upon the decree, and,
- (b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered upon the decree

Object of the rule—The object of this rule is to prevent each side executing a decree in respect of sums due whether for costs or otherwise under the same decree (b)

Application of the rule—This rule is not limited in its application to cases in which the remedy of each party against the other is of precisely the same nature. A mortgagor sues B the mortgagee for redemption. A decree is passed in the suit ordering that upon A paying to B Rs 1000 (mortgage debt) on a day fixed by the Court B should reconvey the mortgaged property to A and that if such payment is not made within the time fixed by the Court the property should be sold. At the same time A is awarded costs Rs 100 to be paid by B. Here both the sums being payable under the same decree the provisions of the present rule apply though B's remedy if A failed to pay the mortgage debt would be by sale of the mortgaged property and A's remedy if B failed to pay the costs would be against B personally. Hence A being entitled to the smaller amount (Rs 100) cannot take out execution against B (c) B being entitled to the larger amount (Rs 1000) is alone entitled to take out execution. But he cannot take out execution for more than Rs 900 which is the same thing as saying that he must reconvey the property to A if A paid Rs 900 and he cannot insist on payment of the full sum of Rs 1000 as a condition of reconveyance (d). The point to be noted is that in the case of cross claims under the same decree execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum. The party entitled to the smaller sum is not entitled to take out execution. It follows from this that if A is entitled to recover from B net profits amounting to Rs 445 under a decree and B is entitled to recover from A under the same decree costs amounting to Rs 850. A being entitled to the smaller sum cannot take out execution against B though B's claim to execute his decree for costs is barred by limitation (e). It may also be noted that if the party entitled to the larger sum executed the decree for the full amount without deducting the smaller sum the party entitled to the smaller sum may be awarded a refund of that sum under s 151 of the Code (f).

rule shows impliedly that the expression decree for the payment of money and other similar expressions in the Code do not include a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge. See in particular s. 34 s. 73 and O 21 r 53.

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that a simple decree for recovery of money can be set off against a decree for recovery of money by enforcement of a mortgage or charge (g). See notes to r 18 above. Cross decrees for the payment etc.

21 [S 230 2nd para] The Court may, in its discretion, refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor

Simultaneous execution

Simultaneous execution against person and property—An order refusing execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor amounts to a decree under s. 2 cl (2) read with s. 47 and it is therefore appealable (h).

But though the Court has a discretion to refuse simultaneous execution it cannot decline to order execution against the person of the judgment debtor on the ground that the decree holder should proceed in the first place against his property (i).

Notice to show cause against execution in certain cases

- (b) against the legal representative of a party to the decree,

Provided that no such notice shall be necessary in consequence of more than one year having elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for execution if the application is made within one year from the date of the last order against the party against whom execution is applied for, made on any previous application for execution, or in consequence of the application being made against the legal representative of the judgment-debtor, if upon a previous application for execution against the same person the Court has ordered execution to issue against him.

(2) Nothing in the foregoing sub rule shall be deemed to preclude the Court from issuing any process in execution of a decree without issuing the notice thereby prescribed if, for reasons to be recorded, it considers that the issue of such notice O 21 would cause unreasonable delay or would defeat the ends of

Changes in the law—Sub rule (2) is new. See note below. Sub rule (2)

The Court shall issue a notice--It is not enough merely to take out a notice. The notice must be served upon the judgment debtor or upon his legal representative (j)

Omission to give notice — This rule provides that except where notice is dispensed with under sub r (2) the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice to the person against whom execution is applied for if the application for execution is made more than one year after the date of the decree or if it is made against the legal representative of the judgment debtor. This gives rise to the question whether the omission to give notice as required by this rule renders a sale in execution of the decree absolutely void for want of jurisdiction or whether the omission is a mere irregularity so as to render the sale merely voidable that is valid until it is set aside. In Gopal Chunder v Gunamoni Das (1) the High Court of Calcutta held that a notice under this rule is necessary in order that the Court should obtain jurisdiction to sell the property by way of execution and that the omission to give notice is by itself sufficient to render the sale void. This decision was approved by the Privy Council in Raghunath Das v Sunder Das (2). In Raghunath Das case the judgment debtor became insolvent pending the attachment. No notice was given to the Official Assignee as required by cl (b) of sub r (1) and it was held that the sale was a nullity. Since the notice under this rule affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction it follows that where execution is issued without previously issuing a notice required under sub rule (1) and property belonging to the judgment debtor is sold in execution the sale is a nullity whether the property is purchased by the decree holder [O 21 r 2] (m) or by a third party (n). It makes no difference whether the property sold is movable or immovable (o). The Patna High Court has held that where a notice has been issued and the judgment debtor though not served with the notice appears and contests the execution the object of the rule is achieved and the Court has jurisdiction to hold the sale (p).

Notice to wrong person as legal representative—The principle laid down in Raghunath Das & case applies where no notice is given. But what if notice is given and served upon a person who proves not to be the legal representative. The leading case upon the subject is Malkarjun v. Varbars (9). A decree was passed against a person who afterwards died, and in executing the decree against his estate a person was served as his legal representative with notice under this rule. The person served objected 22 that he was not the legal representative of the deceased. The executing Court decided and as it turned out subsequently decided erroneously that he was to be treated as such representative [see s 47]. After that the execution proceedings went on with the result that certain property belonging to the deceased judgment debtor was sold and purchased by a third party. The question arose whether the sale was void as made without jurisdiction or whether it was merely voidable. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that a notice having been served in fact though upon a wrong person, the Court had jurisdiction to sell the property and the sale was not void. Their Lordships further held that the omission to give notice to the right person constituted a serious irregularity and that the sale was therefore voidable that is to say it was valid until it was set aside under O 21 r 90 or by independent suit brought within a year as provided by art 12 cl (a) of the Limitation Act. Their Lordships said: He (the person served) contended that he was not the right person but the Court having received his protest decided that he was the right person and so proceeded with the execution. In doing so the Court was exercising its jurisdiction. It made a sad mistake it is true but a Court has jurisdiction to decide wrong as well as right (r). But if the decree holder knows who the legal representative of the deceased judgment debtor is and deliberately serves the notice upon a wrong person as his legal representative and there is no adjudication by the executing Court as to who the legal representative is the sale has been held to be absolutely void (s).

More than one year after the date of the decree.—The term decree in sub r (1) cl (a) means the decree capable of execution. Thus where an appeal is preferred from a decree and the appeal is dismissed for default under O 41 r 11 the decree of the lower Court is the decree capable of execution and the period of one year is to be calculated from the date of that decree (t). See notes to s 38. What decree may be executed. Even where the decretal amount is made payable by instalment the period of one year must be calculated from the date of the decree and not from the date of default (u).

More than one notice.—In one case the High Court of Patna held that once the original decree has been put into execution after notice as provided by this rule no fresh notice need be served for every subsequent application for execution made more than a year from the date of the last order for execution (v) but this case was overruled by a Special Bench of the same High Court where it was held that the rule applies to every application for execution and not merely to the first application and that in every case where an application for execution is made more than a year after the last order made against the judgment debtor in any previous application a fresh notice must be served (w).

The High Court of Madras has held that where property is attached on an application for execution no notice need be given to the judgment debtor of the application for sale though the latter application is made more than a year after the previous application for execution (x).

Irregular service of notice.—Irregularity in the service of notice as distinguished from non service is a material irregularity within the meaning of O 21 r 90 (y).

Death of judgment debtor pending execution by transferee Court—See O 2 notes to s 50

Court executing the decree —It may either be the Court which passed the decree or the Court to which the decree is sent for execution

Sub rule (2) —This sub rule is new It enables the Court to issue execution without issuing a notice as provided by sub rule (1) in cases where the issue of a notice may involve an unreasonable delay or defeat the ends of justice Where the Court dispenses with notice under sub rule (1) it should record its reasons (2) In a recent Madras case it was said that the omission to record the reasons is a mere irregularity (a)

Limitation to set aside sale for want of notice —An application to set aside a sale which is void eg for want of notice under this rule is governed by art 181 and not art 166 of Sch I of the Limitation Act (b)

Appeal —An application to set aside a sale held without notice as required by sub r (1) falls within s 47 and hence a second appeal lies (c)

Decree against two or more persons jointly —Art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 applies to decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts Under Explanation 1 to that article when a decree has been passed jointly against more person than one an application for execution of the decree if made against any one or more of them shall take effect against them all Therefore an order of revivor of a joint decree made under this rule against one or more of the judgment debtors will operate against the other judgment debtors though no notice has been given to them No such Explanation is appended to art 183 which applies to decrees of Chartered High Courts Therefore if a joint decree is passed by a Chartered High Court an order of revivor of such decree made against one of several judgment debtors does not operate against other judgment debtors to whom no notice is given under this rule (d)

Notice under this rule and limitation —One of the starting points for limitation under art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 for the execution of decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts is the date of issue of notice under this rule The High Court of Calcutta has held that the date of issue of notice means the date when the notice is actually issued and not the date when the Court passes the order for issuing the notice (e) On the other hand the High Courts of Bombay and Allahabad have held that the date of issue of notice means the date when the Court passes the order for issuing the notice and not the date on which the notice is actually issued (f) According to the High Court of Bombay if no notice has been issued a mere order for issuing a notice will not give a fresh starting point for limitation (g) It is not however, necessary that the notice should have been actually served (h)

Art 183 of the Limitation Act which applies to decrees of Chartered High Courts provides inter alia that a decree of such Court can be enforced within twelve years from its date unless the decree has been revived The High Court of Calcutta has held that an order for execution operates as a revivor within the meaning of this article (i) but mere issue and service of a notice under this rule does not (j)

23 [S 249] (1) Where the person to whom notice is issued under the last preceding rule does not appear or does not show cause to the satisfaction of the Court why the decree should not be executed, the Court shall order the decree to be executed

(2) Where such person offers any objection to the execution of the decree, the Court shall consider such objection and make such order as it thinks fit

24 [Ss 250 251] (1) When the preliminary measures (if any) required by the foregoing rules have been taken, the Court shall, unless it sees cause to the contrary, issue its process for the execution of the decree

(2) Every such process shall bear date, the day on which it is issued, and shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as the Court may appoint in this behalf, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court and delivered to the proper officer to be executed

(3) In every such process a day shall be specified on or before which it shall be executed

Unless it sees cause to the contrary—See notes to O 21 r 37 under the heading Whether an executing Court has discretion to refuse or suspend attachment of judgment debtor's property

Delegation of authority to execute—The officer to whom a warrant is delivered for execution under this rule may deliver it to his subordinate for execution. It is not necessary that the proper officer should himself execute all warrant sent to him (1). But a warrant addressed to the peon of a Court cannot be executed by a Naik (2)

Arrest without warrant—Where an officer of the Court arrests a judgment debtor without having the warrant in his possession at the time of arrest the arrest is illegal (3)

Shall be sealed—The provisions of this rule being mandatory, the omission of the Court's seal on the warrant renders the attachment illegal (4)

Specification of day on or before which warrant should be executed—The warrant should specify the date on or before which it is to be executed. Persistence to the execution of a warrant which does not specify such date is not illegal (5). Moreover a warrant cannot be executed after the expiration of the date specified in the warrant for its execution (p) If the warrant is extended the date to which it is extended be specified on the warrant If this is not done the warrant is not a good warrant and its execution after the date originally specified in it does not amount to an offence under s. 146 of the Indian Penal Code (g)

STAY OF EXECUTION

25 [S 343] (1) The officer entrusted with the

execution of the process shall endorse thereon the day on and the manner in which it was executed and if the latest day specified in the process for the return thereof has been exceeded the reason for the delay, or, if it was not executed the reason why it was not executed, and shall return the process with such endorsement to the Court

(2) Where the endorsement is to the effect that the officer is unable to execute the process the Court shall examine him touching his alleged inability and may if it thinks fit summon and examine witnesses as to such inability, and record the result

26 [Ss 239 240] (1) The Court to which a decree

When Court may stay execution

has been sent for execution shall upon sufficient cause being shown stay the execution of such decree for a reasonable time to enable the judgment debtor to apply to the Court by which the decree was passed or to any Court having appellate jurisdiction in respect of the decree or the execution thereof for an order to stay execution or for any other order relating to the decree or execution which might have been made by such Court of first instance or appellate Court if execution had been thereupon thereby or if application for execution had been made to the Court to which the decree was sent for execution

(2) Where the property or person of the judgment debtor has been seized under execution the Court which issues the execution may order the restitution of such property or the discharge of such person pending the result of the application for a stay of execution

(3) Before making an order to stay execution or to Stay of execution — See notes under the same local s. 4

Alterations in the rule—The words or for the recovery of a wife which occurred in the corresponding sec 209 of the Code of 1832 after the words share in a specific movable have been omitted for there can be no decree under the law for the recovery of a wife as a wife cannot be treated as a chattel to be delivered over to the husband Where any third person prevents the wife from returning to her husband the latter may obtain an injunction against him which may be enforced in case of disobedience either by the imprisonment of the defendant or by the attachment of his property or by both under r 32

Decree for specific movable property—Where a decree directs recovery of specific movable property and for payment of the price thereof if the property be not delivered the decree holder is not entitled to execute the money part of the decree before applying for delivery of the property (a) As to the cases in which a decree may be passed for the delivery of specific movable property see Specific Relief Act I of 1877 s 11

Rule when not applicable—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that this rule does not apply where the property sought to be attached is not in the possession of the judgment debtor (b)

32 [S 260 R S C, O 42, r 30] (1) Where the party

Decree for specific performance for restitution of conjugal right or for an injunction against whom a decree for the specific performance of a contract, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for an injunction, has been passed, has had an opportunity of obeying the decree and has wilfully failed to obey it, the decree may be enforced in the case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights by the attachment of his property or, in the case of a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction (c) by his detention in the civil prison, or by the attachment of his property or by both

(2) Where the party against whom a decree for specific performance or for an injunction has been passed is a corporation the decree may be enforced by the attachment of the property of the corporation or, with the leave of the Court, by the detention in the civil prison of the directors or other principal officers thereof, or by both attachment and detention

(3) Where any attachment under sub rule (1) or sub rule (2) has remained in force for one year if the judgment debtor has not obeyed the decree and the decree holder has applied to have the attached property sold, such property may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the decree holder such compensation as he thinks fit, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the judgment debtor on his application

(4) Where the judgment debtor has obeyed the decree and paid all costs of executing the same which he is bound to pay, or where, at the end of the one year from the date of the attachment no application to have the property sold has been made, or if made has been refused, the attachment shall cease

(5) Where a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction has not been obeyed, the Court may, in lieu of or in addition to all or any of the processes aforesaid, direct that the act required to be done may be done so far as practicable by the decree holder or some other person appointed by the Court at the cost of the judgment debtor, and upon the act being done the expenses incurred may be ascertained in such manner as the Court may direct and may be recovered as if they were included in the decree

A person of little substance erects a building which renders uninhabitable a family mansion belonging to B. A in spite of his detention in prison and the attachment of his property declines to obey a decree obtained against him by B and directing him to remove the building. The Court is of opinion that no sum realizable by the sale of A's property would adequately compensate B for the depreciation in the value of his mansion. B may apply to the Court to remove the building and may recover the cost of such removal from A in the execution proceeding.

Alterations in the rule—Sub rules (2) and (5) are new. See notes below under the head Sub rule (5).

The words "or for an order requiring the performance of or abstinence from any other particular act" which occurred in s. 260 of the Code of 1857 have been omitted and in lieu thereof the words "or for an injunction" have been substituted. See notes below under the head Sub rule (1) decree for injunction.

Specific performance—As to specific performance of contract see Specific Relief Act I of 1877 ss. 12-30.

Injunction—As to perpetual injunctions see Specific Relief Act I of 1877 ss. 34-37.

Restitution of conjugal rights—The words italicized in sub rule (1) were added by Act 29 of 1913. Having regard to those words a decree for restitution of conjugal rights can no longer be enforced by detention in the civil prison whether it be against a husband or a wife. As to decree against a husband see also r. 33 below.

Sub rule (1) decree for injunction—Sub rule (1) applies to both prohibitory and mandatory injunctions. (1) Where an injunction has been granted on each successive breach of it the decree may be enforced under this rule by an application made within three years of such breach under art. 181 of the Limitation Act (i.e. a separate suit to enforce the injunction is barred by the provisions of s. 47 (f)). If the decree is enforced by the imprisonment of the defendant the period of imprisonment should not at any one time exceed six months. See s. 55.

Where a woman who had been directed by a decree to refrain from preventing her daughter returning to her husband, permitted the daughter who was of age to reside in her house it was held that such conduct did not constitute a breach of the direction under the decree so as to render it punishable under this rule (g)

It was held under the old section that an order directing a defendant to render accounts within a specified time was an order requiring the performance of a particular act within the meaning of that section and that disobedience to the order was punishable under that section (h) The words performance of or abstention from any other particular act which occurred in the old section were held to have a very wide general meaning and they have been omitted from this rule and for it the word injunction has been substituted. Hence disobedience to an order directing a party to render accounts can no longer be punished under this rule as such an order cannot be said to be an injunction within the meaning of this rule (i)

Opportunity of obeying the decree—All that the Court has to see before directing execution to issue under this rule is whether the party bound by the decree has had an opportunity of obeying the decree or injunction and has wilfully failed to obey it. If the party has had the opportunity and has wilfully failed to obey the decree the Court may order execution to issue under this rule without giving him any further opportunity and it is not obligatory upon the Court in such a case to serve a notice upon the party calling upon him to obey the decree or injunction (j)

Where an application is made under this rule but the party bound by the decree has had no opportunity of obeying the decree the application will be dismissed. But the dismissal of the application is no bar to another application made after an opportunity has been afforded to the party of obeying the decree. Thus if a decree is made directing the defendant to deliver certain articles necessary for the performance of the duties of priest in a temple to the plaintiff the plaintiff is not entitled to execute the decree under this rule unless it is proved that he went to the temple after notice to the defendant to receive the articles from him (and thereby afforded an opportunity to the defendant to comply with the decree) and that the defendant failed to deliver the articles. If such an opportunity has not been afforded the plaintiff's application will be dismissed but its dismissal will be no bar to a subsequent application after such opportunity has been afforded (k)

Party against whom a decree for injunction has been passed—See notes to s 50 Decree for injunction.

Sub rule (5)—This sub rule is new. It corresponds to O 42 r 30 of the English Rules. In the absence of any provision in the old section similar to the one contained in this sub rule it was held that where a decree directed the defendant to remove an obstruction such as pulling down a wall or opening a path way and the defendant failed to obey the decree it was not competent to the Court to depute any of its officers to remove the obstruction as that was not one of the modes of execution sanctioned under that section (l). Under the present rule the Court may direct the act to be done so far as practicable by the decree holder or some other person appointed by the Court (m). But the Court has no power under this rule to order the police to see that its decree is carried out. Thus where a decree is passed declaring the plaintiff's right to perform certain ceremonies in a temple and restraining the defendant from obstructing the plaintiffs from performing the ceremonies the Court has no power under this rule to order the police to see that the plaintiffs performed the ceremonies without interference on the part of the defendants (n)

The expression the act required to be done means what has to be done to enforce the injunction (o). Hence if a defendant is directed by a decree to demolish a certain wall and the wall is demolished he cannot in execution proceedings be directed to remove a new wall built after the date of the decree in a different place. The plaintiff's remedy in respect of the new wall is to file a fresh suit against the defendant (p). In a recent Calcutta case (q) Pichardson J. expressed the opinion that sub r (5) applied to prohibitory as well as mandatory injunctions.

33 [Ncu] (1) Notwithstanding anything in rule 32, the Court, either at the time of passing a decree against a husband for the restitution of conjugal rights or at any time afterwards,

Discretion of Court in executing decrees for restitution of conjugal rights may order that the decree shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule

(2) Where the Court has made an order under sub-rule (1), it may order that, in the event of the decree not being obeyed within such period as may be fixed in this behalf, the judgment debtor shall make to the decree holder such periodical payments as may be just, and, if it thinks fit, require that the judgment debtor shall, to its satisfaction, secure to the decree holder such periodical payments

(3) The Court may from time to time vary or modify any order made under sub rule (2) for the periodical payment of money, either by altering the times of payment or by increasing or diminishing the amount, or may temporarily suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again revive the same, either wholly or in part as it may think just

(4) Any money ordered to be paid under this rule may be recovered as though it were payable under a decree for the payment of money

Compare the Matrimonial Causes Act 1884 (47 and 48 Vict. c. 68)

Amendment of the rule—The italicized words in sub rule (1) were added by Act 29 of 1923. The words and the decree holder is the wife which occurred in sub rule (2) after the words under sub rule (1) were omitted by the same Act. The effect of this omission is that the present rule applies to a decree for restitution of conjugal rights passed against a husband. The words shall be executed in the manner provided in this rule in sub r (1) have been substituted for the words shall not be executed by

(3) Where the judgment debtor objects to the draft, his objections shall be stated in writing within such time, and the Court shall make such order approving or altering the draft, as it thinks fit

(4) The decree holder shall deliver to the Court a copy of the draft with such alterations (if any) as the Court may have directed upon the proper stamp paper if a stamp is required by the law for the time being in force, and the Judge or such officer as may be appointed in this behalf shall execute the documents so delivered

5 Resistance to delivery of possession to decree holder—Where the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property is resisted or obstructed by any person in obtaining possession of the property the procedure to be followed is that prescribed by rr 97 103 of this order

Actual and formal possession—The possession referred to in sub rules (1) and (3) is has or actual possession while that referred to in sub r (2) and r 36 below is formal or symbolical possession. Formal or symbolical possession is delivered by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property and proclaiming by beat of drum or other customary mode at some convenient place the substance of the decree.

Rules 35 and 36 refer to cases where a suit is brought for possession of immovable property and a decree is passed in the suit for the delivery of the property to the decree holder. Rules 95 and 96 refer to cases where immovable property belonging to a judgment debtor is sold in execution of a decree passed against him and possession of the property is sought by the auction purchaser. In both cases the possession may be either actual or symbolical. If the immovable property of which possession is directed by the decree to be delivered to the decree holder is in the possession of the judgment debtor actual possession must be delivered to the decree holder under r 35 (1). Where it is in the possession of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same only symbolical possession can be delivered, and that is to be done under r 36. Likewise where immovable property is sold in execution of a decree and possession is sought by the auction purchaser actual possession must be delivered to him under r 95 if the property is in the possession of the judgment debtor. But if the property is in the possession of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same only symbolical possession can be delivered and that is to be done under r 96.

There are thus three cases in which the law allows symbolical possession to be given namely the cases contemplated by sub rule (2) of the present rule by r 36 and by r 96 of this Order. Symbolical possession given in such cases operates as actual possession against the judgment debtor but not against third persons who were not parties to the decree (y). In other words symbolical possession is no possession at all as against third parties. This distinction is of great importance in the law of limitation. The rule to be deduced from the cases on the subject is that where in execution of a decree symbolical possession is delivered of immovable property to the person entitled to possession thereof and such person subsequently institutes a suit for actual possession, the symbolical possession is to be treated as actual possession where the suit is again the judgment-debtor or his representatives and the period of 12 years allowed for such a suit is to be calculated not from the date of sale but from the date of the subsequent dis-possession [ill (2)]. But where a suit for actual possession is instituted against a third party claiming to be in possession of the property adversely to the judgment-debtor no account is taken of the symbolical possession of the plaintiff in determining the period of limitation and the period of 12 years is to be calculated, not from the date on which symbolical possession was delivered to the plaintiff but from the date on which the possession of such third party became adverse as against the judgment-debtor [ill (1)].

property adversely to D for 10 years prior to the date on which A is placed in symbolical possession. C continues to be in possession of the property as before. After three years C sues C for possession. The defence is that C has been in adverse possession for more than twelve years and the suit is therefore barred under art. 144 of the Limitation Act. C contends that his symbolical possession operated to break the continuity of the adverse possession of C and that the period of twelve years allowed by art. 144 for a suit for possession should be calculated from the date on which symbolical possession was delivered to him. The suit is barred for A's possession being merely symbolical did not operate at all as possession as against C who was not a party to the suit and it could not therefore break the continuity of C's possession (2). In other words delivery of symbolical possession to A did not amount to a dispossession of C.

(2) A obtains a decree against B for possession of certain immovable property the property being in the occupancy of B's tenants. Symbolical possession is delivered to A under r. 36. Subsequently B dispossesses A by receiving the rents and profits. A thereupon sues B for actual possession. The period of limitation for such a suit is twelve years from the date of dispossession (a). The same principles apply where a person is placed in symbolical possession under sub rule (2) of this rule in cases where the decree is one for joint possession and also where he is placed in symbolical possession under r. 96 of this Order (b).

Note—It will be observed that in all (2) the suit is against the judgment debtor and in all (1) it is against a third person who was not a party to the suit. Symbolical possession operates as actual possession against the judgment debtor that being the only means by which as between the parties the order of the Court can be effectively carried out. But it does not operate as actual possession against third persons who were not parties to the suit and the reason for this is very plain. A suit might be brought and a decree obtained by a person who has neither title nor possession against another person who has neither title nor possession and if the delivery of symbolical possession in such a suit were to constitute actual possession as against the true owner who had been in actual possession for many years and who was no party to the suit it would operate most unjustly (c).

It has already been stated that where a judgment debtor himself is in possession actual possession must be delivered to the person entitled to possession under sub r. (1) of this rule or under r. 95 as the case may be. If symbolical possession is delivered in a case where actual possession ought to have been delivered the question arises whether it will operate as actual possession against the judgment debtor. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that it does. The delivery of symbolical possession even erroneously is not a nullity and it operates as actual possession against the judgment debtor and his representatives for it is said that after all it is possession obtained through an officer of the Court and by process of law and the judgment debtor must be taken to be a party to the proceeding relating to the taking of possession. From this point of view a suit for actual possession may be brought at any time within 12 years from the date on which symbolical possession is given (d). On the other hand a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that symbolical possession given in circumstances in which actual possession ought to have been given is a nullity and the period of limitation for a suit for actual possession is 12 years from the date of sale. The reason given by the High Court of Bombay is that symbolical possession is not actual possession nor is it equivalent to actual possession except where the Code expressly or by implication provides that it shall have that effect and there is no section of the Code which provides that where symbolical possession is given in a case in which actual possession ought to have been given such possession should be treated as equivalent to actual possession (e) The High Court of Allahabad has taken the same view as the Bombay High Court (f) In an earlier case (g) the Madras High Court took the same view as the High Court of Calcutta but in later cases it has followed the Bombay ruling (h)

It has been held by a Full Bench of the Oudh Court that where a sale is of an undivided share in a property delivery of possession by means of beat of drum is a valid and effective delivery of possession within O 21 r 95 and that it is sufficient to give to the auction purchaser a fresh start for limitation Stuart C J observed that the distinction between actual and symbolical possession had little to do in such case and that the real question was whether the delivery was effective in the circumstance of each particular case Gulab Khan v Atullah (1928) 3 Luck 406 110 IC 70 (28) A O 31 In the Full Bench Bombay case referred to above the sale was also of an undivided share but the question whether that circumstance made any difference was not before the Court All that the Bombay case decided was that when in a case where actual possession ought to have been delivered mere symbolical possession is delivered the delivery of symbolical possession does not give to the purchaser a fresh start for limitation

Arrest and detention in the civil prison

37 [S 243 B] (1) Notwithstanding anything in these rules, where an application is for the execution of a decree for the payment of money by the arrest and detention in the civil prison of a judgment debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application, the Court may instead of issuing a warrant for his arrest, issue a notice calling upon him to appear before the Court on a day to be specified in the notice and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison

(2) Where appearance is not made in obedience to the notice, the Court shall if the decree holder so requires, issue a warrant for the arrest of the judgment debtor

Discretionary power to issue notice under this rule—When a decree is for the payment of money and execution is applied for against the person of the judgment debtor the Court may issue a notice to the judgment debtor calling upon him to show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison in execution of the decree. As to the procedure to be followed when the judgment debtor appears in pursuance of the notice see r 40 below

Whether an executing Court has discretion to refuse or suspend attachment of judgment debtor's property—A Court executing a decree may in its discretion under r 40 below disallow an application for the arrest or imprisonment of a judgment debtor. But there is no rule which empowers the Court in express terms where an application is made for attachment of the judgment debtor's property to give time to the judgment debtor to pay the judgment debt and for that purpose to stay execution. O 21 r 24 (1) provides that when the preliminary measures required by the foregoing rules have been taken the Court shall unless it sees cause to the contrary issue its process for the execution of the decree. In a Calcutta case under s 250 of the Code of 1882 it was held that when an application is made for attachment of the property of a judgment debtor the Court has no power to refuse or stay execution except in the cases expressly provided for by the Code (l) As to the words unless it sees cause to the contrary it was held that they referred only to the express provisions contained in the Code itself such as s 246 (now r 18 above) s 243 (now r 29 above) etc but that they did not give any discretion to the Court to refuse or stay execution In a later case under the present Code it was held that the Court has inherent power under s 101 to defer the issue or operation of its own process and that it may in a proper case grant time to the judgment debtor In that case the Subordinate Judge gave five days time to the judgment debtor and it was held by Mukerjee J that the time was rightly granted in the circumstances of the case Graham J did not express any definite opinion as to the validity of the order but said that there might be circumstances in which the Court would have discretion to grant reasonable time e.g. in the case of illness of the judgment debtor (m) Assuming that the Court has an inherent power to allow time to a judgment debtor it should not it is submitted be exercised in a case where the judgment debtor is unable to pay the judgment debt immediately and says that he would be able to do so if time was allowed to him

Privilege from arrest—See s 135 sub section (2)

(2) Where a judgment debtor is committed to the civil prison in execution of a decree, the Court shall fix for his subsistence such monthly allowance as he may be entitled to according to the scales fixed under section 57 or, where no such scales have been fixed, as it considers sufficient with reference to the class to which he belongs

(3) The monthly allowance fixed by the Court shall be supplied by the party on whose application the judgment debtor has been arrested by monthly payments in advance before the first day of each month of money, and it appears to the Court that the judgment-debtor is unable from poverty or other sufficient cause to pay the amount of the decree or, if that amount is payable by instalments, the amount of any instalment thereof, the Court may, upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit make an order disallowing the application for his arrest and detention, or directing his release, as the case may be

(2) Before making an order under sub rule (1), the Court may take into consideration any allegation of the decree holder touching any of the following matters, namely —

- (a) the decree being for a sum for which the judgment-debtor was bound in any fiduciary capacity to account
- (b) the transfer, concealment or removal by the judgment debtor of any part of his property after the date of the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed, or the commission by him after that date of any other act of bad faith in relation to his property, with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree holder in the execution of the decree,
- (c) any undue preference given by the judgment debtor to any of his other creditors,

(d) refusal or neglect on the part of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount of the decree or some part thereof when he has, or since the date of the decree has had, the means of paying it,

(e) the likelihood of the judgment debtor absconding or leaving the jurisdiction of the Court with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the decree holder in the execution of the decree

(3) While any of the matters mentioned in sub rule (2) are being considered, the Court may, in its discretion, order the judgment debtor to be detained in the civil prison, or leave him in the custody of an officer of the Court, or release him on his furnishing security, to the satisfaction of the Court, for his appearance when required by the Court

(4) A judgment debtor released under this rule may be re-arrested

(5) Where the Court does not make an order under sub rule (1), it shall cause the judgment debtor to be arrested if he has not already been arrested and, subject to the other provisions of this Code, commit him to the civil prison

Sub rule (1) Unable to pay—Where a decree is passed against A, B and C and the Court is satisfied that A is unable to pay and that B and C each possess property which may be realized by the decree holder in execution of the decree the Court may reject an application made by the decree holder for the arrest of A

Object of the rule—The object of this rule is to obtain discovery for purposes of execution to avoid unnecessary trouble in obtaining satisfaction of money decrees. It is a useful rule but orders for discovery may operate harshly against the party directed to give discovery and must not be lightly made (g)

Any and what other property—This refers to property which is liable to attachment and sale under the decree against the judgment debtor. Property of a judgment debtor which he has mortgaged is prima facie liable to be seized in execution of a decree against him and the fact that he has mortgaged it will not prevent its being attached and sold in execution of the decree subject to the mortgage debt (see s 73). If the mortgagee claims that he is in possession as mortgagee he may be examined under this rule (r). See note to r 62 below.

What property may not be attached—See s 60

The attachment may be allowed under this rule (s). Sec O 20 r 12

Movable property in possession of judgment debtor—This rule provides for attachment of movable property in the possession of the judgment debtor. As to movable property not in possession of the judgment debtor see r 46 below.

Attachment by actual seizure—Where a warrant of attachment is executed by affixing it to the outer door of the warehouse in which goods belonging to the judgment debtor are stored, it amounts to actual seizure within the meaning of the present rule (t).

Security bond to produce attached property—Goods attached under this rule by an Amin are made over by him to a third person for safe custody on his passing a bond undertaking to produce them in Court. The surety fails to produce the goods when required by the Court. Is the decree holder entitled to proceed against the surety under s 140 (c)? No according to the Madras High Court there being no order of the Court as contemplated by cl (c) of s 145 (u). Yes according to the Allahabad High Court (t).

Attachment of agricultural produce

- (b) where such produce has been cut or gathered, on the threshing floor or place for treading out grain or the like or fodder stack on or in which it is deposited, and another copy on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the judgment debtor ordinarily resides or, with the leave of the Court, on the outer door or on some other conspicuous part of the house in which he carries on business or personally works for gain or in which he is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain, and the produce shall thereupon be deemed to have passed into the possession of the Court.

Attachment of agricultural produce—This and the following rule provide for the attachment of agricultural produce. Both these rules are new. Growing crops are under this Code included in the category of movable property [see s 2 cl (13)]. But the procedure relating to the actual seizure of movables cannot be applied in its entirety to growing crops for considerable injury would result to both parties if such crops were allowed to be removed on attachment like other movable property. With a view to prevent such injury and to secure to both parties the fullest value from the property attached, it is enacted by the next following rule that where agricultural produce is attached the Court should make such arrangements for the custody thereof as it may deem sufficient and subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court the every application for the attachment of a growing crop shall specify the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered

(2) Subject to such conditions as may be imposed by the Court in this behalf either in the order of attachment or in any subsequent order, the judgment debtor may tend, cut, gather and store the produce and do any other act necessary for maturing or preserving it, and if the judgment debtor fails to do all or any of such acts the decree holder may, with the permission of the Court and subject to the like conditions, do all or any of them either by himself or by any person appointed by him in this behalf, and the costs incurred by the decree holder shall be recoverable from the judgment debtor as if they were included in, or formed part of, the decree

(3) Agricultural produce attached as a growing crop shall not be deemed to have ceased to be under attachment or to require re attachment merely because it has been severed from the soil

(4) Where an order for the attachment of a growing crops has been made at a considerable time before the crop is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered, the Court may suspend the execution of the order for such time as it thinks fit, and may, in its discretion, make a further order prohibiting the removal of the crop pending the execution of the order of attachment

(5) A growing crop which from its nature does not admit of being stored shall not be attached under this rule at any time less than twenty days before the time at which it is likely to be fit to be cut or gathered

Time at which the crop is likely to be cut or gathered—The decree holder should specify in the application for attachment the time at which the crop is likely to be cut or gathered. The object is to enable the Court to make necessary arrangements for the custody of the crop [sub r (1)] If the application is presented within twenty days before the maturity of a crop not lending itself to storage it should be refused [sub r (5)] See notes to r 44 above

Attachment of debt share and other property not in possession of judgment
debtor

46 [S 268] (1) In the case of—

- (a) a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument,
- (b) a share in the capital of a corporation,
- (c) other movable property not in the possession of the judgment debtor, except property deposited in or in the custody of, any Court, the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting,—

- (1) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court,
- (ii) in the case of the share, the person in whose name the share may be standing from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon,
- (iii) in the case of the other movable property, except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment debtor

(2) A copy of such order shall be fixed on some conspicuous part of the Court house, and another copy shall be sent in the case of the debt to the debtor in the case of the share to the proper officer of the corporation, and, in the case of the other movable property (except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same

(3) A debtor prohibited under clause (1) of sub rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same

Attachment of debt.—A debt cannot be attached unless it is actually due from the judgment creditor (judgment debtor's debtor) to the judgment debtor. It may be either presently payable or payable in the future by reason of a present obligation (iv). As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the undermentioned case (x) an existing debt though payable at a future day may be attached. But only such debts can be attached as the judgment debtor could deal with properly and without violation of the rights of third persons (y). For instances of attachable debt see notes to s 60.  119 Camp. v. J. & C. (1895) 11 C. D. 415

The following are some of the more important rules relating to the attachment of debts —

1 It is not necessary for the purpose of attaching a debt that the exact amount of the debt should be stated, provided there is a debt actually due at the time of attachment. B delivers certain goods to his agent C for sale. The goods are sold by C and the sale proceeds are received by him. In execution of a decree obtained by A against B A may attach the sale proceeds in the hands of C though the exact amount due to B may not then have been ascertained ( )

2 The attachment of a debt does not prevent the judgment debtor from suing his debtor or from taking any other step necessary for the recovery thereof but he is not entitled to receive payment thereof from his debtor unless the claim in respect of which the debt is attached is first satisfied. C owes a debt to B. The debt is attached in execution of a decree obtained by A against B. This does not preclude B from suing C to recover the debt or from prosecuting the suit if a suit has already been instituted but he cannot receive payment of the debt from C unless he first satisfies A a decree (a) See sub rule (1) cl (i)

Attachment of mortgage debt—A executes a mortgage of immovable property to B to secure payment of Rs 5000 lent to him by B. It is provided by the mortgage bond that if A fails to pay the mortgage debt on the due date B should have the right to sue A personally for the debt and also to realise the debt by the sale of the mortgaged property. In such a case B's interest in the mortgage bond comprises (1) the right to sue A personally for the mortgage debt and (2) the right to realise the debt by sale of the mortgaged property. If C obtains a decree against B for Rs 5000 and asks in execution of the decree to attach the mortgage debt due to B how is the attachment effected? Is the mortgage debt a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument within the meaning of this rule and attachable in the mode prescribed by this rule or being secured by a mortgage of immovable property is it immovable property within the meaning of rule 4 and attachable in the mode prescribed by that rule? The answer afforded by the decisions on the subject eliminating what are merely obiter dicta (b) is that a mortgage debt is a debt within the meaning of this rule and it is therefore to be attached in the manner prescribed by this rule. Again if the mortgage debt due to B is attached under this rule in execution of C's decree and sold in execution and purchased by F what are the rights of F? The answer is that they are the same as those of B the mortgagee. F may sue A for a personal decree against him. He may also sue him for a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property (c). It does not make any difference that the mortgage bond gives a right to the mortgagee to enter into possession and that he is in possession at the date of the attachment (d). The cases referred to above were all cases either of a simple mortgage or of a hypothecation bond. As regards usufructuary mortgage it was held by the High Court of Bombay in a case where the bond provided that the mortgagee was to enjoy the profits in lieu of interest for ten years and that the mortgage was to be redeemed on the expiration of the term by payment of the mortgage debt that there was no debt which the mortgagee was entitled to recover at the date of the attachment and that the interest of the mortgagee could only be attached in the mode prescribed by r 4 for attachment of immovable property (c) This case was distinguished in a Madras case where the period having already expired the amount of the loan had become payable which it was said could only be attached as a d b<sup>2</sup> (f)

Attachment of debt after delivery of cheque—A gave a cheque to B for work done before the cheque was presented by B for payment X who had obtained a decree against B attached in A's hands the amount due by him to B Held that A having handed over the cheque to B the payment was complete and that there was no debt due by A to B which could be attached (g)

Procedure where garnishee denies debt—Where the garnishee denies the debt it is not the business of the Court to inquire if the debt is really due (h) and the decree holder may have it sold, or he may have a receiver appointed under s 51 with power to him to sue the garnishee to recover the debt from him (i) As to release of debt from attachment see notes to O 21 r 58 Rules 53 to 63 apply to debts also A decree holder is not entitled to recover from the garnishee more than what the judgment debtor himself could recover from the garnishee (j)

Procedure when garnishee admits debt—If the garnishee admits the debt the Court may order payment of the debt or so much of it as is admitted to be due into Court (k) But the Court cannot make an order on the garnishee before the debt has become payable (l) If a cross debt is due to the garnishee from the judgment debtor at the date of the attachment the garnishee is entitled to set it off against the amount due by him (l)

In a case where the debt was fraudulently sold at an undervalue with the connivance of the judgment debtor although the garnishee was willing to pay the amount into Court it was held that the remedy of the decree holders claiming rateable distribution was a suit for compensation (m)

Procedure where garnishee resides outside jurisdiction and debt also is payable outside jurisdiction—It is not competent to a Court under this rule to issue a prohibitory order upon a person resident outside the limits of its jurisdiction in respect of property which also is beyond such limits Thus where A obtains a decree in the Court of Bardwan against B residing in Bardwan and there is a debt due to B from C who resides in Calcutta the debt being also payable in Calcutta the proper course for A to adopt if he seeks to attach the debt is to apply to the Bardwan Court to issue a prohibitory order upon B prohibiting him from recovering the debt and also to apply to that Court to transfer the decree for execution to the Calcutta Court and, after the decree is so transferred to apply to the Calcutta Court to issue a prohibitory order upon C prohibiting C from paying the debt to B (n)

Claims over which Courts in British India have no jurisdiction e.g. a debt due to the judgment debtor from a non resident foreigner in respect of which no suit could be brought by the judgment debtor in a British Indian Court are not debts liable to be attached under this rule (o) But where a judgment is recovered in the High Court of Bombay against a foreign corporation which submitted to jurisdiction and a bank in Bombay owes the Corporation a debt payable in Bombay the High Court of Bombay has jurisdiction to attach the debt and direct the bank to pay the amount of the debt into Court (p)

Shares—A deed of transfer of shares in a company which does not comply with the formalities prescribed by the Indian Companies Act and the Articles of Association of the Company is invalid as against a subsequent purchaser of the shares in execution of a decree against the shareholder (q) See rr 79 and 80 below

Life policy—Where a life policy is payable on proof to the satisfaction of the directors of the death of the assured the policy amount cannot be said to be a debt due by the company before such proof is given (r)

Sub rule (3) payment into Court—A obtains a decree against B In execution of the decree A attaches a debt due ostensibly from C to D but alleged by A to be in reality due from C to B In such a case if the Court orders the amount of the debt to be paid into Court it is incumbent upon the Court to provide by its order that the money when deposited should not be paid to the decree holder [A] until adjudication of the question as to who is entitled to the money B or D (s)

Garnishee order—Company in liquidation—Where a judgment is recovered against a company which is in voluntary liquidation the invariable practice of the Courts is to stay execution of the judgment unless there are very exceptional reasons for exercising its discretion otherwise Thus if A obtains a decree against a limited company and the company thereafter goes into liquidation and a debt is due by D to the company the debt forms part of the general assets of the Company and is divisible among the creditors pari passu and for this reason A is not entitled to a garnishee order against D (t)

Attachment of share in movables—This rule is new It provides for the attachment of a share or interest in movable property belonging to the judgment debtor and others in co ownership Such a share or interest is obviously incapable of actual seizure and provision has therefore been made for the issue to the judgment debtor of a notice prohibiting him from transferring his share or interest in any way

48 [New] (1) Where the property to be attached is the salary or allowances of a public officer or of a servant of a railway company or local authority, the Court, whether the judgment debtor or the disbursing officer is or is not within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction, may order that the amount shall, subject to the provisions of section 60, be withheld from such salary or allowances either in one payment or by monthly instalments as the Court may direct, and, upon notice of the order to such officer as the Government may, by notification in the Gazette of India or in the local official Gazette, as the case may be, appoint in this behalf, the officer or other person whose duty it is to disburse such salary or allowances shall withhold and remit to the Court the amount due under the order, or the monthly instalments, as the case may be.

(2) Where the attachable proportion of such salary or allowances is already being withheld and remitted to a Court in pursuance of a previous and unsatisfied order of attachment, the officer appointed by the Government in this behalf shall forthwith return the subsequent order to the Court issuing it with a full statement of all the particulars of the existing attachment.

(3) Every order made under this rule, unless it is returned in accordance with the provisions of sub rule (2), shall, without further notice or other process, bind the Government or the Railway Company or local authority as the case may be, while the judgment debtor is within the local limits to which this Code for the time being extends and while he is beyond those limits if he is in receipt of any salary or allowances payable out of His Majesty's Indian revenues or the funds of railway company carrying on business in any part of British India or local authority in British India, and the Government or the railway company or local authority, as the case may be, shall be liable for any sum paid in contravention of this rule.

Attachment of salary of public officer et c.—This rule is new. It provides a special procedure for the attachment of the salary of public officer, railway servants and servants of local authorities. The rule follows upon the lines of section 141 sub-section (3) of the Army Act (44 and 45 Vict. c. 59) which it may be observed applied only to officers of the army. Under the Code of 1842 the salary of a public officer or railway servant could not be attached unless the disbursing officer was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree (v). This led to considerable inconvenience in the execution of decrees and put the decree holder in many cases to an enormous expense. The present rule substitutes a less expensive and at the same time more effective machinery for the execution of decrees against this class of judgment debtors. Under it the salary of a public officer or a railway servant of a local authority may be attached whether the judgment debtor is the disbursing officer or not and it is then the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree to which a decree is transferred for execution has the same power (r) as to how much of the salary of such persons may be attached see s. 60 (1) (h) and (i).

Sub rule (3) Liability of Government—Sub r (3) provides that if an attachment order is not returned in accordance with the provisions of sub r (2) the Government shall be liable for such sum as should have been stopped out of the judgment debtor pay. But no order can be made against the Government unless the Government is on the record (u)

49 [New 53 & 54 Vict, c 39 s 23 RSC, O 46, rr 1A and 1B] (1) Save as otherwise provided by this rule, property belonging to a partnership shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree other than a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such

(2) The Court may, on the application of the holder of a decree against a partner, make an order charging the interest of such partner in the partnership property and profits with payment of the amount due under the decree, and may, by the same or a subsequent order, appoint a receiver of the share of such partner in the profits (whether already declared or accruing) and of any other money which may be coming to him in respect of the partnership, and direct accounts and inquiries and make an order for the sale of such interest or other order as might have been directed or made if a charge had been made in favour of the decree holder by such partner, or as the circumstances of the case may require

(3) The other partner or partners shall be at liberty at any time to redeem the interest charged or, in the case of a sale being directed, to purchase the same

(4) Every application for an order under sub rule (2) shall be served on the judgment debtor and on his partners or such of them as are within British India

(5) Every application made by any partner of the judgment debtor under sub rule (3) shall be served on the decree holder and on the judgment debtor, and on such of the other partners as do not join in the application and as are within British India

(6) Service under sub rule (4) or sub rule (5) shall be deemed to be service on all the partners, and all orders made on such applications shall be similarly served

Attachment of partnership property—This rule is new. The first three sub rules are a reproduction of the English Partnership Act 1890 [53 and 54 Vict 9]

s 23 The last three rules correspond to O 46 rr 1A and 1B of the English Rules As to suits by and against firms see O 30 below

This rule provides that no execution can issue against any partnership property except on a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such (x) but a judgment-creditor of a partner in a firm may apply for an order charging that partner's interest and for a receiver. The share of a partner in a partnership business is liable to attachment under s 60 (y). See notes to r 50 under the head Where decree has been passed against a firm

Against the partners in the firm as such—The words in sub r (1) do not occur in s 23 of the English Partnership Act. They have been added to show that the operation of this rule is not ousted by the mere circumstance that the decree is passed not against the firm but against the partners constituting it where the partners have been sued as such.

Direct accounts—It has been held in England under the Partnership Act s 23 sub s 2 of which sub r (2) is a reproduction that the discretion given to direct accounts should only be exercised under special circumstances as for instance with a view to a dissolution. The decision is based upon the words if a charge had been made in favour of the decree holder by such partner. These words it has been said should be read with s 31 sub s 1 of the English Partnership Act which provides that an assignment by a partner of his share in the partnership either absolute or by way of charge does not as against the other partners entitle the assignee during the continuance of the partnership to require any accounts of the partnership transaction but entitle the assignee only to receive the share of the profits of the assigning partner and the assignee must accept the account of profits agreed to by the partners. Relying upon these provisions Pigby L J said I think it plain that the intention of the legislature was that under ordinary circumstances in dealing with a case under sub 2 of s 23 [sub r (2) of this rule] the analogy of an assignment by a partner of his share should be adhered to ( )

Charging order and insolvency—A charging order under this rule upon a judgment debtor's interest in a partnership being a proceeding in invitum is not a transaction protected by s 5 of the Presidency towns Insolvency Act (a).

Provided that nothing in this sub rule shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of section 247 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872

(2) Where the decree holder claims to be entitled to cause the decree to be executed against any person other than such a person as is referred to in sub rule (1), clauses (b) and (c) as being a partner in the firm, he may apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave, and where the liability is not disputed, such Court may grant such leave, or where such liability is disputed, may order that the liability of such person be tried and determined in any manner in which any issue in a suit may be tried and determined

(3) Where the liability of any person has been tried and determined under sub rule (2), the order made thereon shall have the same force and be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise as if it were a decree

(4) Save as against any property of the partnership, a decree against a firm shall not release, render liable or otherwise affect any partner therein unless he has been served with a summons to appear and answer

Scope of the rule—This rule is new. It is a reproduction of O 48A r 8 of the English Rules. Execution under this rule can only be granted where a decree has been passed against a firm. A decree passed against a firm must perforce be in the firm's name. Under this rule execution may be granted against the partnership property. It may also be granted against the partners in which case the decree holder may proceed against the separate property of the partners. It must not be supposed however that where a decree has been passed against a firm execution will be granted as a matter of course against all the partners. In certain cases special leave is necessary to issue execution against a partner. It is only when execution is applied for against a person referred to in sub r (1) cl (b) and (c) that it will be granted as of course. But where execution is sought against any other person alleged to be a partner the decree holder must apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave to execute the decree against him. Thus if in a suit against a firm a person has been individually served as a partner with the writ of summons but fails to appear at the hearing and a decree is passed against the firm the decree holder is entitled to execution against him as a matter of course see cl (c) of sub r (1). But a decree holder is not entitled to execution as of course against a person who is sought to be made liable as a partner but who was not served with the summons and who did not appear at the hearing. In such a case the decree holder must apply for leave to execute the decree against such person. If such person admits the liability the Court may grant leave without further inquiry (b). But if he disputes the liability the Court may direct an issue to determine whether he was a partner or held him self out to be a partner in the defendant firm (c). These rules follow from the peculiar nature of a suit against a firm and from the special rules as to service of summons in such a suit. To understand the present rule it is necessary to peruse rules 36 and 37 of Order 30. The important point to note is that where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm it is not necessary that the summons should be served upon each one of them or indeed upon any one of them—it may be served upon any one or more of the partners or at the principal place of the firm's business upon any person having the control or management of the business though he may not be a partner

Where a decree has been passed against a firm—Execution under this rule can only be granted where a decree has been passed against a firm in the firm's name. A decree cannot be passed against a firm unless the suit is against partners in the name of their firm. And conversely where a suit is against partners in the name of their firm the decree must be against the firm in the firm's name. See O 30 r 6 and notes

Against any property of the partnership—Property belonging to a partnership shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree other than a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such. See r 49 (1) above

Against any person who has appeared—See O 30 rr 3 5 6 and 7 and notes

Against any person who has been individually served—See O 30 r 5 and notes

Sub rule (2) Leave to issue execution—Order 30 deals with suits by or against firms. Rule 1 provides that two or more persons being liable as co partners may be sued in the firm's name. It does not matter that the firm is dissolved at the date of the suit so long as the claim in respect of which the suit is brought arose during the continuance of the partnership (d). But where a firm is dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit the plaintiff is bound to serve the summons upon every partner within British India whom it is sought to make liable as provided by O 30 r 3. No order can be made under sub rule (2) against a former partner who has to the knowledge of the plaintiff left the firm before the institution of the suit. The reason is that O 30 r 3 overrides sub r (2) of the present rule. Sub r (2) applies only where there has been no dissolution or none to the knowledge of the plaintiff. Where there has been a dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff an outgoing partner cannot be made liable unless he has been served with the summons in accordance with the proviso to rule 3 of Order 30 (e).

O 21 r 50 is not controlled by O 30 r 2 (3). A suit is brought by a firm against A. On A's application the names of the partners of the firm are disclosed by the attorneys for the firm under O 30 r 2. A then files a counter claim against the firm. The firm's suit is dismissed and a decree is passed against the firm on the counter claim. A takes out execution against X whose name was given by the firm's attorneys as one of the partners of the firm. X denies that he was a partner and says that he did not instruct the firm's attorneys to give his name as a partner. There is nothing in the provisions of O 30 r 2 (3) to preclude X from raising this contention and the question whether he is a partner or not should be decided in the manner provided by O 21 r 50 (2) (f).

Execution against legal representatives—If a partner has died the suit against firm cannot include the legal representatives of the deceased partner though they may be added as defendants and served with summons under O 30 r 3 if it is sought to make the separate estate of the deceased partner liable. Sub rule (2) which is subject to O 30 r 3 does not empower the Court to give leave to execute the decree against the legal representatives (g). If a decree against a firm makes a partner personally liable under

Issue to determine liability —See notes above Scope of the rule

Court which passed the decree —See notes below Award

Where decree transferred for execution —An ex parte order under sub rule (2) granting leave to execute the decree and transferring the decree for execution to another Court does not preclude the transferee Court from determining the question whether the decree transferred was a nullity (1)

Sub rule (3) —An ex parte order made under sub rule (2) above is not within sub rule (3) Sub rule contemplates an order where the liability has been tried and determined (j)

Sub rule (4) —This sub rule relates to persons other than those referred to in sub r (1) cls (b) and (c) The summons to appear and answer in sub r (4) does not mean the writ of summons It means a summons or a notice to appear and answer the application specified in sub r (2) The object of sub r (4) is to give an opportunity to a person against whom the decree holder seeks to execute the decree other than such a person as is referred to in sub r (1) cls (b) and (c) of disputing his liability as a partner if he desires to do so (k)

Minor partner —The proviso to sub r (1) declares that nothing in that sub rule should be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of section 247 of the Contract Act The combined effect of that section and the present rule is that where a decree has been passed against a firm containing a minor who is admitted to the benefits of a partnership execution may be granted against the property of the firm including the share of such minor in the property of the firm but it cannot be granted against the separate property of the minor Having regard to the definition of a firm in s 39 of the Contract Act and to a minor's inability to contract the share of such minor in the property of the firm mentioned in s 247 is merely his right to participate in the property of the firm after its obligations have been discharged (l)

Award —It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (1) and Allahabad (n) that an award against a firm filed under s 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act 1899 stands on the same footing as a decree and that the provisions of this rule apply to such an award In the case of an award the Court which passed the decree referred to in sub r (2) is the Court in which the award is filed (o) The High Court of Allahabad has held relying on s 4 of the Code that where an award is sent for execution by one Court to another the latter Court has the power to try the issue as to partnership under sub r (2) (p)

Insolvency of firm —Where a decree has been passed against a firm execution may be taken out against any partner who was served with the summons The insolvency of the firm is no bar to execution against individual partners (q)

- (b) if the decree sought to be attached was passed by another Court, then by the issue to such other Court of a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed requesting such other Court to stay the execution of its decree unless and until—
  - (i) the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed cancels the notice, or
  - (ii) the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment-debtor applies to the Court receiving such notice to execute its own decree

(2) Where a Court makes an order under clause (a) of sub rule (1) or receives an application under sub-head (ii) of clause (b) of the said sub rule it shall on the application of the creditor who has attached the decree of his judgment-debtor proceed to execute the attached decree and apply the net proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed

(3) The holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree of the nature specified in sub-rule (1) shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and to be entitled to execute such attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof

(4) Where the property to be attached in the execution of a decree is a decree other than a decree of the nature referred to in sub rule (1) the attachment shall be made by a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, to the holder of the decree sought to be attached prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way and, where such decree has been passed by any other Court also by sending to such other Court a notice to abstain from executing the decree sought to be attached until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent sub rule (1) (a) or (1) (b) it may be executed against his legal representatives after notice under r 22 (h)

Issue to determine liability — See notes above Scope of the rule

Court which passed the decree — See notes below Award

Where decree transferred for execution — An ex parte order under sub rule (2) granting leave to execute the decree and transferring the decree for execution to another Court does not preclude the transferee Court from determining the question whether the decree transferred was a nullity (i)

Sub rule (3) — An ex parte order made under sub rule (2) above is not within sub-rule (3) Sub rule contemplates an order where the liability has been tried and determined (j)

Sub rule (4) — This sub rule relates to persons other than those referred to in sub r (1) (a) (b) and (c) The summons to appear and answer in sub r (4) does not mean the writ of summons It means a summons or a notice to appear and answer the application specified in sub r (2) The object of sub r (4) is to give an opportunity to a person against whom the decree holder seeks to execute the decree other than such a person as is referred to in sub r (1) (a) (b) and (c) of disputing his liability as a partner if he desires to do so (k)

Minor partner — The proviso to sub r (1) declares that nothing in that sub rule should be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of section 247 of the Contract Act The combined effect of that section and the present rule is that where a decree has been passed against a firm containing a minor who is admitted to the benefits of a partnership execution may be granted against the property of the firm including the share of such minor in the property of the firm but it cannot be granted against the separate property of the minor Having regard to the definition of a firm in s 39 of the Contract Act and to a minor's inability to contract the share of such minor in the property of the firm mentioned in s 247 is merely his right to participate in the property of the firm after its obligations have been discharged (l)

Award — It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (m) and Allahabad (n) that an award against a firm filed under s 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act 1899 stands on the same footing as a decree and that the provisions of this rule apply to such an award In the case of an award the Court which passed the decree referred to in sub r (2) is the Court in which the award is filed (o) The High Court of Allahabad has held relying on s 47 of the Code that where an award is sent for execution by one Court to another the latter Court has the power to try the issue as to partnership under sub r (3) (p)

Insolvency of firm — Where a decree has been passed against a firm execution may be taken out against any partner who was served with the summons The insolvency of the firm is no bar to execution against individual partners (q)

51 [S 270] Where the property is a negotiable instrument not deposited in a Court, nor in the custody of a public officer, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the instrument shall be brought into Court and held subject to further orders of the Court

Attachment of negotiable instruments

The proper method of attaching a promissory note in the hands of an individual is by its actual seizure and not by the issue of a prohibitory order for if it is not seized the promisee may negotiate it and mere notice will not avail against a holder in due course (r). But notice of the order of attachment to the debtor or promisor is sufficient protection against his paying the amount due to the promisee or anyone else (s).

52 [S 272] Where the property to be attached is in the custody of any Court or public officer, the attachment shall be made by a notice to such Court or Officer, requesting that such property, and any interest or dividend becoming payable thereon, may be held subject to the further orders of the Court from which the notice is issued

Attachment of property in custody of Court or public officer

Provided that where such property is in the custody of a Court, any question of title or priority arising between the decree holder and any other person, not being the judgment-debtor, claiming to be interested in such property by virtue of any assignment attachment or otherwise, shall be determined by such Court

Attachment of dividends in the hands of Official Assignee—The Official Assignee is a public officer within the meaning of this rule and moneys in his hands payable by way of dividend to a creditor of an insolvent may be attached in execution of a decree against the creditor in the manner provided by this rule (t).

Attachment of property in the hands of a receiver—A receiver is an officer of the Court. No attachment therefore of money in the hands of a receiver can be made without leave of the Court (u).

It was held by the High Court of Bombay in some of the earlier cases that in the case of a decree against a firm the assets of which are in the hands of a receiver appointed in a previous partnership suit the proper course for the decree holder to follow is to ask the Court for a charging order, undertaking by the order to deal with the charge according to the order of the Court (v). On the other hand it has been held in a recent case that the proper course is to issue a notice to the receiver under this rule and not a charging order (w).

Anticipatory attachment—This rule does not permit an anticipatory attachment of money expected to reach the hands of a public officer but applies only to money actually in his hands. An attachment made before the money has reached the hands of the officer is invalid (x)

O 21,

Priority—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether if a fund in Court is attached by several decree holders they are entitled to have rateably or whether they are to be paid in the order of their attachments. As to partnership assets in the hands of a receiver the High Court of Bombay held in one case that no one judgment creditor of the firm is entitled to priority over others by attaching the partnership asset and that they should be distributed pro rata among all the judgment creditors (y). On the other hand it was held in a recent case that the judgment creditor who first took out execution against the assets was entitled to have his decree satisfied to the full in priority over other non attaching creditors (z). It is submitted with great respect that the latter decision is incorrect. Where a receiver is appointed in an administration suit and a creditor of the deceased obtains a decree against the legal representative of the deceased after such appointment he is not entitled to execute the decree against the estate of the deceased (a).

The following propositions have been laid down by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in Isaianadhan v Arunachalam (b) overruling Katum v Haji Mahomed (c) an earlier decision of the same High Court.

(1) Where the property attached is in the custody of a Court it is the duty of such Court to hold it at the disposal of the attaching Court and it is the duty of the attaching Court if the property attached is money to call upon the custody Court to pay it into the attaching Court and in other cases to provide for the realisation of the property and to divide the money or proceeds rateably between the attaching decree holder and the other decree holders who are entitled to distribution under s 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure (1) those who have applied to it for execution before the receipt of such assets.

(2) Where the property in the custody Court is the subject of several attachments in execution of several decrees the custody Court must award priority to the first in point of time. If the other decree holders want to share in the rateable distribution they must apply in time to the first attaching Court. The power conferred on the custody Court by the proviso to O 21 r 13 to determine claims to priority etc does not entitle the custody Court itself to distribute the assets rateably among the attaching decree holders.

(3) When the attaching Court and the custody Court are the same there is a receipt of assets within the meaning of s 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure only when so much of the money standing to the credit of the judgment debtor as is necessary to satisfy the decree holders who have applied to it for execution is ordered to be transferred to the credit of the first attaching creditor's suit.

The Calcutta High Court (d) has followed Katum v Haji Mahomed but this was before the Full Bench case.

53      53 [S 273] (1) Where the property to be attached is a decree, either for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge, the attachment shall be made,—

Attachment of decrees

(a) if the decrees were passed by the same Court, then by order of such Court, and,

(b) if the decree sought to be attached was passed by another Court, then by the issue to such other Court of a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, requesting such other Court to stay the execution of its decree unless and until—

(1) the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed cancels the notice, or

(ii) the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment debtor applies to the Court receiving such notice to execute its own decree

(2) Where a Court makes an order under clause (a) of sub rule (1), or receives an application under sub head (ii) of clause (b) of the said sub rule, it shall, on the application of the creditor who has attached the decree of his judgment debtor, proceed to execute the attached decree and apply the net proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed

(3) The holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree of the nature specified in sub rule (1) shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and to be entitled to execute such attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof

(4) Where the property to be attached in the execution of a decree is a decree other than a decree of the nature referred to in sub rule (1), the attachment shall be made by a notice by the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed, to the holder of the decree sought to be attached, prohibiting him from transferring or charging the same in any way, and, where such decree has been passed by any other Court, also by sending to such other Court a notice to abstain from executing the decree sought to be attached until such notice is cancelled by the Court from which it was sent

(5) The holder of a decree attached under this rule shall give the Court executing the decree such information and aid as may reasonably be required

(6) On the application of the holder of a decree sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree, the Court making an order of attachment under this rule shall give notice of such order to the judgment debtor bound by the decree attached, and no payment or adjustment of the attached decree made by the judgment debtor in contravention of such order after receipt of notice thereof, either through the Court or otherwise, shall be recognized by any Court so long as the attachment remains in force

- 1 The words or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge in sub r (1) are new See notes below Attachment and realization of decrees
- 2 The words or his judgment debtor in sub r (1) cl (b) sub head (ii) are new These words give effect to the opinion expressed by M Clean C J in the unmentioned case (e)
- 3 Sub rules (3) and (6) are also new See notes below under the sub rules

Attachment and realization of decrees—For the purpose of this rule decrees have been divided into two classes namely —

- (1) decrees for the payment of money or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge and
- (2) other decrees

First as to attachment of decrees—Decrees of the first class are attached in the manner prescribed by sub r (1) Decrees of the second class are attached in the manner prescribed by sub r (4)

Next as to realization of attached decrees—Decrees of the first class are realized in the manner prescribed by sub r (2) There is no provision in this rule for the realization of decree of the 2nd class e.g. a decree for partition (f) or for foreclosure of a mortgage (g) These decrees are realized by a sale of the decree itself But decrees of the first class that i. money decrees (h) and mortgage decrees are not realized by sale (i) They can only be realized in the manner prescribed by sub r (2) The reason of this distinction is as follows —

Decrees are not expressly mentioned in s 60 as property liable to attachment and sale Hence they are attachable and saleable as comprised in the expression all other saleable property which occurs in that section Being liable to attachment as saleable property they can be sold in execution of another decree But money decree and mortgage decrees must not be sold because the present rule prescribes special procedure for the realization of such decrees [sub r (2)] But for this provision money decrees and mortgage decrees would have to be realized by sale like other decrees. The special procedure prescribed by sub r (2) is an exception to the general rule that property when attached can only be realized by sale.

Under the old section decrees were divided into two classes namely —

- (1) decrees for the payment of money and
- (2) other decrees

There was no specific provision for decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage. Hence the question arose whether such decrees belonged to the first class or the second class. The decisions on the subject were conflicting. (j) To remove this doubt the words "or for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge" have been inserted in sub r (1). These words made it clear that mortgage decrees should be attached and realized in the same manner as money decrees [see sub rules (1) and (2)].

Decree for dissolution of partnership—A decree for the dissolution of a firm and for the taking of accounts where a receiver has been appointed by the decree for the sale of the assets of the firm and for the payment of the partnership debts is a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this rule though part of the partnership assets consists of immovable properties (k).

Decrees other than money decrees and mortgage decrees—D1 holds a decree against J for partition of certain property passed in Court Y. D2 obtains a decree against D1 for Rs 6 000 in Court X. If D1 fails to satisfy the decree obtained against him by D2, D2 may apply to Court X to execute his decree by attachment and sale of the decree held by D1 against J. The decree held by D1 being neither a money decree nor a mortgage decree, the only mode of realizing it in execution of D2's decree is by attachment and sale.

Money decrees and mortgage decrees—Where the decree attached is a money decree or a mortgage decree, it can only be realized by execution; it cannot be sold in execution. For this purpose two applications must be made, one for attachment of the decree and the other for its execution. The application for attachment must be made by the holder of the decree sought to be executed to the Court which passed it. But the application for execution of the attached decree must be made to the Court which passed the decree attached and it may be made either by the holder of the decree sought to be executed or by the holder of the decree attached as in the following illustrations:

(a) Where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by the same Court—D1 holds a decree against J for Rs 5 000 passed by Court Y. This is a money decree. D2 obtains a decree against D1 also in Court Y for Rs 6 000. If D2 seeks to attach D1's decree in execution of his decree, he should apply to Court Y for attachment and either he or D1 may then apply to that Court for execution of the decree held by D1 against J. D2 can apply for execution for he is deemed to be the representative of D1 [see sub r (3)].

(b) Where the decree sought to be executed and the decree sought to be attached are passed by different Courts—D1 sues J on a mortgage and obtains a decree for sale of the mortgaged property under O 34 r 5 in Court X. This is a mortgage decree. D2 obtains a decree against D1 for Rs 6 000 in Court Y and in execution of his decree applies to Court X for attachment of the mortgage decree held by D1 against J. The attachment

(j) See Delhi & London Bank Ltd v. Partab Singh (1906) 3 All 71 (mortgage decree held not to be a money-decree). Idhar nadaram v. Somasundaram (1905) 8

(k) Sadli nappa v. Shankarappa (1903) 7 Bom 58 is to be made by the issue to Court Y of a notice by Court X requesting Court X to stay execution of D1's decree against J unless and until—

(i) the notice is cancelled by Court Y or

(ii) an application is made to Court X by D2 or D1 to execute the decree held by D1 against J

If an application is made by D2 or D1 to Court X to execute the decree held by D1 against J Court X will proceed to execute the decree and the nett proceeds that may be realized in execution will be applied in satisfaction of D2's decree

If in the case put above Court X does not stay execution of D1's decree on receiving the notice from Court Y and proceeds with the execution in spite of the notice the proceedings will be deemed to be ultra vires and a sale held in execution of that decree will be set aside as void (l)

Sub rule (1) Stay—The stay under sub r (1) (b) is only a limited stay and does not prevent either the holder of the decree sought to be executed or his judgment debtor from seeking to execute the original decree (m)

Sub rule (3) Representative—This sub rule is new It gives effect to the undermentioned decisions (n) under the Code of 1882 It declares in effect that one who attaches a decree is a representative of the decree holder within the meaning of s 47 Thus in the cases put above D2 is the representative of D1

A holds a money decree against B B holds a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage against C A attaches in execution of his own decree the decree held by B against C C brings into Court from time to time sums of money for satisfaction of the decree held against him by B Since A is the representative of B the payments made by C become forthwith available to A and operate from their respective dates as partial satisfaction also of the decree held by A against B Hence interest on the decree held by A runs only up to the dates of the deposit and not up to the date when A with draws the moneys from Court (o)

Sub rule (6) Adjustment of attached decree—This sub rule is new The latter part of the rule gives effect to a Bombay decision that where a decree is attached no adjustment of the decree subsequent to the attachment can be recognized by the Court (p) See O 2 r 2 A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has held that though the attachment is effected by notice to the Court under sub rule (1) yet a payment or adjustment made by the judgment debtor in ignorance of the attachment and before he has received notice of the order of attachment under sub rule (6) is valid This sub rule merely provides in cases of bona fide transactions by judgment debtors an exception to the general rule laid down in s 64 above (q)

Decree—A decree whereby B was compelled to deliver up possession of certain lands to C is reversed in appeal and B is declared to be entitled to recover back possession from C with mesne profits A obtains a decree against B and applies in execution of his decree to attach B's right to recover mesne profits from C The right is not attachable for it is not a decree The language [of this rule] seems to apply only to cases where the right attached is a right expressly settled by the decree and not a right arising from the decree by way of restitution (r)

54 [S 274] (1) Where the property is immovable, the attachment shall be made by an order prohibiting the judgment debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way, and all persons from taking any benefit from such transfer or charge

(2) The order shall be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to such property by beat of drum or other customary mode, and a copy of the order shall be fixed on a conspicuous part of the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the Court house, and also, where the property is land paying revenue to the Government, in the office of the Collector of the district in which the land is situate

Immovable property—The equity of redemption of a mortgagor is immovable property within the meaning of this rule (s). The life interest taken by a Parsi widow under her husband's will in the income of his immovable property is not movable but immovable property and is attachable under this rule (t).

Proof of service of prohibitory order—Where it is found as a fact that a prohibitory order was duly served on all the judgment debtors, the destruction of part of the record which afforded proof of the service of notice does not render the execution sale invalid (u).

Mortgage debt—The sale of a mortgage debt in execution of a decree carries with it the security and an attachment of the property under this rule is not necessary see notes to r 46. Attachment of mortgage debt

Omission to beat drum—Such an omission is a material irregularity within the meaning of r 90 of this Order (v).

Land paying revenue to Government—Shrotrivram villages in the Madras Presidency are land paying revenue to Government within the meaning of this rule (w).

Alterations in the rule —

- 1 The words "or certified to the Court" in cl (b) are new. The effect of the words is to place satisfaction certified under r 2 of this Order on the same footing as satisfaction made through the Court.
- 2 The latter part of the rule commencing with the words "the attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn" etc is new. Under the old section an express order was necessary for the withdrawal of the attachment. No such order is necessary under the present rule. The attachment is to be deemed to be withdrawn on the happening of any of the events specified in cls (a) (b) and (c).

Relation of this rule to s 73—See notes to s 73. Assets not available for rateable distribution.

The attachment shall be deemed to be withdrawn—A's property is attached in execution of a decree obtained against him by B. C, another judgment creditor of A, applies for execution of his decree, but no attachment is issued upon his application. On the date fixed for the sale, A pays into Court the amount payable under B's decree. The next day C applies for sale of the property. C is not entitled to have the property sold because the effect of the payment into Court was the withdrawal of the attachment under this rule, and there being no attachment under C's decree no sale can be ordered in execution of his decree (x).

56 [S 27] Where the property attached is current coin or currency notes, the Court may, at any time during the continuance of the attachment, direct that such coin or notes, or a part thereof sufficient to satisfy the decree, be paid over to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same.

57 [View] Where any property has been attached in execution of a decree, but by reason of the decree holder's default the Court is unable to proceed further with the application for execution it shall either dismiss the application or for any sufficient reason adjourn the proceedings to a future date. Upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease.

Determination of attachment

Object of the rule—The object of the rule is to put a stop to the practice of making order striking off proceedings for removing proceedings from the file.

(x) See also A.I. (1916) 361 m 1 v 1 C 1 in the notes to s 3 and r 1. Assets held by a Court.

57 a form of order for which there was no justification under any of the earlier Codes (y) and which made it doubtful whether the effect of the order was whether the attachment ceased or whether it still continued. This subject has already been discussed in the notes to s 64 under the head Effect of striking off execution proceedings or of removing them from the file.

By reason of the decree holder's default—The provisions of this rule that the attachment should cease upon the dismissal of the application for execution do not apply unless the dismissal was on the ground of default on the part of the decree holder (z). The word default is not confined to default in appearance or in payment of process fees or in production of documents but includes failure to do what a decree holder is bound to do that is to proceed with his application for execution. Failure therefore to give notice to the judgment debtor prior to the drawing up of the proclamation as required by r 66 of this Order is default within the meaning of this rule (a). Where a sale in execution of a decree is set aside for any reason other than this default on the part of the decree holder the antecedent attachment is revived so as to support a second application for execution of the decree by sale of the same property and a fresh attachment is necessary (b).

Upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease—These words are imperative. A Court therefore has no power while dismissing an application for default on the part of the decree holder to direct by its order that the attachment shall continue. Thus where an executing Court made an order that the execution case is accordingly dismissed the properties will remain under attachment it was held that the order being one dismissing the application for execution the attachment ceased by virtue of the provisions of this rule notwithstanding the direction that the attachment should continue (c). In an Allahabad case the order ran in these terms: The execution case should for the time being be dismissed but the attachment shall remain in force. The Court held that it was in effect an order adjourning the proceedings and was therefore valid (d). In a later Allahabad case the executing Court struck off the file an application of its own motion and without any default on the part of the decree holder. It was held that there was no dismissal of the application within the meaning of the rule and that the attachment had not ceased (e). These questions derive importance from the fact that an alienation of property after the attachment has ceased is not within the prohibition contained in s 64.

Attachment before judgment—A Full Bench of the High Court of Madras has held that the words property attached in execution of a decree apply to property attached before judgment. So when an execution application for the sale of property attached before judgment was dismissed for default the attachment though it was made before judgment ceases (f). A sues B and obtains an order for attachment before judgment. A then obtains a decree in the suit against B. Thereafter A applies for execution of the decree but the application is dismissed for default of prosecution. The dismissal of the application puts an end to the attachment before judgment. This is directly opposed to the decisions of the High Courts of Allahabad (g) and Calcutta (h) where it was held that the words "attached in execution of a decree" do not include an attachment before judgment. The High Court of Bombay has followed the Madras decision. It is submitted that the view taken by the High Courts of Calcutta and Allahabad is the correct one (i).

Investigation of Claims and Objections

58 [S 278] (1) Where any claim is preferred to, or any objection is made to, the attachment of, any property attached in execution of a decree on the ground that such property is not liable to such attachment, the Court

Investigation of claims to and objections to attachment of attached property shall proceed to investigate the claim or objection with the like power as regards the examination of the claimant or objector and in all other respects, as if he was a party to the suit.

Provided that no such investigation shall be made where the Court considers that the claim or objection was designedly or unnecessarily delayed.

(2) Where the property to which the claim or objection applies has been advertised for sale, the Court ordering the sale may postpone it pending the investigation of the claim or objection.

Postponement of sale

Rules 58 to 63—These rules deal with investigation of claims preferred to property attached in execution of a decree and of objections to the attachment of such property.

Scope of the rule—Objections to attachment raised by a party to the suit in which the decree under execution was passed or his representative fall within the scope of s 47. Objections to attachment raised by a third party come under the present rule. This distinction is important in two ways—

1. Where an objection to attachment is made by a party to the suit or his representative the objector should proceed by an application under s 47, a separate suit for the purpose is barred. But where an objection to attachment is made by a third party the objector may either proceed by an application under this rule or he may bring a regular suit to establish his objection. Failure to proceed by an application under this rule is no bar to a separate suit. The object of this rule is to give a claimant a speedy and summary remedy, but the rule does not deprive him of his remedy by suit. The summary remedy given by this rule is alternative to the remedy by way of suit (j). See notes to s 47. Objections to attachment or sale by third parties and notes to r 63 below. 2 An order made under s 47 allowing or disallowing an objection to attachment is a decree (s 2) and is therefore appealable. But orders under rr 60 61 or 62 made upon an application under this rule are not appealable under the Code (k) and the remedy of the party against whom the order is made is by a regular suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute (r 63). Such suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order [Limitation Act art 11] (l) but subject to such suit the order is conclusive (m) see r 63.

The following illustration shows the operation of rr 58 62. In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property alleged to belong to B is attached. If the property attached is claimed by C C may bring a regular suit for a declaration that the property attached belongs to him and for removal of the attachment. Or if he desires to avail himself of the speedy remedy provided by this rule he may present an application to the Court executing the decree claiming that the property belongs to him and praying for the removal of the attachment. If C's claim is allowed (r 60) A may bring a suit under r 63 for a declaration that the property belongs to B and is therefore liable to attachment. And if C's claim is disallowed (r 61) he may bring a suit for a declaration that the property attached belongs to him and is therefore not liable to attachment. If no such suit is brought within one year from the date of the order under r 60 or 61 the order will be conclusive.

Objections to attachment though made by a party to a suit or his representative come within the scope of this rule if property attached is held by the objector on behalf of a third party as a trustee guardian or in any other fiduciary capacity. See notes to s 47 under the heads Parties to the suit p 154 above and Objection by party or his representative that property attached is not liable to attachment.

On the ground that such property is not liable to attachment—The Allahabad High Court has held that these words refer to the case only of an objection made to attachment and not to the case of a claim preferred to the property attached. Therefore any claim such as that of a mortgagee which would be inconsistent with the continuance of an unqualified attachment is liable to adjudication by the Court (n).

Where objection to attachment is raised after sale—The application for removal of attachment under this rule should be made before the property attached has been sold. The executing Court has no power to entertain such an application after sale (o).

Mortgage decree—This rule does not apply where the property in dispute is directed to be sold under a mortgage decree. The reason is that the property directed to be sold under a mortgage decree does not require to be attached by way of execution (p) and the benefit of the summary procedure afforded by the present rule is limited to claims and objections arising in respect of an attachment. A obtains a decree against B for sale of certain property mortgaged to him and applied in execution for the sale thereof. If the property is claimed by C he must proceed by a suit for a declaration that the property belongs to him and not by an application under this rule (q).

Whether rules 58 to 63 apply if the property attached is a debt — 4 obtains a decree against B for Rs 5000 and attaches in execution of the decree a debt alleged to be due by C to B. Can C apply under this rule to have the attachment removed? Yes and if the attachment is not removed he may institute a suit for a declaration that no debt is due from him to B within a year from the date of the order against him. If no such suit is filed the order will be conclusive against him (r). In an earlier Bombay Case the opinion was expressed that the procedure laid down in the sections of the Code of 1882 corresponding to rr 53 to 63 did not apply to a debt attached in execution of a decree the reason given being that a debt was not property capable of possession within the meaning of rr 60 and 61 and that if C alleged that no debt was due the proper course was for the Court to satisfy itself as to its existence (r 66) and if it was satisfied that no debt existed it should abstain from proceeding to sell the debt (s). But this view has since been disented from and it has been held that the words "possessed of" in rr 60 and 61 are not restricted to object capable of physical possession but apply also to object capable of constructive possession such as a debt. Moreover the word "property" in the present rule is wide enough to include a debt. As to a garnishee's right to set off see notes to r 46 above.

Appeal — No appeal lies under the Code from an order made in a claim case [see notes to s 47]. Objections to attachment or sale by parties or their representatives and Objections to attachment by third parties. But it has been held by the High Court of Madras that an appeal lies from such an order under cl 15 of the Letters Patent and that where such an appeal is preferred the period of limitation for the suit contemplated by r 63 below is to be calculated from the date of the order made on appeal (f). The High Court of Pangoon has held that there is no appeal from an order under this rule under the Letters Patent (u).

59 [s 279] The claimant or objector must adduce evidence to show that at the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of the property attached.

Evidence to be adduced by claimant

Some interest — The words mean such an interest as would entitle the possessor of the judgment debtor's possession not on his own account but on a joint account or in trust for the claimant (v).

Or was possessed of — The words mean was possessed of for himself and not as trustee for the judgment debtor. See the next rule and the notes thereon.

Limits of inquiry under rules 59 to 61 — In Sardhari Lal v. Laxmi Prasad (u) their Lordships of the Privy Council said that the Code does not prescribe the extent to which the investigation should go and though in some cases it may be very proper that there should be a full and complete investigation as if a suit were brought for the very purpose of trying the question in other cases it may also be the duty of the Court and proper course to deliver an opinion on such facts as are before the Court at the time having the necessary party to bring the suit which the law allows. Rules 59 to 61 provide for a summary investigation into possession as distinct from a thorough trial of ultimate right. It is impossible to separate altogether the investigation and the trial of title. Thus if the judgment debtor was in possession of the property as agent or trustee for another [rr 60 61] and the latter is the plaintiff into To that extent the title may be part of the inquiry in a claim case but no ultimate questions of trust are intended to be thrashed out (x) In execution of a decree obtained by A against B three pieces of Government securities are attached The securities stand in the name of C C applies for removal of the attachment under r 58 alleging that the securities belong to him and they are held by him on his own account A alleges that the securities are held by C benami for B It is not open to the Court under these circumstances to inquire whether C in whose name the securities stand is merely a benamidar for B The property must therefore be released from attachment (y) and the question whether C is merely a benamidar is a question of title which should be the subject of a suit under r 63 Similarly if the property attached is claimed by a person as a Mutawali under a deed of wakf and it is proved that he has been in possession as Mutawali for upwards of 20 years the property must be released from attachment The Court has no power under these rules to decide whether the deed of wakf is valid (z) The words possession of the judgment debtor or of some person in trust for him in rr 60 and 61 refer to cases in which the possession of a claimant as a trustee is of such a character as to be really the possession of the judgment debtor and not to cases in which very intricate questions of law may arise as to whether or not valid trusts may result in particular instances (a) If instead of determining the question of possession the Court determines the question of title and disposes of the application on the question of title the order is open to revision under s 115 of the Code (b) Similarly where a Court ought to inquire into the question whether the possession of the judgment debtor was on his own account or on account of some other person but it refuses to do so the order is open to revision The word conclusive in r 63 means non appealable it does not mean not capable of revision (c)

deceased father and in execution of the decree attached certain money in the hands of C due to the estate of the deceased. Prior to the date of the decree an order had been made by the High Court under ss 17 and 18 of the Administrator General's Act 2 of 1874 [now Act 3 of 1913 ss 10 and 11] authorising the Administrator General to collect the assets of the deceased. It was held on the application of the Administrator General that the attachment should be removed. As the order under the Administrator General's Act authorised the Administrator General to realise the debt from C as part of the assets of the deceased, the amount in the hands of C could not be said to be property in the possession of a third person in trust for the judgment debtor (B) (d). See notes to r 62 below.

Property in possession of a judgment debtor not on his own account but on account of or in trust for some other persons—Such property if attached should be released from attachment under this rule. A consigned goods by railway to B and B had made specific advances against them and the goods on arrival at the railway station were attached in execution of a decree against A. It was held that the goods though in the hands of the Railway Company were in the possession of A but on account of or in trust for B and should therefore be released from attachment on B's application (e).

Effect of order of release.—An order made under this rule releasing the property attached from attachment is only provisional and liable to be set aside by a regular suit (r 63). It is not conclusive a suit may be brought to claim the property notwithstanding the order (f). It has not the effect therefore of putting an end to an attachment duly made so as to leave the claimant free to deal with the property as he likes. If a suit is brought by the decree holder to establish his right to attach the property and the decree is in his favour it has the effect of setting aside the order of release and of maintaining the attachment originally made. The result is that any private transfer of the property by the claimant though made after an order under this rule releasing the property from attachment will be void under s 64 if the right to attach is subsequently established by suit under r 63 (g). In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property standing in the name of C (B's son) is attached. C objects to the attachment and the property is released from attachment under this rule. C afterwards mortgages the property to M. A then sues B and C for a declaration that B and not C is the real owner of the property and a decree is passed in his favour. The property is then reattached and sold in execution of A's decree and purchased by P. The mortgage to M is a transfer contrary to the attachment within the meaning of s 64 and P takes the property free from the mortgage. The second attachment in such a case relates back to the date of the first attachment. Similarly any payment made by a debtor to his creditor though after the attachment on the debt has been raised cannot prevail over the attaching decree holder who eventually succeeds in a suit brought by him under this rule (h). In the case however of an attachment before judgment it is obligatory upon the Court to withdraw such attachment upon the dismissal of the suit [O 38 r 9] and the reversal of the judgment of the trial judge on appeal does not operate to revive the attachment which has been withdrawn (i).

Disallowance of claim to property attached

Effect of order under this rule—An order in favour of a decree holder made under this rule does not enure for the benefit of other decree holders who are not parties to the proceedings (1)

62 [S 282] Where the Court is satisfied that the property is subject to a mortgage or charge in favour of some person not in possession, and thinks fit to continue the attachment, it may do so, subject to such mortgage or charge

Continuance of attachment subject to claim of encumbrancer

Scope of the rule—This rule is an enabling rule empowering the Court to make an order continuing the attachment subject to a mortgage if the Court is satisfied that the property attached is subject to a mortgage in favour of some person not in possession. The decisions are conflicting as to whether an order which refuses to recognize a mortgage or a charge and directs the continuance of an attachment free from such mortgage or charge is to be referred to rule 66 or to this rule. The Bombay High Court and an old Allahabad case refer it to rule 66 (i). But the Madras High Court and a recent Allahabad case decide that rule 58 applies (m). The latter view cuts down the mortgagee's time for suing to one year. secs 63

Subject to a mortgage.—The Code clearly makes a distinction between the case in which property is expressly sold subject to a mortgage and the case in which notice of an alleged mortgage is given in the proclamation of sale. The former is provided for by the present rule and the latter by r 66 below. In the former case the Court after being satisfied of the existence of the mortgage sells only the judgment debtor's equity of redemption that is to say the purchaser buys the property subject to the mortgage. In the latter case he buys the property with notice of the mortgage and subject to such risk as the notice might involve. The executing Court does not decide whether the mortgage subsists or not. Such being the case if there is in reality a subsisting mortgage then purchaser has to redeem it. If on the other hand the mortgage specified in the proclamation of sale turns out invalid the purchaser acquires the property free from liability for the mortgage. The point to be noted is that mere notice of an alleged mortgage in the proclamation of sale does not preclude the purchaser from questioning the validity of the mortgage (π). And it is also to be noted that if the mortgage specified in the proclamation proves to be invalid the judgment debtor is not entitled to claim from the purchaser the amount alleged to have been due on the mortgage (o).

Mortgage in favour of some person not in possession—It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that where a mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property at the time of attachment he can claim to have the attachment removed under r 60 the reason given being that a mortgagee cannot be said to be in possession as a trustee for the judgment debtor (p). The High Court of Patna has taken the contrary view (q). See notes to r 41 above. See also s 73 (1).

Attachment of property agreed to be sold—An agreement for a sale of immovable property does not create any interest in or charge on the property even if earnest money has been paid. The property may therefore be attached after the agreement and a sale thereof in execution will pass a good title to the auction purchaser (r). But it is otherwise where the purchase money has been paid and possession delivered for the purchaser is in that case entitled to a charge on the property (s).

63 [S 283] Where a claim or an objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute, but, subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive.

Alteration in the rule—S 283 of the Code of 1882 ran as follows. The party against whom an order under sections 280, 281 or 282 [now rr 60, 61 or 62] is passed may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims etc. The present rule on the other hand says that where a claim or an objection is preferred the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims etc. The specific reference to the previous sections or rules has been omitted. A corresponding change has also been made in the Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art II. See notes below. Ord r against party to a claim or objection.

Parties to suits under this rule—This rule provides that unless the party against whom an order is made institutes a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute [within the period of a year from the date of the order as provided by art 11 of the Limitation Act 1908] the order made against him shall be conclusive. Now the party against whom an order may be made may be the decree

53 holder (r 60) or the claimant including an incumbrancer (r 61) or even the judgment debtor. The result therefore is as follows —

1 The decree holder against whom an order is made under r 60 may sue the successful claimant for a declaration of his right to attach and sell the property released from attachment (i). To such a suit the judgment debtor is not a necessary party (u).

2 The claimant whose claim has been disallowed under r 61 may sue the decree holder to establish his right to the property attached (i). To such a suit the judgment debtor is a necessary party (u). And since the right conferred by this rule is not a personal one confined to the original claimant a purchaser of the interest of the original claimant can also bring a declaratory suit under this rule (x).

3 A attaches a house in execution of a decree against B. The property is claimed by C. The Court allows C's claim and the property is released from attachment. This is an order against A the decree holder (r 60). Does it also amount to an order against the judgment debtor? In other words can it be said by reason of the fact that C's claim to the property is allowed that the order operates also against B the judgment debtor? Assuming that the order does operate against B it can only do so if B is deemed to be a party against whom an order is made within the meaning of this rule. If so B must bring a declaratory suit against C within a year from the date of the order otherwise the order against him would be conclusive. But it has been held that a judgment debtor who is not in fact a party to the claim proceedings does not in the eye of the law become such by reason solely of his being the judgment debtor. Unless therefore he is a party in fact the order is not binding upon him and he may institute a suit even after the lapse of one year from the date of the order provided he does so within the ordinary period of limitation applicable to the suit to establish his title to and recover possession of the property from the claimant [C] (y). But if he was a party in fact the order would be binding on him unless he brought the suit within the period of one year.

Alienation by claimant after order in his favour—A purchaser of property from a claimant after an order has been passed in the claimant's favour removing the attachment on the property but before the institution of a suit by the decree holder against the claimant under this rule is an aliene pendente lite and is not therefore a necessary party to the suit. The alienee however takes the property subject to the provisions of s 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (z). In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property alleged to belong to B is attached. C claims the property. C's claim is allowed and the attachment is removed. C then sells the property to D. A then sues B and C for a declaration that at the date of attachment the property belonged to B and that he was entitled to attach it. D is not a necessary party to the suit. But the alienation by C to D will be affected by the doctrine of lis pendens as laid down in s 53 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882.

Period of limitation for suit under this rule—The period of limitation for a suit under this rule is one year from the date of the order [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 11]. In Sardhar Lal v Ambika Pershad (a) the Judicial Committee said: It [that is the order] is not conclusive a suit may be brought to claim the property notwithstanding the order but then the law of limitation says that the plaintiff

Suit not necessary if the property is released from attachment within the period of limitation—Where after an order disallowing a claimant's claim and directing the attachment to continue the attachment ceases within the period of one year from the date of the order e.g. by reason of the dismissal of the application for execution under r. 57 above for default of prosecution (d) or by reason of the withdrawal of attachment on payment by the judgment debtor to be decree holder of the amount of the decree (e) it is not incumbent upon the claimant to institute a suit under this rule or to prosecute the suit if he has already brought one and he will not be affected by any of the consequences which result from a failure to institute a suit under this rule. In execution of a decree obtained by A against B certain property alleged to belong to B is attached. C claims the property as his own but the claim is disallowed. Within one year from the date of the order A's application for execution is dismissed under r. 7 above. C is not bound to bring a suit under this rule.

A suit under this rule is not limited by any special standard of evidence or of law. The claimant may if necessary thrash out his title in the fullest and most ultimate sense. But if the title which he claims is not the ultimate full title to the property then of course he must be content to assert whatever the title claimed may be. So too the decree holder may make out his debtor's title exactly as if it were a suit for possession by the debtor (L).

Subject to the result of such suit the order shall be conclusive — This means that unless the suit is brought as provided by this rule the party against whom the order is made cannot assert either as plaintiff or as defendant in any other suit or as a party to any other proceeding the right denied to him by the order (l) A obtains a decree against B and in execution of the decree attaches certain property alleged to belong to B. C claims that he is in possession of the property under a sale from B of a date prior to the attachment and applies that the property be released from attachment. The executing Court finds that C was in possession at the date of the attachment but that the sale to him was fictitious and disallows C's claim. No suit is brought by C within the period of a year to establish his right to the property. The property is then sold in execution and purchased by I. P then sues C for possession. C is precluded in this suit from again asserting his right as purchaser from B. No suit having been brought by him within the period of limitation the order disallowing his claim became conclusive against him under this rule. Similarly if A in execution of a decree against B attaches a debt alleged to be due by C to B and C objects to the attachment on the ground that no such debt is due and C's objection is overruled but C brings no suit under this rule he will be precluded in a suit against him by the execution purchaser of the debt from contending that no debt was due by him to B (m). The result would be the same even if C had brought a suit against A and B to establish his right to the debt and the suit was dismissed. The result of failure to file the suit as also of the dismissal of the suit if one is filed is that the order becomes conclusive not only as regards the parties to the order or the suit but also as regards the auction purchaser. In either case C cannot assert his claim in a substantive suit against the auction purchaser nor can he set it up by way of defence to a suit against him by the auction purchaser (n).

The order is conclusive as against the party against whom it is made—4 obtains a decree against B and attaches L's property in execution of his decree. C claiming to be a mortgagee of the property puts in a claim under r 38. A contends that the mortgage is not valid but his contention is disallowed. No suit is instituted by 4 as required by the present rule and the order becomes conclusive against him. The property is then sold subject to C's mortgage and it is purchased by A. Subsequently C sues A (purchaser) and B (mortgagor) to recover the mortgage debt by sale of the mortgaged property. B not being a party to the claim proceeding may contend in C's suit that the mortgage is not valid but A cannot for the order became conclusive against him. The fact that B the judgment debtor can impeach the validity of the mortgage and that the property purchased by A is the property which belonged to B does not entitle A to be placed in B's position so as to give him the same right to attack the mortgage as B has (o). See notes above. Parties to suits under this rule para 3.

Property in respect of which order is conclusive—An order in a claim case is conclusive only as regards the particular property in dispute (p).

Order against party to a claim or objection —

1. An order made on an application which does not come within the scope of r 38 is not an order to which the present rule applies (q).

2. Order dismissing a claim for default—Section 233 of the Code of 1883 ran as follows. The party against whom an order under sections 240, 261 or 282 is passed may in title a suit etc. It was accordingly held in some cases that the order referred to in s 283 must be one made after investigation of the claim as contemplated by sections 280 281 and 282 and that an order dismissing a claim for default and without investigation did not come under that section. Accordingly it was held that an order dismissing a claim for default did not become conclusive against the party against whom it was made so as to preclude him from instituting a suit more than one year after the date of the order provided the suit was within the ordinary period of limitation (r). The language of the present rule is more comprehensive than the language of s 283. This rule makes no reference to the previous rules namely rules 60 61 and 62 and a corresponding change has also been made in art 11 of the Limitation Act. The result is that the rule applies to every order made against a party to a claim preferred or an objection made under r 54 even if the order was made for default and without investigation (s). But this does not take away the right of the party to apply to have the order dismissed for default set aside (t).

3 Order refusing to investigate a claim on the ground of delay—Where a claim or objection is preferred under r 58 and the Court rejects it under the proviso to that rule on the ground that it was designedly or unnecessarily delayed the order is one made against the claimant or objector within the meaning of this rule (u).

4 An order in a claim petition stating that as the petition was filed late the claim will be notified to the bidders is in effect an order rejecting the claim. Such an order is one made against the claimant within the meaning of this rule (1). But an order in the same terms, namely, Sale stopped, the claim cannot be investigated by this Court. A petition dismissed has been held not to be an order against the claimant (u). Similarly, where a mortgagee applied that the sale proceeds should be kept in Court to satisfy his mortgage, but the application was dismissed on the ground that the sale had already taken place and the Court had no jurisdiction to hear the application, it was held that there was no order against the mortgagee (x). Where a claimant referred a claim to the property attached on the ground that he was entitled to a share in the property and the Court made an order in the same terms, namely, Whatever right the judgment debtor has will pass by the sale, the claim does not require any further investigation, the claim put forward will be noted in the sale proclamation. It was held that it was not an order against the claimant (y).

o If in point of fact there has been no attachment art 11 of the Limitation Act cannot apply for unless there has been an attachment there can be no order made on an objection lodged to it nor can any claim be made to the property so attached and without such an order there can be no terminus a quo for the running of limitation and with this limitation itself is non-existent. So when a mortgagee preferred a claim in the belief that there was an attachment over the property mortgaged and it is subsequently proved that the order of attachment had never been carried out the Privy

3 Council held that the order passed rejecting the claim was a nullity and art 11 did not apply to the mortgagee's subsequent suit on his mortgage (z)

6 See also notes to r 62 above Scope of the rule

7 There is a material difference between an order which falls under this rule and an order which falls under r 63 below In the one case if the party affected does not sue within 12 months to set it aside it becomes conclusive In the other case it has no such effect (a)

8 No suit can lie under this rule unless there has been an order either allowing or disallowing an objection to attachment A person is not entitled to object to an attachment and then to withdraw the attachment and bring a suit under this rule (b)

Orders in proceedings for attachment before judgment—Rules 58 to 63 apply to claims preferred to property attached before judgment (c) But a Provincial Court of Small Causes has no power to attach immovable property before judgment and an order made by such a Court adjudicating a claim to property so attached is ultra vires (d) See notes to s 7 on p 21 above

Suit for refund of purchase money—This rule applies to a suit to establish the plaintiff's right to the property in dispute It does not apply to a case where a plaintiff whose claim to the property is disallowed under r 61 sues the judgment debtor for a refund of the money paid by him for the purchase of the property A sells certain property to B C obtains a decree against A and attaches the property in execution B claims the property as purchaser but his claim is disallowed B sues A for a refund of the purchase money more than a year after the date of the order but within the ordinary period of limitation The suit is not barred by limitation The reason is that r 63 does not apply to such a suit (e)

Revival of attachment on the suit being decreed—See notes to r 60 above Effect of order of release

Payment by claimant under protest—If the claimant fails and the attachment is not removed he is not compelled to bring a suit under this rule for a declaration of his title to the property he may prevent the sale of the property by paying the decretal amount to the decree holder and then sue for it as money paid under compulsion of law i.e. under pressure of execution proceeding (f) Further the claimant is not bound to take proceedings at all under the Code to set aside the attachment He may pay the amount of the decree under protest and then sue as stated above (g) See notes to r 64 below

Jurisdiction—In a suit for a declaration that property is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree where the value of the property is in excess of the amount claimed in execution of the decree the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is not the value of the property but the decretal amount (h) But where the plaintiff seeks not only for a declaration that the property is not attachable but for a declaration of his title to the property as against the decree holder and the judgment debtor the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the value of the property (i)

Burden of proof—The burden of proof in a suit under this rule lies on the plaintiff as in other cases and not on the defendant (j)

Effect of attachment on adverse possession—The High Court of Madras has held that attachment of property in execution of a decree does not arrest the running of time in favour of a party holding the property adversely to the judgment debtor (k) A obtains a decree against B. In June 1921 A attaches certain property alleged to belong to B. C objects to the attachment and the attachment is raised in April 1922. In January 1923 A sues C under this rule for a declaration that the property belongs to B and that he is entitled to attach it. C contends that he has been in possession of the property adversely to C for upward of 12 years and that A's suit is barred by limitation. At the date of the attachment C's possession was for 11 years only and at the date of the suit it was for upwards of 12 years. According to the Madras High Court the period of C's possession is to be counted up to the date of the suit and A's suit is therefore barred the reason given being that attachment could not prevent the running of time in favour of C. On the other hand according to the Bombay High Court the period of C's possession must be counted only up to the date of attachment and hence A's suit is not barred the reason given being that the real question in such a case was whether the judgment debtor [B] had a subsisting right to the property at the date of attachment (l). According to the Calcutta High Court also the material date is the date of attachment (m).

Fraudulent transfer by judgment debtor—Where a claim is made to the property attached by one claiming to be a transferee from the judgment debtor and the claim is disallowed and the claimant subsequently institutes a suit under this rule to establish his title to the property it is open to the attaching creditor to plead in defence that the transfer was in fraud of the general body of creditors (n). In execution of a decree obtained by A against B B's property is attached. C claims the property as having been purchased by him from B before A obtained the decree against B but the claim is disallowed. C then sues A and B under this rule to establish his right to the property. A is entitled to plead in defence that the transfer by B to C was made with intent to defraud B's creditors. If the claim is allowed and a suit is brought by the attaching creditor under this rule he is entitled to sue on his own behalf. He is not bound to sue on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the judgment debtor (o). Thus if in the case put above C's claim is allowed and the attachment is raised it is competent to A the attaching creditor to sue B and C under this rule to establish his right to attach the property and he may prove in such suit that the transfer by B to C was fraudulent. A is not bound to bring a representative suit on behalf of all the creditors of B.

Damages for wrongful attachment—Where goods attached and belonging to the judgment debtor are claimed by a third party and his claim is disallowed he may sue under this rule not only for a declaration of his title to the goods but also for the value

66 [S 287] (1) Where any property is ordered to be sold by public auction in execution of a decree, the Court shall cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made in the language of such Court

Proclamation of sales by public auction

(2) Such proclamation shall be drawn up after notice to the decree holder and the judgment debtor and shall state the time and place of sale, and specify as fully and accurately as possible—

- (a) the property to be sold,
- (b) the revenue assessed upon the estate or part of the estate, where the property to be sold is an interest in an estate or in part of an estate paying revenue to the Government,
- (c) any incumbrance to which the property is liable,
- (d) the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered,
- (e) every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property

(3) Every application for an order for sale under this rule shall be accompanied by a statement signed and verified in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings and containing, so far as they are known to or can be ascertained by the person making the verification the matters required by sub rule (2) to be specified in the proclamation

(4) For the purpose of ascertaining the matters to be specified in the proclamation, the Court may summon any person whom it thinks necessary to summon and may examine him in respect to any such matters and require him to produce any document in his possession or power relating thereto

- 1 The provision in sub r (2) for notice to be given to the decree holder and the judgment debtor is new
- 2 Sub r (3) is also new

Incumbrances to which the property is liable—Where a decree holder who held a simple money decree stated in his application [sub r (3)] that the property to be sold was subject to a mortgage in his favour but no mention was made of the mortgage in the proclamation the omission not being due to any fraud on his part it was held that he was not estopped from enforcing his mortgage against the auction purchaser (x). But he would be so estopped if he omitted to mention his mortgage in the application (y). See notes to r 62 of this order.

Value of the property—Clause (e) of the rule provides that the proclamation shall specify as fairly and accurately as possible every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property. There can hardly be any doubt that the value of the property to be put up for sale is a material fact within the meaning of cl (e). As said by the Judicial Committee in Saadatnund Mohan v Phul Kuar ( ) Whatever material fact is stated in the proclamation (and the value of the property is a very material fact) must be considered as one of the things which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know and it is enacted in terms (though express enactment is hardly necessary for such an object) that those things shall be stated as fairly and accurately as possible. If any enquiry into the value of the property is necessary the Court should hold an enquiry (a). If the value is understated in the proclamation and the understatement is such as is calculated to mislead bidders and to prevent them from offering adequate price and the sale results in a price altogether inadequate the sale must be set aside on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale within the meaning of r 90 below (b). In a Calcutta case it was said that the Court was not bound to investigate the value of the property (c) but these remarks were obiter dicta (d) and it was held in a later case that the Court is bound under this clause to investigate the value and insert it in the sale proclamation (e). In view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case cited above there is no doubt that the value of the property should be stated as fairly and accurately as possible in the sale proclamation. The Court may in an exceptional case state in the proclamation the values stated both by the decree holder and the judgment debtor instead of attempting itself to value the property (f). The Madras High Court has held that the Court is under no obligation to fix in the proclamation of sale its own valuation of the property to be sold (g).

Specifying property to be sold.—See notes to r 90 below. Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale no 14.

Specifying revenue.—See notes to r 90 below. Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale nos 14 and 2.

Specifying incumbrances.—See notes to r 90 below. Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale no 1A.

Proclamation of sale to be settled by Court.—The power to settle the proclamation of sale cannot be delegated to a commissioner. The proclamation must be settled by the Court (A). If it is settled by a commissioner the sale would be invalid.

Duty of Court in respect of Court Sales—In a case in which the terms of the proclamation were not clearly explained by the officer of the Court conducting the sale to a bidder who asked for an explanation and who was thus misled into buying property which was subject to mortgages amounting to more than its value the Judicial Committee in setting aside the sale observed. In sales under the direction of the Court it is incumbent on the Court to be scrupulous in the extreme and very careful to see that no taint or touch of fraud or deceit or misrepresentation is found in the conduct of its ministers. It would be disastrous it would be absolutely shocking if the Court were to enforce against a purchaser misled by its duly accredited agents a bargain so illusory and so unconscientious as this (i)

Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale nos 14 and 2

Appeal—An order under this rule not being included in the list of appealable orders given in O 43 is not appealable as an order. The question then arises whether an order under this rule is an order in execution proceedings within the meaning of s 47. Now an order in execution proceedings may be a final order that is it may conclusively determine the rights of parties or it may be interlocutory. In the former case the order operates as a decree and is appealable as such [s 2 (2)] but not in the latter case [see notes to s 47 Interlocutory orders in execution proceedings]. The question therefore in each case is whether a particular order made under this rule conclusively determines the rights of the parties or not.

A Full Bench of the High Court of Madras in Swagami v Subrahmaniam (j) which was a case under the corresponding section 287 of the Code of 1892 held that no proceeding of a Court under that section in relation to the proclamation of sale is an order within s 244 (now s 47) so as to be appealable as a decree. In the course of the Order of Reference the learned Judges said. We are disposed to think that the preliminary objection is well founded and that under section 287 Civil Procedure Code the proceedings are in themselves administrative and not judicial but that if and when a sale does take place if ever and it has to be judicially confirmed objection may be taken to the confirmation of the sale on any of the grounds mentioned in section 311 Civil Procedure Code (now O 21 r 90) some of which may relate to the contents of the proclamation. This view receives strong corroboration from the provision enacted by section 288 Civil Procedure Code that no Judge or other public officer shall be answerable for any error mis statement or omission in any proclamation under section 287 Civil Procedure Code unless the same has been committed or made dishonestly a provision which in view of Act XVIII of 1890 would have been quite superfluous if proceedings under section 287 Civil Procedure Code were judicial and not administrative. In delivering their opinion the Full Bench said. We concur in the reasons given in the Order of Reference and we may add that the view that the proceedings in themselves under section 287 are of an administrative and not of a judicial character is further supported by the fact that special provision is made in section 287 (now O 21 r 66 (4)) to summon witnesses and make enquiry into the matters referred to in the section a provision which would be superfluous if the proceedings were judicial. It has accordingly been held by that Court that an order under this rule determining the value of the property to be sold the place where the sale is to take place the lot in which it is to be sold and the amount for the recovery of which the property is to be sold is not a judicial but an administrative order and that it does not come within s 244 (now s 47) and is not

6 appealable (l) It may here be stated that s 288 of the Code of 1882 has not been reproduced in the present Code In a case under this Code (l) the High Court of Madras observed that the Full Bench decision was good law even under the present Code notwithstanding the omission of s 288 though in another case (m) Schwabe C J expressed a doubt on that point As to a decision as to the order in which the properties are to be put up for sale the Madras High Court has held that such a decision is an order within sec 47 and that it is appealable if it affects the rights of co-defendants inter se for example in a case of execution of a decree on a mortgage where the interests of the owners of the items of the mortgaged properties will be seriously affected by the order in which the properties are sold (n) In a recent case the same High Court held that the Court is under no obligation whatever under this rule to fix and state in the proclamation of sale its own valuation of the property to be sold (o)

The Bombay High Court follows the Madras Full Bench Case (p)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that an order under this rule may be either final or interlocutory If it is final it falls within s 47 and is appealable as a decree but it is not appealable if it is interlocutory It has accordingly been held that an order determining the value of the property to be sold is merely interlocutory and is not appealable (q) An order in the following term let sale proclamation be issued in the meantime I shall hear the objection of the judgment debtor is also interlocutory (r) But an order adjudicating upon a dispute as to the boundaries of the property sold and determining that certain accreted land should be included in the property to be sold is final and is appealable as a decree (s) It may be observed that it is not safe to follow such decisions under the Code of 1882 as they proceeded on points in which the definition of decree differed from that in the present Code

The High Court of Allahabad has also held that an order under this rule determining the value of the property to be sold does not fall within s 47 and is not appealable The reason given is that in such a case the Court judicially decides nothing (t)

In two earlier cases the High Court of Patna held that an order under this rule determining the value of the property to be sold was merely interlocutory and was not therefore appealable (u) In a recent Patna case a Bench of three Judges held that an order of the Court determining any of the particulars to be stated in the sale proclamation under this rule is not a final order and is not appealable It was accordingly held in that case that an order refusing to notify a lease in the sale proclamation was not final and was not appealable (v)

Letters Patent appeal—An order of a single Judge of the High Court sitting on the Original Side refusing to alter the upset price fixed in a proclamation of sale or to direct the sale of the property in lots or to postpone the date of sale is not a judgment

Death of judgment debtor pending execution—If the judgment debtor has died before issue of notice to him under this rule his legal representatives must be brought on the record. If the legal representatives are not brought on the record the sale would be void (x)

Non appearance of legal representative and res judicata—The failure of the legal representative of a deceased judgment debtor to attend pursuant to a notice under sub r (2) [App E form no 23] at the hearing of an application to settle the terms of a sale proclamation does not estop him on the principle of res judicata from contending thereafter that the property attached belongs to him personally and that it does not form part of the estate of the deceased judgment debtor. property may be kept under hammer for several days without an adjournment and if no a fresh proclamation is not necessary (h)

Sale held on a date other than the one to which it is adjourned—Where a sale is adjourned to a certain date but it is held on a different date the case is one of material irregularity in conducting the sale (i)

Sub rule (3) Sale in execution of a mortgage decree—A mortgagor judgment debtor is entitled to stop the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage decree by payment of the debt before the sale actually takes place even after a final decree for sale has been passed (j)

Rateable distribution—Moneys paid into Court under sub r (3) to stop a sale are assets available for rateable distribution within the meaning of s 73 (L)

70 [Cf S 287, last para] Nothing in rules 66 to 69 shall be deemed to apply to any case in which the execution of a decree has been transferred to the Collector

Execution of decree by Collector—See ss 68 to 72 and Sch III below

71 [s 293] Any deficiency of price which may happen on a re sale by reason of the purchaser's default, and all expenses attending such re sale, shall be certified to the Court or to the Collector or subordinate of the Collector, as the case may be by the officer or other person holding the sale, and shall, at the instance of either the decree holder or the judgment debtor, be recoverable from the defaulting purchaser under the provisions relating to the execution of a decree for the payment of money

Application of the rule—The rule extends to all sales whether of movable or of immovable property and also to re sales made under the Code whether made in consequence of default of payment of deposit under r 84 or of purchase money under rr 85 and 86 (l) But the re sale should only cover the property sold at the prior sale and any substantial difference of description at the sale and re sale in any of the matters required by r 66 will deprive the decree holder of the right to recover the deficiency of price under this rule Thus where the defaulting purchaser had been induced to bid for the property as unincumbered by reason of the fact that the incumbrances were not mentioned in the proclamation of sale and the re sale was on a proclamation in which the incumbrances were mentioned it was held that he was not liable for the deficiency on re sale under this rule (m) The same was held where the property was described as that of A at the first sale and as that of B at the second (n) The case is different however if the property re sold is substantially the same as that put up for sale at the first sale The reasonable construction to place on rule 71 is that the re sale should be within a reason able time after the first sale and the property re sold should be substantially the same and that any difference will not matter if the difference in the condition of the property or the title thereto is one which would occur in the ordinary course of things having regard either to the nature of the property or the transaction in respect thereof having legal force at the date of sale or was brought about by the first purchaser's default (o). The deficiency may be recovered though the certificate referred to in this rule has not been issued (p).

It is to be noted that on the happening of any of the events that render a re-sale necessary the decree holder is not bound to have the same property re sold. He may proceed against any other property of the judgment debtor leaving the latter to his remedy against the defaulting purchaser (q).

Who may apply under this rule—The only person who can apply under this rule is the decree holder who brought the property to sale or the judgment debtor. No other person is entitled to apply (r).

By reason of purchaser's default—These words cover a default not only in payment of the balance of the price but in making the deposit of 25 per cent as provided by r 84 below (s).

At a Court sale A bid Rs 5000 B bids Rs 6000 and C bids Rs 7000. C dies before his bid is accepted by the Court. Can B be said in the circumstances to be the highest bidder? No. C's bid was revoked by his death before acceptance by the Court. B's bid lapsed on the making of the higher bid by C and A's bid lapsed on the making of the higher bid by B. The property should therefore be put up afresh for sale (t).

Certificate—The certificate as to the deficiency can be executed as a decree and can therefore also be attached as a decree (u).

Interest on deficiency—A defaulting purchaser is liable for interest on the deficiency from the date on which an order is made against him under this rule and not from the date of sale (v).

Rateable distribution—Where a decree holder who has brought the property to sale applies under this rule and attaches the amount of the deposit lying in Court other decree holders who have applied before the amount was deposited in Court are entitled to a rateable distribution of such amount. The amount in deposit in Court represents the assets realised by the Court within the meaning of sec "3 above (w).

Where defaulting purchaser merely an agent—The mere fact that the defaulting purchaser acted as the agent of another is no ground for exempting him from liability under this rule unless he informed the officer conducting the sale that he was merely an agent. The fact that the judgment debtor knew that he was merely an agent does not disentitle the judgment debtor to an order under this rule (x).

Appeal—An order under this rule allowing or disallowing an application for the recovery of the loss by a re-sale falls within s 47 and is appealable as a decree (y). See notes to s 102. Execution.

72 [S 294] (1) No holder of a decree in execution of which property is sold shall, without the express permission of the Court bid for or purchase the property

Decree holder not to bid for or buy property without permission

(2) Where a decree holder purchases with such permission, the purchase money and the amount due on the decree may, subject to the provisions of section 73, be set off against one another, and the Court executing the decree shall enter up satisfaction of the decree in whole or in part accordingly

Where decree holder purchase amount of decree may be taken as payment

(3) Where a decree holder purchases, by himself or through another person, without such permission, the Court may if it thinks fit, on the application of the judgment debtor or any other person whose interests are affected by the sale, by order set aside the sale, and the costs of such application and order, and any deficiency of price which may happen on the re sale and all expenses attending it shall be paid by the decree holder

Alterations in the rule —

- 1 The words subject to the provisions of section 73 are new See notes below under the head Amount due on the decree
- 2 The words any other person whose interests are affected by the sale in sub r (3) have been substituted for the words any other person interested in the sale This is merely a verbal alteration

No separate suit — Where a decree holder without leave of the Court buys the property of the judgment debtor at a Court sale the remedy of the latter is by application under this rule and s 4 and not by a separate suit a separate suit is barred under s 47 The question whether the sale should be set aside or not is a question between the parties to the suit relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s 4 and it must therefore be decided by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit ( ) Note the words may by order set aside the sale in sub r (3)

The Court may if it thinks fit set aside the sale — In Prin Ratha Krihana v Bihari Sahay (a) their Lordships of the Privy Council in dealing with the corresponding s 214 of the Code of 1859 said Upon the construction of this section it is evident that a purchase by a decree holder who has not obtained permission is not void nor a nullity but is only to be avoided on the application of the judgment debtor or some other person interested It would be injurious to those interested in the sale if a decree holder who had been forced up in the bidding to give a large sum of money could escape from fulfilling his contract by obtaining the sale and a nullity and it would make all titles under such sales insecure if at a later period they were liable to be treated as nullities A sale is to be set aside upon application and upon cause shown Where a decree holder purchases without the permission of the Court the sale is stated above

(2) Cf Prin Ratha Krihana v Bihari Sahay (1901) 3 All 441 (a) (1901) 19 I A 31 1 Pat 33 67 I C 914 ( ) A I C 3

Provided that the Court may direct the sale to be held at the nearest place of public resort, if it is of opinion that the produce is thereby likely to sell to greater advantage

(2) Where, on the produce being put up for sale,—

(a) a fair price, in the estimation of the person holding the sale, is not offered for it, and

(b) the owner of the produce or a person authorized to act in his behalf applies to have the sale postponed till the next day or, if a market is held at the place of sale, the next market day, the sale shall be postponed accordingly and shall be then completed, whatever price may be offered for the produce

Place of sale of movable property—Except in the case of agricultural produce for which provision has been made by this rule a sale of movables in execution of a decree should ordinarily be held at some place within the jurisdiction of the Court ordering the sale. Good and sufficient reasons ought to be shown for directing otherwise. A mere contention that a higher price is likely to be bid in some other place is not a good and sufficient reason (a)

75 [New] (1) Where the property to be sold is a growing crop and the crop from its nature admits of being stored but has not yet been stored, the day of the sale shall be so fixed as to admit of its being made ready for storing before the arrival of such day, and the sale shall not be held until the crop has been cut or gathered and is ready for storing

(2) Where the crop from its nature does not admit of being stored, it may be sold before it is cut and gathered and the purchaser shall be entitled to enter on the land, and to do all that is necessary for the purpose of tending and cutting or gathering it

76 [s 296] Where the property to be sold is a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation, the Court may, instead of directing the sale to be made by public auction, authorize the sale of such instrument or share through a broker

May—A sale through a broker is permissive and not obligatory (b).

77 [S 297] (1) Where movable property is sold by public auction the price of each lot shall be paid at the time of sale or as soon after as the officer or other person holding the sale directs, and in default of payment the property shall forthwith be re sold

Sale by public auction

(2) On payment of the purchase money, the officer or other person holding the sale shall grant a receipt for the same and the sale shall become absolute

(3) Where the movable property to be sold is a share in goods belonging to the judgment debtor and a co owner, and two or more persons, of whom one is such co owner, respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bidding shall be deemed to be the bidding of the co owner

Where movable property is sold by public auction—This does not apply to negotiable instruments or shares sold through a broker under r 76 above (c)

Payment of price—The officer holding the sale has a discretion to allow the price to be paid at a reasonable time after the sale (d)

In default of payment—The provisions of r 71 apply to a re sale under this rule (e)

Sub rule (3)—This sub rule is new It give a right of pre-emption to the co owner See as to immovable property r 88 below

78 [S 293] No irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of movable property shall vitiate the sale, but any person sustaining any injury by reason of such irregularity at the hand of any other person may institute a suit against him for compensation or (if such other person is the purchaser) for the recovery of the specific property and for compensation in default of such recovery

Irregularity not to vitiate suit by any person injured by sale

Scope of the rule—This rule provides for the case of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of movable property Rule 90 deals with irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale of immovable property

Irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale—If the sale proclamation warrants a title which fails the injured party may apply to set aside the sale for this is not a case of irregularity (f)

At the hand of any other person—Where movable property not belonging to the judgment debtor is sold at the instance of the decree holder the real owner may sue the decree holder for the value of the property (g)

79 [ S 299, 300, 301 ] (1) Where the property sold is movable property of which actual seizure has been made, it shall be delivered to the purchaser

Delivery of movable property debts and shares

(2) Where the property sold is movable property in the possession of some person other than the judgment debtor, the delivery thereof to the purchaser shall be made by giving notice to the person in possession prohibiting him from delivering possession of the property to any person except the purchaser

(3) Where the property sold is a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument or is a share in a corporation, the delivery thereof shall be made by a written order of the Court prohibiting the creditor from receiving the debt or any interest thereon, and the debtor from making payment thereof to any person except the purchaser, or prohibiting the person in whose name the share may be standing from making any transfer of the share to any person except the purchaser, or receiving payment of any dividend or interest thereon, and the manager, secretary or other proper officer of the corporation from permitting any such transfer or making any such payment to any person except the purchaser

Sale of shares — A purchaser of shares of a limited Company at a sale in execution of a decree is not entitled as of right to have his name entered in the register of the Company as a shareholder. He is subject to the same rules as those which apply to a private purchaser (1)

Forms — See App E forms nos 32 33 and 34

80 [ S 302 ] (1) Where the execution of a document or the endorsement of the party in whose name a negotiable instrument or a share in a corporation is standing is required

Transfer of negotiable instruments and shares to transfer such negotiable instrument or share, the Judge or such officers as he may appoint in this behalf may execute such document or make such endorsement as may be necessary, and such execution or endorsement shall have the same effect as an execution or endorsement by the party

(2) Such execution or endorsement may be in the following form, namely —

A B by C D, Judge of the Court of (or as the case may be), in a suit by E F against A B

(3) Until the transfer of such negotiable instrument or share, the Court may, by order, appoint some person to receive any interest or dividend due thereon and to sign a receipt for the same, and any receipt so signed shall be as valid and effectual for all purposes as if the same had been signed by the party himself

Execution of deed of transfer of shares—Where a deed of transfer of shares is executed by a Judge under this rule the company has no option as to registering the shareholder who purchased the shares in execution and if the purchaser cannot obtain the original share certificates from the judgment debtor the company is bound to grant him new share certificates (j)

81 [S 303] In the case of any movable property not heretofore provided for, the Court may make an order vesting such property in the purchaser or as he may direct, and such property shall vest accordingly

Vesting order in case of other property

Sale of immovable property

82 [S 304] Sales of immovable property in execution of decrees may be ordered by any Court other than a Court of Small Causes

What Courts may order sales

83 [S 305] (1) Where an order for the sale of immovable property has been made, if the judgment debtor can satisfy the Court that there is reason to believe that the amount of the decree may be raised by the mortgage or lease or private sale of such property, or some part thereof, or of any other immovable property of the judgment debtor, the Court may, on his application, postpone the sale of the property comprised in the order for sale on such terms and for such period as it thinks proper, to enable him to raise the amount

Postponement of sale to judgment debtor to raise amount of decree

(2) In such case the Court shall grant a certificate to the judgment debtor authorizing him within a period to be mentioned therein, and notwithstanding anything contained in section 64, to make the proposed mortgage, lease or sale

Provided that all moneys payable under such mortgage lease or sale shall be paid, not to the judgment-debtor, but, save in so far as a decree holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72, into Court

33 Provided also that no mortgage, lease or sale under this rule shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court

(3) Nothing in this rule shall be deemed to apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage of, or charge on, such property

Alterations in the rule—The words save in so far as a decree holder is entitled to set off such money under the provisions of rule 72 in sub r (2) have been added to make it clear that where a decree holder is entitled to a set off under r 72 he should not be required to pay in the monies. A similar saving has been introduced into r 84 sub r 2 and r 85

Postpone the sale for such period as it thinks proper—The postponement of sale under this rule is discretionary with the Court (1). But the postponement should be for a reasonable period (1)

The amount of the decree can be raised—No sale should be postponed and no certificate should be granted under sub r (2) unless the whole amount due on the decree can be raised by mortgage lease or sale (m)

Notwithstanding anything contained in section 64—On compliance with the conditions of this rule a private alienation notwithstanding s 64 becomes absolute not only against the claim of the decree holder but against all claims enforceable under the attachment (n)

Confirmation of sale by Court—Where permission to raise the amount of decree by private sale has been granted to the judgment debtor by two Courts in each of which a decree has been passed against him it is enough if the sale is confirmed by one Court it is superfluous to apply to the other Court for confirmation of the same sale (o)

Guardian and Wards Act 8 of 1890 s 29—A private alienation of property though confirmed by the executing Court under this rule is not valid if such alienation is made by a guardian and the sale is not confirmed by the Court by which the guardian was appointed (p)

Decree for the enforcement of a mortgage—This rule does not apply to a sale of property directed to be sold in execution of a decree for the enforcement of a mortgage. The reason is that in the case of a mortgage decree the right of sale does not depend upon the attachment in execution but is confirmed by the decree itself (7)

Rateable distribution—Money paid into Court under the provision to sub r (2) is liable to rateable distribution under s 73 as it is paid under a pending execution application (r)

86 [S 308] In default of payment within the period mentioned in the last preceding rule, the deposit may, if the Court thinks fit, after defraying the expenses of the sale, be forfeited to the Government, and the property shall be re sold, and the defaulting purchaser shall forfeit all claim to the property or to any part of the sum for which it may subsequently be sold

Procedure in default of payment

Alteration in the rule—The words may if the Court thinks fit have been substituted for the word shall See notes below

Forfeiture of deposit to Government—The old section provided that the deposit shall be forfeited to Government This provision led to hardship in certain cases (s) To obviate the hardship the words may if the Court thinks fit have been substituted for the word shall It is no longer obligatory upon the Court to forfeit the deposit

Notification on re sale

Fresh notification—A fresh notification is only necessary where the re sale is in default of payment of the purchase money within the time allowed by r 80 No fresh notification is necessary for a re sale in default of payment of the 25 per cent deposit required by r 84 (a)

88 [S 310] Where the property sold is a share of undivided immovable property and two or more persons, of whom one is a co sharer, respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bid shall be deemed to be the bid of the co sharer

Co sharer — A defeasible title to a share is not sufficient to support a claim for pre-emption under this rule (b) The Allahabad High Court has held under the rule framed under s 70 of the Code that where a sale is confirmed by the Collector in favour of one bidder in default of appearance of the other bidder of the same sum claiming a preferential right as a co sharer he is not entitled to maintain a separate suit to set aside the sale by virtue of a right of pre-emption (c)

Application to set aside sale on deposit

been sold in execution of a decree, any person, either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale, may apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court,—

(a) for payment to the purchaser, a sum equal to five per cent of the purchase money, and

(b) for payment to the decree holder, the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, less any amount which may, since the date of such proclamation of sale, have been received by the decree holder

(2) Where a person applies under rule 90 to set aside the sale of his immovable property, he shall not, unless he withdraws his application, be entitled to make or prosecute an application under this rule

(3) Nothing in this rule shall relieve the judgment-debtor from any liability he may be under in respect of costs and interest not covered by the proclamation of sale

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale have been substituted for the words any person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter See notes below Who may apply under this rule

2 The words unless he withdraws his application and the words or prosecute in sub r (2) are new See notes below under the head Sub rule (2)

Immovable property—This rule applies only to sales of immovable property A simple mortgage bond is movable and not immovable property The provisions of this rule do not therefore apply to a sale of such a bond in execution of a decree (d)

This rule applies to sales under money and mortgage decrees—This rule obviously applies to sales in execution of decrees for the payment of money The transfer into this Code (see O 34) of the sections of the Transfer of Property Act as to decrees in suits on mortgage shows that the provisions of the present rule apply to sales under mortgage decrees Hence a mortgagor whose immovable property has been sold in execution of a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property may apply under this rule to set aside the sale (e) As to the application of this rule to sales under money decrees it was doubtful whether its provisions applied to mortgage decrees (f) H—

Calcutta holding that they did not (f) while the other Courts holding that they did (g) The Calcutta decisions are no longer law In a Calcutta case it was held that the present rule applies also to sales under a mortgage decree on the original side of the Calcutta High Court (h) In a recent case it was held that this rule though well adapted to mofussil practice is not in terms applicable to the practice of the Court on its original side inasmuch as no amount is specified in any proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered nor are sales ordered for recovery of the amount of costs before they are taxed A mortgagor can therefore apply to set aside the sale on deposit of a sum equivalent to 5 per cent of the purchase money and the amount of the decree (i)

Whether the rule applies to other sales—This rule has been held to apply when the sale is under a decree passed in terms of an award made on an order of reference in a partition suit (j) The High Court of Madras has held that this rule does not apply to a sale by a receiver of partnership property for realising the partnership assets (k)

Who may apply under this rule—Under the old section the application to set aside a sale could only be made by any person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter that is the Chapter relating to execution The new words it was held included—

- (1) the judgment debtor
- (2) any person though not a party to the suit or decree (l) whose interests were affected by the sale

A person whose interests were not affected by the sale could not it was held apply under that section (m)

Under the present rule the application to set aside a sale of immovable property held in execution of a decree may be made by—

- (1) any person owning the property or
- (2) any person holding an interest in such property by virtue of a title acquired before the sale

Any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale—Under the old section the application to set aside a sale on deposit could be made by any person whose immovable property has been sold Under the present rule the application may be made by any person either owning such property or holding an interest therein by virtue of a title acquired before such sale There is no doubt that a judgment-debtor whose immovable property has been sold may apply under this rule as a person owning such property But what if the judgment debtor has transferred his interest in the property? Now a judgment debtor may transfer his interest in the property before the Court sale or he may do so after the Court sale Is he entitled after a transfer in either case to apply under this rule? Is the transferee from the judgment debtor entitled to apply under this rule? The cases give the following answers to these questions

First as regards transfers before Court sale—Under the old section there was a conflict of decisions whether if the judgment debtor had transferred his interest in the property before the Court sale the transferee could apply under that section to have the same set aside. In Srinivasa v Ayyathorai (n) for instance it was held that the transferee could apply while the contrary was held in Ramchandra v Rakhmabai (o). Under the present rule it is clear that a transferee acquiring title before the Court sale is competent to apply to have the sale set aside. Further it was held under the old section that a judgment debtor who had effected a private sale of his property subsequently to the attachment and prior to the Court sale was entitled to apply under that section to set aside the sale (p). This ruling is still good law (q).

Next as regards transfers after Court sale. A obtains a decree against J. In execution of the decree certain immovable property belonging to J is sold to C for Rs 166. After the sale to C but before its confirmation under r 92 J sells the property to P for Rs 500. It is clear that if J could apply under this rule to have the sale set aside on payment of the amount mentioned in the rule the pecuniary benefit to him would be great for while the property was sold at the Court sale for Rs 166 it fetched Rs 500 at the private sale. Is J the judgment debtor entitled to apply under this rule to have the sale set aside? Is P the purchaser at the private sale entitled to apply under this rule? It was at one time held by the Allahabad High Court (r) that neither the judgment debtor nor the subsequent purchaser was entitled to apply under this rule the reason for the decision being that the present rule gives the judgment debtor a last chance of saving the property for himself and that it was no part of the intention of the Legislature that the property should be saved for persons to whom it might be privately sold after the Court sale had taken place. The Madras High Court held in its early decision that the judgment debtor is not entitled to apply (s) but that the subsequent purchaser is entitled to apply (t). The ground of these decisions was that the judgment debtor having parted with his interest in the property before the application under this rule and so having no interest in the property at the date of the application he was not entitled to apply under this rule unless the sale to the subsequent purchaser was by an unregistered document in which case the judgment debtor would continue to be the owner of the property and could as such owner apply under this rule (u). On the other hand the High Court of Bombay held that the judgment debtor is entitled to apply under this rule but that the subsequent purchaser is not so entitled (v). The ground of the Bombay decision is that as the sale to the auction purchaser has not been confirmed the judgment debtor remains the owner of the property and that he is therefore entitled to apply as a person owning the property within the meaning of this rule. As regards the Allahabad decision the Bombay Court said that the object of the present rule was not only to preserve the property in the hands of the judgment debtor but also to save the judgment debtor from monetary loss that might be occasioned to him if the property was sold at the auction sale at an inadequate price. As regards the reasoning of the Madras High Court in its earlier decisions the Bombay Court observes that it was not necessary for the purposes of this rule that the judgment debtor should own or have an interest in the property at the date of the application under this rule and that it was sufficient if he owned the property or had an interest in it at the date of the Court sale. The High Court of Patna has followed the Bombay decision (w). In a recent case a Full Bench of the Madras High Court overruled its earlier decision and agreeing with the Bombay and Patna decisions held that the judgment debtor was entitled to apply but

89 that the subsequent purchaser was not entitled to apply under this rule (x) The Allahabad High Court also has overruled its earlier decisions and held that the judgment debtor can apply but not the purchaser (y) The High Court of Calcutta has held that the subsequent purchaser is not entitled to apply under this rule The reason given is that the interest if any which he held in the property was not by virtue of a title acquired by him before the execution sale and consequently he is excluded by the very terms of the rule ( ) Where two applications are made one by the judgment debtor and another by a mortgagee from him after the sale and each applicant deposits a portion of the aggregate amount required by this rule the deposits and the applications may be treated as made by the judgment debtor and therefore within this rule (a)

Miscellaneous cases—Under the old section it was held that a Mahomedan co heir was not entitled to apply to set aside the sale (b) This would seem to be the law under the present rule But it was held that a co sharer was entitled to apply (c) It is doubtful whether a co sharer is a person entitled to apply under this rule A coparcener in a joint and undivided Hindu family can apply for he has an interest in the whole of the property (d) It has been held under the old section that a durmukaridar can apply (e) The purchaser of a portion of a non transferable occupancy is entitled to apply although the landlord is the auction purchaser (f)

A person who has obtained a mortgage of the property before the Court sale may apply under this rule (g) So also a usufructuary mortgagee in possession (h) But a person who has merely agreed to purchase the property cannot apply under this rule for a mere agreement for sale of immovable property does not of itself create any interest in the property (i) Similarly a person who is out of possession of the property and is litigating to establish his right thereto is not entitled to apply under this rule (j) A lessee subject to whose interest the property is sold is entitled to apply under this rule (k)

Unsuccessful application to stop sale—The mere fact that the applicant had already unsuccessfully applied to stop the sale on payment of the decretal amount and had also put in a claim petition under r 58 above does not preclude him for applying under this rule (l)

Deposit without application—An application is necessary before the Court can act under this rule Mere deposit of the required amount is not enough (m) See notes below Limitation

Deposit of five per cent—The deposit of 5 per cent must be made even though the purchaser may be the decree holder The 5 per cent is intended as a compensation to the purchaser for his trouble and disappointment for the loss of that which was perhaps a good bargain (n)

Mistake in calculating amount to be deposited—No sale will be set aside under this rule unless the whole amount specified in sub r (1) is deposited by the applicant within thirty days from the date of sale. If the full amount is not deposited within the aforesaid period, even though the default was due to a mistake of an officer of the Court in calculating the amount, the sale cannot be set aside. But it will be set aside if the officer was charged by the Court to make the calculation and to inform the parties as to the amount to be deposited (o). See notes below. Limitation.

Less amount received by decree holder—The term received contemplates an actual receipt of the amount by the decree holder. A mere payment into Court of the sale proceeds does not constitute receipts within the meaning of this rule (p).

In determining what amount has been received by the decree holder the Court should not give credit to the judgment debtor for any amount paid by a co judgment debtor who has not joined in the application under this rule (q).

Failure to deposit full amount—Where a judgment debtor brought into Court not the amount for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, but only the amount realized by the sale plus five per cent with an undertaking to pay the balance, it was held that he had not complied with the provisions of this rule and the Court refused to set aside the sale (r). In a Pangoon case the deposit was one day late and a few rupees less than the full amount and the Court said that the small shortage did not vitiate the deposit but that the delay could not be excused (s).

Conditional deposit—A deposit under this rule must be unconditional (t).

For payment to the decree holder—Rateable distribution—The expression decree holder in sub sec (1) (b) refers only to the decree holder for satisfaction of whose decree the sale has been ordered. It does not include other decree holders who would have a right to claim rateable distribution out of the sale proceeds under sec 73. It is therefore enough if the judgment debtor deposits such amount as is sufficient to satisfy the claim of the decree holder at whose instance the property was sold. It is not necessary that the amount deposited by him should be sufficient to satisfy decrees held against him by other decree holders also (u). Again, when a judgment debtor deposits in Court a sum sufficient to satisfy the claim of the person for satisfaction of whose decree the property was ordered to be sold, the other decree holders are not entitled to a rateable distribution thereof under s 73 (i).

Sub rule (2)—Where a judgment debtor applies to set aside a sale under this rule and subsequently applies under r 90 also, he is not entitled to prosecute the application made by him under this rule (w). But the Court should in such a case put the judgment debtor to his election whether he would withdraw the application under r 90 and if he refuses to do so, it should dismiss the application made under this rule (x). An application, though purporting to be made under r 90, may not really be one under that rule, but one under s 47; the provisions of sub r (2) do not apply to such a case (y).

Court—The word Court in this rule means the Civil Court and not in the case of decrees transferred to the Collector for execution the Collector ( ). Hence an 39 application under this rule must be made to the Court and not to the Collector. If the judgment debtor applies to the Collector he cannot stop limitation running against him. It is the duty however of the Collector in such a case to return the application to the applicant and tell him that the application should be made to the Court (a). See notes Limitation below.

Sale of property by separate lots—Where property is sold in separate lots in execution of a decree it is not open to the judgment debtor to apply under this rule to set aside the sale of some only of such lots. The application must be to set aside the sale of all the lots (b).

Necessary parties—The auction purchaser as well as the decree holder are necessary parties to an application under this rule (c). See the proviso to r 92 sub r (2).

Limitation—The application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 106]. The Court has no power to extend the time under s 148 (d). The words date of sale means the date on which the property is put up for sale and knocked down to the highest bidder and not the date on which the sale is confirmed by the Court [r 92] (e). At the same time it is to be remembered that if for any reason the final bid remains unaccepted for some days by the sale officer the period of 30 days does not begin to run until such bid is accepted by him (f).

The words may apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court etc show that not only the application but also the deposit should be made within 30 days from the date of sale. It is not enough to make the application within 30 days (g). Nor is it enough to make the deposit within 30 days (h). Both the application and the deposit must be made within 30 days from the date of sale.

The law does not impose any period of limitation for the issue to the parties of notice of the deposit (i).

Appeal—The law as regards appeal from an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale passed on an application under the present rule is quite different from what it was under the Code of 1882. Such an order under the Code of 1882 [s 310A] was not appealable as an order for it was not included in the list of appealable orders given in s 539 of that Code [now O 43 r 1]. But the order being one made in proceeding in execution (j) it was appealable as a decree if the question as to whether the sale should be set aside or not was one between the parties to the suit or their representatives within the meaning of s 244 [now s 47] (k) and in such a case a second appeal also lay from the order passed in first appeal. And it was held that if the question was one between the judgment debtor and the decree holder in other words between the parties to the suit it did not cease to be so merely because the auction purchaser (not a party to the suit) was interested in the result (l). But where the question was one between a party to the suit on the one hand and the auction purchaser on the other there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an appeal lay from the order (m) In those cases however in which it was held that no appeal lay from the order it was held that the party aggrieved might apply to the High Court for a revison of the order (n) Under the present Code however an order setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [r 92] passed on an application under this rule [r 89] is appealable as an order for it is included in the list of appealable orders given in O 43 r 1 [see cl (j)] The result is that under the present Code only one appeal lies from such an order (o) [see s 104 sub s (1) (i) and sub s (2)] An auction purchaser also can now appeal from an order under this rule Only one appeal is allowed in his case also (p)

Dismissal of application for default—Where an application under this rule is dismissed for default of appearance and the Court refuses to restore it to the file no appeal lies from the order refusing to restore the application (q)

Revision—The High Courts of Patna (r) and Madras (s) have held that the High Court can interfere in revision if an application under this rule has been dismissed on the ground that it was made by a person who was not entitled to apply the reason given being that the decision in such a case is the very foundation of jurisdiction and that the action of the lower Court in refusing to deal with the application in such a case amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction within the meaning of s 115 On the other hand the Allahabad High Court has held that no revision lies in such a case the reason given being that the Court has jurisdiction to decide whether or not the applicant was entitled to apply to set aside the sale and a decision arrived at in the exercise of jurisdiction though wrong is no ground for interference in revision (t)

No revision lies from a decision that an application under this rule was made within time (u)

- 2 The words any person whose interests are affected by the sale have been substituted for the words any person whose immovable property has been sold under this chapter. The expression now substituted is what the Courts held in several cases was the meaning of the expression any person whose immovable property has been sold. See notes below. Who may apply under this rule.
- 3 The words or fraud have been added after the word irregularity. The addition of these words affects the right of appeal as will be seen from the notes below under the head Fraud in publishing or conducting sale.
- 4 The word unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied have been substituted for the words unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court. This alteration has been made with a view to set at rest the doubts raised under the old section as to the evidence upon which the Court could act. See notes below. Unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied etc.

Who may apply under this rule—The only persons that may apply under this rule are—

- (1) the decree holder
- (2) any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets under s 73
- (3) any person whose interests are affected by the sale—an expression obviously of a wider import than the expression a person holding an interest in the property sold used in r 89 above (1)

The words any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets did not occur in the old section but it was held that the expression decree holder included such person (u)

The expression any person whose interests are affected by the sale has been substituted for the expression any person whose immovable property has been sold which occurred in the old section. The latter expression was construed as meaning any person whose interests are affected by the sale in the Full Bench case of Ammu Sunnissa Begum v Ashruff Ali (x) and this interpretation has now been substituted for the original expression. Where an application therefore is made by a person other than a decree holder or one entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets such person must be one whose interests are affected by the sale. It cannot be said of a person claiming by title paramount to the judgment debtor that his interests would be affected by the sale inasmuch as his title to the property cannot be effected by the sale whether it were regular or irregular. Hence a person who claims to be a purchaser of immovable property from the judgment debtor prior to the attachment cannot apply under this rule for the sale being prior to the attachment his interest cannot be legally affected by the sale (y). It has similarly been held that where joint Hindu family property is sold in execution of a decree against a member of the joint family another member claiming the whole property on the death of the judgment debtor by survivorship is not entitled to apply under this rule (z). A co-sharer cannot apply under this rule for his share does not pass under the sale (a). But a reversioner entitled to succeed on the death of a

Hindu widow has been held to be entitled to apply under this rule (b) A person who claims to be the purchaser of a tenure prior to attachment from the judgment debtor whose interest in the tenure has been sold in execution of a decree for its own arrears of rent is entitled to apply under this rule for his interests are affected by the sale (c) Where immovable property has been sold in execution of a decree against the ostensible owner as his property a person claiming to be the beneficial owner is entitled to apply under this rule (d) unless his right to the property is in dispute and a suit by him for a declaration of his right is still pending at the date of the application (e)

It has been recently held by the High Court of Calcutta that the expression persons whose interests are affected by the sale is not limited to persons whose proprietary or possessory title is affected by the sale and that it includes persons whose pecuniary interest is affected by the sale Hence it has been held that a decree holder who has attached the property of the judgment debtor in execution of his decree has such interest as would entitle him to apply under this rule to set aside a sale of the property held in execution of a decree obtained by another creditor (f) But a plaintiff who has obtained an attachment before judgment is not entitled to apply under this rule (g)

Auction purchaser—In a case under s 311 of the Code of 1882 their Lordships of the Privy Council held that an auction purchaser was not entitled to apply under that section as he was not a person whose immovable property has been sold within the meaning of that section (h) There is a conflict of opinion whether an auction purchaser is entitled to apply to have the sale set aside under the present rule He is so entitled if he is a person whose interests are affected by the sale within the meaning of this rule The High Court of Madras has held that he is entitled to apply under this rule The Court said If an auction purchaser's interests are affected by an order setting aside the sale it is difficult to see why his interests are not also affected by the sale (i) The High Court of Patna has dissented from this view and held that an auction purchaser is not entitled to apply under this rule In the view taken by that Court the expression interests affected by the sale means interests in the property existing before the sale (j) The Allahabad High Court has declined to follow the Patna decisions and has held that an auction purchaser is entitled to apply under this rule The Court said In the ordinary use of the word [ interests ] in the English language it is a term covering every sort of interest recognized by law such as in the case of an auction purchaser liability to pay the money liability to complete and take a transfer of the property, and from his own point of view the necessity of finding the necessary funds and also the necessity of carrying through to fruition the provisional contract into which he has entered If the expression were interests in the property it would of course be confined to an interest in the property sold antecedent to the sale If the word were merely interest without the plural and without the words in the property it might be possible to hold that the word interest was confined to interest in the thing itself at the time of the sale But that is not the expression (k) The High Court of Rangoon has held that an auction purchaser is not entitled to apply under this rule (l)

Persons entitled to rateable distribution—It is expressly provided by this rule that a person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets under s 73 is entitled to apply under this rule. Hence a person who is not entitled to a rateable distribution as where the application for execution is not made until after the receipt of assets by the Court cannot come in under this rule as a person whose interests are affected by the sale. (m)

Conditions of applicability of the rule—A sale held in execution of a decree can be set aside under this rule only if the following conditions concur—

- 1 There must be a material irregularity or fraud
- 2 The material irregularity or fraud must be in publishing or conducting the sale
- 3 The applicant must have sustained substantial injury
- 4 Such injury must have been caused by reason of the material irregularity or fraud

Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale—The following are instances of material irregularity in publishing or conducting a sale in execution—

- 1 Service of notice under O 21 r 22 upon a wrong person as legal representative see notes to O 21 r 22. Notice to wrong person as legal representative
- 1A Omission to specify in the proclamation of sale the extent of the property to be sold or the revenue assessed on it (n) or the amount of income derived from it or the incumbrances to which the property is subject (o). But it has been held that where a sale is held at an earlier hour than that stated in the proclamation (p) or at a place different from that specified in the proclamation (q) the case is not merely one of material irregularity within the meaning of this rule but that the sale is void altogether. See r 66 of this Order
- 2 Misstatement of the value of the property or of Government revenue in the proclamation of sale such as is calculated to mislead intending bidders (r). See r 60 of this Order
- 3 Omission to affix a copy of the sale proclamation as required by r 67 of this Order (s)
- 4 Omission to have a drum beaten as required by r 67 of this Order read with r 54 (t)
- 5 Holding a sale of immovable property before the expiration of 30 days from the date on which the copy of the proclamation has been affixed on the Court house of the Judge ordering the sale (u). See r 68 of this Order
- 6 Non specification of the hour to which a sale is adjourned (v). See r 69 of this Order

6A Holding a sale on a day other than the one to which it is adjourned (w) O 2
See r 69 of this Order

7 Omission to issue a fresh proclamation where a sale is adjourned (x) unless the proclamation has been waived (y) Where a sale proclamation had been issued at the instance of the judgment debtor six times and a fresh proclamation was subsequently issued notifying that in the absence of any order of postponement the sale would be held at the monthly sales commencing on 13th July 1903 at Monghyr but the monthly sales did not begin until 17th July owing to the absence of the presiding officer from the station and the sale in question was held on 20th July in the course of the monthly sales without a fresh proclamation their Lordships of the Privy Council expressed the opinion that in holding the sale on 20th July the Court did not act in contravention of the provisions of the Code and that there was no irregularity in publishing the sale and held that assuming there was irregularity there was no evidence of substantial injury and that the sale was therefore valid ( ) See r 69 of this Order

8 Default in payment of the deposit of 25 per cent as required by r 84 of this Order (a) See notes to r 84

8A Extending time for payment of purchase money (b) See notes to r 85

9 Omission on the part of the plaintiff to have a guardian ad litem appointed of a defendant where after decree but before sale the defendant has been adjudged to be of unsound mind (c) See O 32 r 15

10 In a case that went to Privy Council the following irregularities occurred (1) property belonging to a judgment debtor was attached and the judgment debtor died pending the attachment leaving a widow and a minor son but no notice of the subsequent proceedings in attachment was served on any person representing the minor (2) though the property consisted of 109 mouzahs the proclamation of sale was read out without beat of drum in one only of the mouzahs and affixed to a tree in that village and (3) the proclamation did not specify the encumbrances to which the property was liable but stated merely the annual profit income and the value of the property with the result that the property was sold at a gross undervaluation Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the above irregularities were all material irregularities and they accordingly set aside the sale (d)

It is to be noted in this connection that if the act or omission complained of amounts to a material irregularity the sale is not void but voidable. Being voidable it is liable to be set aside under this rule on the application of any of the persons mentioned in the rule but it cannot be set aside unless it is proved that substantial injury has resulted from the irregularity see the proviso to the rule. But where the act or omission complained of amounts to an illegality it renders the sale void ab initio and no proof of injury is required. In cases (3) (5) (b) and (9) above it was contended that the omission complained of amounted to an illegality and that the sale was therefore void ab initio and that it should therefore be declared void without proof

r 90 of substantial injury. But it was held that the omission amounted to a material irregularity only and that the sale was not void but voidable only and it could not therefore be set aside unless substantial injury was proved. For instances of sales void ab initio see notes to a Good Sale, when void and when voidable. See also notes to O 21 r 22. Omission to give notice and Notice to wrong person as legal representative.

No material irregularity—No notice of a sale need be given to a receiver who is not in possession of the property sold. A sale therefore without notice to him is not irregular (c)

Publishing or conducting the sale.—Where property not covered by the decree has been proclaimed and sold the case is one of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule (f). So is an irregular preparation of the proclamation of sale (g).

The expression conducting the sale refers only to the action of the officer who holds the sale. The expression does not apply to anything done antecedent to the order of sale (A)

Omission to attach property before sale—The question whether an irregularity in attaching the property as where the attachment is not properly notified effects the sale or is merely an irregularity in conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule was left open by the Judicial Committee in the undermentioned case (i) in Mahadeo v Bhola Nath (j) a full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad held that regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple decrees for money and when there has been no such attachment the sale is not merely voidable but void. In a later case (k) however the same High Court held that the omission to attach immovable property prior to sale amounted to a material irregularity in conducting the sale within the meaning of this rule. An attachment it was said is a step towards the sale of the judgment debtor's property. As to Mahadeo's case the Court said that it could no longer be treated as good law since the decision of the Privy Council in Tasaddul v Ahmad (l) where it was held with reference to a proclamation of sale issued in violation of the provisions of O 21 r 68 that it was nothing more than a material irregularity and did not ipso facto vitiate the sale. On the other hand in a case decided under the Code of 18 0 the High Court of Calcutta expressed the opinion that an attachment is not an essential preliminary in sales in execution of decrees it is merely a measure for the protection of the decree holder and the purchaser of the property and the absence of attachment is not therefore an objection which the judgment debtor is competent to raise (m). This view was adopted by the same High Court in later cases where it was held that after a sale had been confirmed the sale was not to be considered a nullity merely by reason of the absence of attachment (n). The same High Court has held that where an objection that the property proclaimed for sale has not been attached is taken before the sale it is the duty of the Court not to proceed with the sale and to direct an attachment (o). In the more recent case of Tanchan v Kuma (p) decided in 1917 the High Court of Calcutta held that the Court had no jurisdiction to sell property in execution which had not been duly attached and that omission to attach rendered the sale void ipso facto. This decision it is submitted is not good law. In a Bombay case where the property was sold without previous attachment the sale was set aside the case being treated as one under s 47 (g). The High Court of Pangoon has held that though the absence of attachment is an irregularity it does not render the sale absolutely void but merely voidable and further that the objection as to the absence of attachment does not come within this rule but within s 47 the substantial question involved being one of notice to the judgment debtor (r). The High Court of Patna has taken the same view as was taken in the earlier Calcutta decisions and refused to follow the decision in Parchanaz case. In the Patna case the application to set aside the rule was made before the sale was confirmed while in the Calcutta cases the application was made after the sale was confirmed. As to this the Patna Court said that it did not make any difference because if the sale was in fact a nullity by reason of the absence of attachment its subsequent confirmation could not make it valid (s). The High Court of Madras has held that a sale without an attachment is an irregularity within this rule (t).

Fraud in publishing or conducting sale—The words or fraud are new. The present rule requires that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale should be made under this rule. In the absence of these words in the corresponding s 311 of the Code of 1882 it was held that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud could only be made under s 244 [now s 47]. Had it not been for the newly added words or fraud in this rule such applications would have to be made under s 47 of this Code. The result would then have been as under the Code of 1882 that a second appeal would lie from an order made on such application for an order made under s 47 has the force of a decree (s 2) and every decree is open to second appeal subject of course to the provisions of ss 100 102 (u). The effect of adding the words or fraud into the present rule is to transfer applications setting up fraud in publishing or conducting the sale from s 47 to the present rule. The result is that no second appeal will now lie from an order made on such application whether the order be one setting aside the sale or refusing to set aside the sale for the order is no longer one under s 47 but one under r 92 and only one appeal lies from an order made under r 92 (v) [see O 43 r 1 cl (j) and s 104 sub s (2)]. It will thus be seen that the object of the Legislature in requiring applications to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale to be made under the present rule instead of under s 47 is to exclude the right of second appeal from orders made on such applications with a view to bring proceedings on such applications to a speedy termination. But though only one appeal is allowed an appeal now lies in every case from an order made under this rule and r 92 even at the instance of an auction purchaser though he may not be a party to the suit in which the sale was held. See notes to s 7 Execution purchaser ill (1), p 159.

It may here be observed that in a large majority of reported cases in which applications were made to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale the applicant was the judgment debtor and the fraud alleged was that the decree holder had fraudulently kept him in the dark by omitting to serve him with the writ of attachment (r 54) and that no copy of the proclamation of sale was affixed on the 10 property so as to inform him of the execution proceeding. In all these cases it was also alleged that the fraud first became known to the judgment debtor when the auction purchaser instituted proceedings to recover possession of the property. In some of these cases again the auction purchaser was charged with collusion with the decree holder in perpetrating the fraud upon the judgment debtor (w). The observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Lalla Bunsseedhur v. Koonwar Bindeesree (x) have a material bearing on the question now under consideration (y). In that case their Lordships said that where a sale is impeached on the ground of fraud a difference must be made between an innocent purchaser and one tainted by the fraud which has brought about the execution sale. The question is in the former case which of two innocent parties shall suffer in the latter whether he who has wronged the other party shall be allowed to enjoy the fruits of his wrong doing. A Court exercising equitable jurisdiction may withhold its hand in the one case and yet set aside the sale with or without terms in the other.

A charge against a decree holder that he and those who acted in concert with him have acted in such a manner as to prevent the best price from being obtained does not of itself amount to a charge of fraud within the meaning of this rule. A obtains a decree against B and obtains leave to bid at the auction sale. A then enters into an agreement with a third person that if that person would not bid at the sale A would sell the property to him if A should become the purchaser. The property is put up for sale and purchased by A. The agreement does not constitute a fraud within the meaning of this rule though it may have discouraged competition at the auction ( ). In a recent case Sir Lawrence Jenkins CJ said. The word fraud is very loosely used in this class of cases that is cases under r 90. any irregularity is taken to be fraud with the consequences that such a finding involves. But a finding of fraud should be reserved for that which is dishonest and morally wrong and it is not sufficient to come to a verdict finding of fraud. actual fraud must be established. (a) The Patna High Court has recently held that where after the publication of the sale proclamation the decree holder agrees with the judgment debtor not to hold the sale if payment was made within a specified time and he then proceeds to sell the property in contravention of the agreement at amounts to fraud in the matter of the conduct of the sale within the meaning of this rule (b).

In a recent case (c) their Lordships of the Privy Council said "Charges of fraud and collusion—must no doubt be proved by those who make them—proved by established facts or inferences legitimately drawn from those facts taken together as a whole. Suspicion and surmises and conjecture are not permissible substitutes for those facts or those inferences but that by no means requires that every puzzling artifice or contrivance resorted to by one accused of fraud must necessarily be completely unravelled and cleared up and made plain before the verdict can be properly found against him. If this were not so many a clever and dexterous knave would escape."

Substantial injury Material irregularity or fraud standing by itself is no ground for setting aside a sale. There must be substantial injury occasioned by the irregularity or fraud. If the Court fails to find both irregularity and injury occasioned thereby it is bound to dismiss the application. In other words if there be material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale but no substantial loss is occasioned by the irregularity or fraud the applicant is not entitled to have the sale set aside (d). The substantial injury alleged by the applicant must be proved; it cannot be assumed from the mere fact that there was a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale. The mere fact that there was a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale will not justify the Court in assuming that substantial injury has thereby been caused. Hence although an applicant under this rule may prove material irregularity such as non specification of Government revenue in the proclamation of sale (e) or inadequate description of the property sold (f) or the holding of the sale before the expiry of the period prescribed by r 68 above (g) the sale will not be set aside unless it is proved that had it not been for the irregularity the property would have realized a substantially larger price than what it did at the sale. The same rule applies where the sale is impeached on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale.

Unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud — These words form part of the proviso to the rule. The language of the proviso to this rule differs from the language of the proviso to the corresponding section 311 of the Code of 1882 which was as follows —

But no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity.

The words unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied have been substituted for the words unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court. The object and effect of these alterations will now be explained.

If an applicant under this rule proves material irregularity or fraud and if he also proves gross inadequacy of price realised at the sale in other words if he proves substantial injury — is this sufficient to entitle him to succeed under this rule? The answer is that it is not. He must also prove that the inadequacy of the price has been caused by reason of the material irregularity or fraud. Now there are two possible modes in which this may be proved namely —

- (a) by direct evidence that is by evidence connecting the material irregularity or fraud with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect or
- (b) by circumstantial evidence that is by evidence of circumstances which will warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference that the inadequacy of price was the result of the irregularity or fraud complained of.

In Tasadduk v. Ahmad (1) where a sale was sought to be set aside under the corresponding s 311 of the Code of 1882 on the ground that it was held before the expiration of 30 days from the date of the proclamation (r 68) their Lordships of the Privy Council after referring to that section said —

In the application of that section [that is s 311] it was incumbent on the [applicants] to have proved that they sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity. They gave no such evidence and it would be extremely improbable that injury could have happened from the non compliance with the strict letter of s 290 [now r 68] Their Lordships cannot accept the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner that loss is to be inferred from the mere fact that a sale was held without full compliance with the provisions of s 290 [now r 68] The section [that is s 311] clearly contemplates direct evidence on the subject

Relying on the above passage the High Court of Allahabad held that to succeed under that section the applicant must prove that the inadequacy in the sale price was the result of a material irregularity and that the co existence of an irregularity and an inadequacy however gross in the sale price was not sufficient in the absence of direct evidence to establish a casual connection between the one and the other In other words the applicant must connect the irregularity with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect by means of direct evidence (1) On the other hand it was held by the High Courts of Madras (2) and Calcutta (3) that the fact that the inadequacy of price fetched at the sale was the result of the irregularity complained of might be established either by direct evidence or might be inferred when such inference was reasonable having regard to the nature of the irregularity and the extent of the inadequacy As regards the words direct evidence the High Court of Calcutta said that their Lordships meant by that expression that there must be evidence showing that substantial injury was the necessary result of the irregularity complained of (4)

The distinction between the Allahabad decisions on the one hand and the Madras and Calcutta decisions on the other may be explained by an illustration In execution of a decree obtained by A against B B's one fourth share in certain property is sold for Rs 200 B seeks to set aside the sale alleging that the property was sold at an adjourned sale that no hour was fixed for the sale as required by r 60 that consequently there were only three bidders at the sale and that owing to that circumstance the property fetched the grossly inadequate price of Rs 200 It is proved that the hour to which the sale was adjourned was not fixed in other words material irregularity is proved Substantial injury is also proved by evidence of the sale of a share smaller than one fourth of the same property for Rs 4000 The fact that there were only three bidders is also proved In such a case the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta would under the old section set aside the sale on the ground that the paucity of bidders could reasonably be ascribed to the non specification of the hour and the low price could reasonably be inferred from the fact of the paucity of bidders (5) The High Court of Allahabad however would not set aside the sale on such an inference That Court would require direct evidence to show that the paucity of bidders was due to the non specification of the hour and that the inadequacy of price was due to paucity of bidders

The words unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied have been substituted in the proviso to give effect to the Madras and Calcutta decisions What is necessary under the proviso is that the Court should be satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of the irregularity or fraud complained of and if the facts proved do so satisfy the Court that is sufficient It is no longer necessary to connect the irregularity or fraud with the inadequacy of price as cause and effect by means of direct evidence The result is that a sale will be set aside under the present rule if there be either direct evidence connecting the irregularity with the inadequacy of price or evidence of circumstances which will warrant the necessary or at least reasonable inference that the inadequacy was the result of the irregularity complained of and the

Allahabad High Court now follows this rule (n) If there be no such evidence the sale must be confirmed (o)

The mere fact that the property realised at the auction sale only one half of the value entered in the proclamation of sale is no ground for setting aside the sale under this rule (p)

Necessary parties—The decree holder is a necessary party to an application under this rule (q) Under the Code of 1882 there was a conflict of opinion whether an auction purchaser was a necessary party to an application under the corresponding s 311 (r) Under the present Code he is clearly a necessary party see the proviso to r 9 sub r (2) Where property is bought at a Court sale by A in the name of B A the beneficial owner is not a necessary party to an application under this rule Hence if an order is made setting aside the sale in a proceeding to which B was a party it will bind A though A was not joined as a party to the proceeding (s)

Bona fide purchaser for value without notice—If the conditions of this rule are satisfied the sale will be set aside though the purchaser may be a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale (t)

Waiver and estoppel—If the judgment debtor knowing of an irregularity or fraud lies by and allows the sale to proceed without objection he will be estopped from impeaching the sale on the ground of irregularity or fraud though substantial injury has been caused In Arunachellam v Arunachellam (u) their Lordships of the Privy Council said It would be very difficult indeed to conduct proceedings in execution of decrees by attachment and sale of property if the judgment debtors could lie by and afterwards take advantage of any misdescription of the property attached and about to be sold which they knew well but of which the execution creditor or decree holder might be perfectly ignorant that they should take no notice of that allow the sale to proceed and then come forward and say the whole proceedings were vitiated In Girdhari Singh v Hurdeo Narain (v) the notification of sale had stated the Government revenue to be Rs 3 146 instead of Rs 8 146 the sale being fixed for the 5th of August 1872 The judgment debtor applied for a postponement of sale and stated that he wished to raise money to pay off the decree holder and in his petition he added Under such circumstances it is prayed that a postponement of one month be granted the attachment and the notification of sale being maintained Upon that petition the sale was postponed for one month without the issue of a second notification The decretal amount not having been paid the property was put up for sale The judgment debtor applied to set aside the sale on the ground that the Government revenue was not correctly stated and that the property therefore fetched a very low price Upon these facts their Lordships of the Privy Council held that though the misstatement of the Government revenue amounted to a material irregularity in publishing the sale

the judgment debtor was not entitled to have the sale set aside as the petition amounted to an admission on his part that the notification was correct or that at any rate there was no such mistake or irregularity as would be likely to mislead. But it is different where an application for a postponement of sale does not contain any such admission and moreover it is refused. In such a case there is no estoppel (w). The objection as to irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale cannot be taken for the first time in the Court of appeal (x) but it may be so taken if no fresh evidence is necessary (y).

Where no application is made under this rule—If no application is made to set aside a sale under the present rule an order will be made confirming the sale see r 92 below.

Questions outside the scope of this rule—The question whether the decree in execution whereof the property was sold was obtained without service of summons on the judgment debtor (z) or whether the decree was obtained by fraud (a) or whether the Court had jurisdiction to sell the property (b) or whether the sale was brought about by the fraud of the decree holder the auction purchaser and others (c) is outside the scope of this rule. See note below application to set aside sale on other grounds.

Objections not raised in the application—The Court should not under this rule consider objections not expressly taken in the application (d).

Compromise of proceedings under this rule—It has been held by the Patna High Court that a proceeding to set aside a sale under this rule is not a proceeding in execution within the meaning of O 23 r 4 but that it is a proceeding in the suit itself. A compromise therefore of proceedings under this rule may be recorded under O 23 r 3 (e). But this decision is of doubtful authority.

Whether O 9 applies to applications under this rule—The provisions of O 9 do not apply to proceedings in execution and therefore do not apply to an application under this rule (f). See notes to O 9 r 9 and O 9 r 13. Whether this rule applies to proceedings in execution. See also notes below Appeal.

Suit to set aside sale on ground of material irregularity—Where an application made by a judgment debtor under this rule to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale is disallowed and the sale is confirmed under r 92 (1) he is precluded by virtue of the provisions of r 92 (3) from bringing a suit to set aside the sale on the same grounds (g). But this rule does not apply in the case of revenue sales in Madras (h).

Limitation—An application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 166]. But where the irregularity affecting the sale has by the fraud of the decree holder or other parties to the sale been kept concealed from the judgment debtor he is entitled to apply under this rule whether the sale has been confirmed or not and the time for making the application is to be computed from the date when the fraud first became known to him (i)

The point of distinction as regards limitation between the old law and the new law is this that while under the Code of 1882 the application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting a sale had to be made under s 244 (now s 47) and the period of limitation for the application was 3 years from the date of sale (j) such application must now be made under the present rule and the period of limitation is 30 days from the date of sale See notes below Application to set aside sale on other grounds

Application to set aside sale on other grounds—When the auction purchaser is the decree holder himself and when an application is made to set aside the sale on a ground other than that covered by the present rule and no application has been made under r 89 the case falls within s 47 and hence there is a second appeal (k) Similarly where a judgment debtor applies to have a sale set aside not only on the ground of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale but also on the ground that no notice of the application for attachment and sale was given as required by O 21 r 22 the case falls within s 47 and hence there is a second appeal (l) Neither this rule nor r 92 applies to such cases It must however be noted that where an application really comes under the present rule, the mere mention of s 47 in the application will not make it an application under s 47 for the purposes either of an appeal or of limitation (m) See note above Question outside the scope of this rule

Joinder of claim under this rule with claim under sec 47—A claim to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity under this rule may be combined with a claim for a declaration that the sale is a nullity as the decree was passed after the death of the judgment debtor (n)

Whether sale can be challenged by way of defence in a suit for possession—See notes to r 92 below under the same head

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule and rule 92 setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [O 43 r 1 cl (j)] But no second appeal lies from the order of the first appellate Court (o) See s 104 subsec (2) and notes above Fraud in publishing or conducting sale Nor does an appeal lie under the Letters Patent from the order of the first appellate Court (p) See notes above Application to set aside sale on other grounds

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that an appeal lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default the reason given being that the effect of such an order is to confirm the sale under r 92 (q) A fortiori it is so if the order dismissing the application for return of the original application on the file also confirms the sale (r) These decisions were doubted in a later case (s) which held that the judgment debtor was not entitled to have the sale set aside as the petition amounted to an admission on his part that the notification was correct or that at any rate there was no such mistake or irregularity as would be likely to mislead. But it is different where an application for a postponement of sale does not contain any such admission and moreover it is refused. In such a case there is no estoppel (w). The objection as to irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale cannot be taken for the first time in the Court of appeal (x) but it may be so taken if no fresh evidence is necessary (y).

Where no application is made under this rule.—If no application is made to set aside a sale under the present rule an order will be made confirming the sale see r 92 below.

Questions outside the scope of this rule.—The question whether the decree in execution whereof the property was sold was obtained without service of summons on the judgment debtor ( ) or whether the decree was obtained by fraud (a) or whether the Court had jurisdiction to sell the property (b) or whether the sale was brought about by the fraud of the decree holder the auction purchaser and others (c) is outside the scope of this rule. See note below application to set aside sale on other grounds.

Objections not raised in the application.—The Court should not under this rule consider objections not expressly taken in the application (d).

Compromise of proceedings under this rule.—It has been held by the Patna High Court that a proceeding to set aside a sale under this rule is not a proceeding in execution within the meaning of O 23 r 4 but that it is a proceeding in the suit itself. A compromise therefore of proceedings under this rule may be recorded under O 23 r 3 (e). But this decision is of doubtful authority.

Whether O 9 applies to applications under this rule.—The provisions of O 9 do not apply to proceeding in execution and therefore do not apply to an application under this rule (f). See notes to O 9 r 9 and O 9 r 13. Whether this rule applies to proceedings in execution. See also notes below Appeal.

Suit to set aside sale on ground of material irregularity.—Where an application made by a judgment debtor under this rule to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale is disallowed and the sale is confirmed under r 92 (1) he is precluded by virtue of the provisions of r 92 (3) from bringing a suit to set aside the sale on the same grounds (g). But this rule does not apply in the case of revenue sales in Madras (h).

Limitation.—An application under this rule must be made within 30 days from the date of sale [Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 166]. But where the irregularity affecting the sale has by the fraud of the decree holder or other parties to the sale been kept concealed from the judgment debtor he is entitled to apply under this rule whether the sale has been confirmed or not and the time for making the application is to be computed from the date when the fraud first became known to him (i)

The point of distinction as regards limitation between the old law and the new law is this that while under the Code of 1852 the application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting a sale had to be made under s 244 [now s 47] and the period of limitation for the application was 3 years from the date of sale (j) such application must now be made under the present rule and the period of limitation is 30 days from the date of sale See notes below Application to set aside sale on other grounds

Application to set aside sale on other grounds—When the auction purchaser is the decree holder himself and when an application is made to set aside the sale on a ground other than that covered by the present rule and no application has been made under r 89 the case falls within 47 and hence there is a second appeal (k) Similarly where a judgment debtor applies to have a sale set aside not only on the ground of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale but also on the ground that no notice of the application for attachment and sale was given as required by O 21 r 22 the case falls within s 47 and hence there is a second appeal (l) Neither this rule nor r 92 applies to such cases It must however be noted that where an application really comes under the present rule the mere mention of s 47 in the application will not make it an application under s 47 for the purposes either of an appeal or of limitation (m) See note above Question outside the scope of this rule

Joinder of claim under this rule with claim under sec 47—A claim to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity under this rule may be combined with a claim for a declaration that the sale is a nullity as the decree was passed after the death of the judgment debtor (n)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule and rule 92 setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale [O 43 r 1 cl (j)] But no second appeal lies from the order of the first appellate Court (o) See s 104 subsec (2) and notes above Fraud in publishing or conducting sale Nor does an appeal lie under the Letters Patent from the order of the first appellate Court (p) See notes above Application to set aside sale on other grounds

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that an appeal lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default the reason given being that the effect of such an order is to confirm the sale under r 92 (q) fortiori it is so if the order dismissing the application for restoring the original application on the file also confirms the sale (r) The decisions were doubted in a later case (s) which held that an order of dismissal by default is not a confirmation of the sale and does not preclude the party from making a fresh application while a dismissal on the merits or when the applicant does not appear and the opposite party does appear is appealable under O 43 r 1 (j). The case last cited was dissented from by the same High Court in Anwarali v Bhim Sanhar (t) where it was held that an appeal lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default where such dismissal is for the non appearance of the applicant or for non appearance of both the parties and even when no formal order is recorded under r 92 confirming the sale.

Revision—No revision lies from an order dismissing an application under this rule for default (u). See notes above. Appeal

Appeal to Privy Council—See notes to r 92 under the same head.

91 [S 313] The purchaser at any such sale in execution of a decree may apply to the Court to set aside the sale, on the ground that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold.

Application by purchaser to set aside sale on ground of judgment debtor having no saleable interest

Application to set aside sale—This rule enables the auction purchaser to proceed by an application to set aside the sale where the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property. It does not apply where a sale is sought to be set aside by an auction purchaser on the ground that he had been induced by misrepresentation or concealment to buy the property for more than its real value (t). The remedy of the purchaser in such a case is by a regular suit. As to refund of purchase money when a sale is set aside on the ground that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest see r 83 below. In two recent Madras cases a decree holder brought to sale and purchased property which did not belong to the judgment debtor and notified satisfaction of his decree. On discovering his mistake he filed a fresh execution application but the Court held that he could not execute again without first setting aside the sale under this rule (w).

No saleable interest—This rule applies only where a judgment debtor has no saleable interest at all. Hence the rule does not apply if the judgment debtor has even a partial interest in the property sold (x) however small that interest may be. In other words a purchaser is not entitled to have a sale set aside under this rule on the ground that the judgment debtor had a saleable interest in a very small portion of the property and had no saleable interest in the major portion of the property (y). For the purposes of this rule a mortgagor has a saleable interest in the mortgaged property even though a decree has been obtained by the mortgagee for the enforcement of the mortgage (z) and although the amount due under the mortgage exceeds the value of the property (a).

The decision that a sale cannot be set aside under this rule if the judgment debtor has any interest in the property does not apply to a sale under a mortgage decree held under the rules of the Calcutta High Court and the conditions of sale framed thereunder. Therefore a purchaser under such a sale is entitled to have it set aside if the property

Withdrawal of purchase money by auction purchaser from Court—See notes to s 151 case (bb)

Compensation for loss of part of property bought at a Court sale—A purchaser who is deprived of a part of the property bought at a Court sale is not entitled to compensation as against the judgment debtor for the loss of that part The principle is that apart from the case provided for by this rule and apart from fraud a purchaser at an auction sale must abide by his bargain What is sold and bought is the right title and interest of the judgment debtor in the property The Court which sells the property does not guarantee the title and the maxim Caveat emptor applies It does not make any difference that the property was sold in execution of a mortgage decree and the mortgagee himself is the purchaser (c) See notes to r 94 below What passes at a Court sale

92 [ss 312, 314] (1) Where no application is made under rule 89, rule 90 or rule 91, or where such application is made and disallowed, the Court shall make an order confirming the sale, and thereupon the sale shall become absolute

(2) Where such application is made and allowed, and where, in the case of an application under rule 89, the deposit required by that rule is made within thirty days from the date of sale, the Court shall make an order setting aside the sale

Provided that no order shall be made unless notice of the application has been given to all persons affected thereby

(3) No suit to set aside an order made under this rule shall be brought by any person against whom such order is made

Alterations in the rule —

- 1 The corresponding s 312 of the Code of 1882 applied only to application referred to in r 90 The present rule applies also to applications referred to in rr 89 and 91 [Code of 1882 ss 310A and 313] see sub r (1)
- 2 In sub r (1) the words as regards the parties to the suit which occurred in s 312 after the words confirming the sale have been omitted.
- 3 In sub rule (3) the words on the ground of such irregularity which occurred in the old section after the words no suit to set aside have been omitted

2. No suit will lie to set aside an order made under this rule—
No suit will lie to set aside an order made under this rule by any person against whom such order is made. The only remedy of the party against whom the order is made is to appeal from the order under O 43 r 1 cl (j). Now an order under this rule may be—

- (1) either an order confirming the sale or
- (2) an order setting aside the sale

Order confirming the sale—An order confirming the sale may be made—

- (a) either where no application is made at all to set aside the sale or
- (u) where an application is made and is allowed

No suit will lie in either case to set aside an order confirming the sale (d)

Order setting aside the sale—The language of sub rule (3) makes it clear that no suit will be to set aside an order setting aside a sale made on an application under rule 89 90 or 91 (e). The party against whom the order is made has a remedy by way of appeal under O 43 r 1 cl (j).

The suits barred under sub rule (3) are suits to set aside (1) an order confirming a sale under sub rule (1) and (2) an order setting aside a sale under sub rule (2). Sub rule (3) refers to applications under rr 89 90 and 91. A suit by an auction purchaser for a return of the purchase money on the ground that the judgment debtor has no saleable interest in the property sold is barred under sub rule (3) for the case is within r 91 above see notes to r 93. Suit for a return of purchase money where no saleable interest. But a sale by a judgment debtor to recover property sold in execution of a mortgage decree which was neither included in the mortgage nor in the decree but which found its way into the certificate of sale in some unexplained manner is not barred by sub rule (3) such a case is not one of material irregularity within r 90 nor does it fall under r 89 or r 91 above (f). A person claiming title to a property attached and sold by the Insolvency Court as belonging to the insolvent is entitled to bring a suit to establish his title to the property though his claim has been disallowed by the Insolvency Court. The present rule is no bar to such a suit (g).

Whether an execution sale can be challenged by way of defence in a suit for possession—Where a judgment debtor does not question the validity of a sale under r 90 above and a suit is brought by the auction purchaser against him for possession it is not competent to him to challenge the sale in that suit. The penalty imposed upon a negligent judgment debtor is set out in r 92 and it is that the Court shall make an order confirming the sale and thereupon the sale shall become absolute. This amounts to a judicial determination that none of the objections exists on which the validity of the sale could have been questioned (h). The dismissal however of an application made by a judgment debtor under r 90 does not preclude him in a suit for possession by the auction purchaser from pleading by way of defence that the property sold in execution of a mortgage decree passed against him and bought by the purchaser was not included in the mortgage suit or decree but was fraudulently inserted in the sale certificate (i).

Sale by receiver in a partnership action—A sale by a receiver under the directions of the Court given under a preliminary decree in a suit for dissolution of partnership is not a sale in execution of a decree. The provisions of the Code relating to execution sales do not apply to such a sale (j)

the purchaser shall be entitled to receive back his purchase money (with or without interest as the Court may direct) from any person to whom the purchase money has been paid

The repayment of the said purchase money and of the interest (if any) allowed by the Court may be enforced against such person under the rules provided for by this Code for the execution of a decree for money

The second and fourth paragraphs of s 315 have been omitted in the present section. Further the words shall be entitled to an order for repayment have been substituted for the words shall be entitled to receive back which occurred in the third paragraph

No saleable interest—An auction purchaser may under r 91 apply to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. If the sale is set aside he may apply under this rule for an order for repayment of his purchase money. But no sale can be set aside under r 91 nor can any repayment be ordered under this rule if it is found that the judgment debtor had some saleable interest in the property. The reason is that in the case of a sale under a decree of the 93 Court there is no warranty of title either by the decree holder or by the Court as there is in the case of private sales. The purchaser must be taken to accept the property with all risks and all defects in the judgment debtor's title. It follows that the purchaser is not entitled to any refund even if the judgment debtor has no saleable interest at all. Rules 91 and 93 however confer upon him a statutory right to a return of the purchase money in such cases (o).

Suit for return of purchase money where no saleable interest—The Code of 1859 did not contain any express provision for a return of the purchase money to the auction purchaser if it turned out that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property at all. Hence it was held that the auction purchaser was not entitled to a return of the purchase money even if the judgment debtor had no saleable interest (p). The right to a return of the purchase money was first given by s 315 of the Code of 1877. That section was in terms similar to s 315 of the Code of 1882. Under the Code of 1882 it was held by all the High Courts (q) following a Full Bench ruling of the Allahabad High Court (r) that a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree could maintain a suit against a decree holder for recovery of the purchase money if it turned out that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold and that he was not limited to the special procedure in the execution department mentioned in that section. This view was based principally upon the words may be enforced which occurred in the last paragraph of s 315. It was also held under that section that whether the purchaser proceeded by an application for execution under that section or by a regular suit he was not entitled to receive back his purchase money unless the judgment debtor had no saleable interest at all; if the judgment debtor had some saleable interest in the property however small he could not by suit any more than by application obtain a refund of the purchase money in proportion to the extent to which the judgment debtor had no interest (s). It was further held having regard to the words and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it which occurred in the second paragraph of s 315 that the cause of action did not arise and the period of limitation for a suit under that section did not commence until the purchaser was deprived of the property sold to him (t). It was also held that the purchaser was entitled to proceed by way of suit even after rateable distribution against those among whom the purchase money was distributed (u). It was further held that a suit would lie even after confirmation of the sale if the purchaser was after confirmation deprived of the property as the result of a suit by the lawful owner (v).

The second and fourth paragraphs of s. 315 of the Code of 1882 have now been omitted. The words may be enforced which occurred in s. 315 are not reproduced in the present rule. The present rule says that if an application is made by the auction purchaser under r 91 to set aside the sale—and such application must be made within 30 days from the date of sale—and the sale is set aside under r 92 the purchaser is entitled to an order for a return of the purchase money. The result therefore under the present Code is that if the purchaser does not apply under r 91 to set aside the sale or if an application is made but it is disallowed the Court shall make an order confirming the sale under r 92 (1). If an order is made confirming the sale the purchaser is precluded by r 92 (3) from bringing a suit to set aside the order confirming the sale. And it has been held by all the High Courts (w) that under the present Code an auction purchaser is not entitled as he was under the Code of 1882 to bring a regular suit for a return of the purchase money in cases where the judgment debtor has no saleable interest in the property unless he can bring himself within the equitable principles which justify a suit for money had and received to his use (x). The result of these decisions is that if in ignorance of the true facts the purchaser fails to make the application to set aside the sale under r 91 within the period of limitation he can get no relief and the judgment debtor is entitled to take credit for the price of property not belonging to him. This may at first sight seem inequitable but the explanation is that while in a private sale there is in the absence of a contract to the contrary an implied covenant for title by the vendor there is no such covenant either by the decree holder or by the Court in the case of a sale in execution of a decree the doctrine of causae emptor applies to a Court sale. The right now given to the purchaser being a creation of the statute the remedy to enforce that right must be confined to that prescribed by the statute. That remedy is to apply under r 91 to set aside the sale and if the sale is set aside to apply for a return of the purchase money under r 93. If the Court passes an order refusing to set aside the sale he may appeal from the order under O 43 r 1 (j) the order being one made under r 92. The judgment of the appellate Court is final there being only one appeal from such order. He cannot as stated above bring a regular suit to set aside the sale and for a refund of the purchase money as he could under the Code of 1882 (y).

But it is otherwise where the auction purchaser has bought the property in execution of a mortgage decree and the decree as v l as the sale is set aside in a separate suit brought by part es interested in the mortgaged property. In such a case it has been held that the auction purchaser is entitled to a return of the purchase money his remedy being by an application under s. 47 above (z).

Where a sale took place and was confirmed by the Court before the present Code came into force it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the rights of the purchaser must be determined with reference to the provisions of the Code of 1882 and that the purchaser was therefore entitled to maintain a regular suit for a return of the purchase money if the judgment debtor had no saleable interest in the property (a).

Suit for return of purchase money where sale set aside on ground of material irregularity—Where a sale is set aside on the ground of material irregularity under rr 90 and 92 the auction purchaser may bring a suit for a refund of the purchase money. Such right exists independently of the Code. The mere use of the expression "order" in this rule has not the effect of taking away that right (b).

Interest—The Court has power by the express terms of this rule to award interest on the purchase money (c).

Limitation—The period of limitation for an application under this rule is 3 years from the accrual of the right under art 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 (d). The period of limitation for a regular suit in cases governed by the Code of 1887 to recover back the purchase money is 6 years from the accrual of the right under art 190 of that Act (e).

Be entitled to an order—Where an order is made under this rule it may be executed in the manner prescribed for the execution of decrees. See s 36 above.

94 [S 316] Where a sale of immovable property has become absolute, the Court shall grant a certificate specifying the property sold and the name of the person who at the time of sale is declared to be the purchaser. Such certificate shall bear date the day on which the sale became absolute.

Certificate to purchaser

Old section—This rule corresponds with the first part of s 316 of the Code of 1882. The second part of that section relating to the vesting of title has been reproduced in s 60 of this Code with an important alteration as regards the time when the property vests in the purchaser.

Purchaser's title—See s 60 and notes thereto.

The Court shall grant a certificate—The provisions of this rule are mandatory (f).

Certificate of sale—A sale certificate does not transfer the title. It is evidence of the transfer (g).

Certificate to legal representative—When the purchaser is dead the certificate may be granted to his legal representative (h). See s 146 above.

What passes at a Court sale—As regards private sales there is in the absence of a contract to the contrary an implied covenant for title by the vendor as provided by the Transfer of Property Act 1882 s 55 sub (2). But as regards sales under a decree of the Court there is no warranty of title either by the decree holder or by the Court. Rule 13 of this Ordinance shows that the decree holder when applying for execution has only to specify the judgment debtors share or interest in the property to the best of his belief and so far as he has been able to ascertain the same. shows that the prelati non only profess to specify the particulars prescribed by that rule including the property to be sold and the judgment debtor's interest therein as fairly and accurately as possible. Hence what passes to a purchaser at a Court sale is the right title and interest of the judgment debtor whatever that interest may be. In other words a purchaser at a Court sale buys the property with all risks and all defects in the judgment-debtor's title except where it is found that the judgment debtor had no saleable interest at all (1). In the latter case the purchaser may apply to have the sale set aside under r 91 of this Order and he may then apply under r 93 for a return of the purchase money. If the purchase money has been distributed amongst the creditors of the judgment debtor under s 73 he may follow the money in their hands (2). But—and this is an important consequence of the purchaser buying only the right title and interest of the judgment debtor—the sale will not be set aside if the judgment debtor has even a partial interest in the property nor will the purchaser be entitled to a refund of the purchase money to the extent to which the judgment debtor had no interest until the case be one of fraud (3). On the same principle a purchaser in execution of a money decree is bound by the estoppel which binds the judgment debtor whose interest he has purchased (4). The Madras High Court has held that he is not bound in all cases (5).

It has been stated above that what passes to a purchaser at a Court sale in execution of a money decree is the right title and interest of the judgment debtor in the property sold. To determine the nature and extent of the judgment debtor's right title and interest in the property sold the test is as stated by Lord Watson in the course of the argument in Pillai & Co. v. Chinnathurai (n) what did the Court intend to sell and what did the purchaser understand that he bought? These are questions of fact or rather of mixed law and fact and must be determined according to the evidence in the particular case (o). This test was applied in Bilant v. Hurachint (p) cited in the next following paragraph and in Abdul K. v. Appayyasaami (q) cited in the notes below.

Where a purchaser at a Court sale in execution of a decree against a member of a joint Hindu family buys 4 specific properties A B C and D alleged to belong to him and subsequently there is a partition decree by which properties 1 B 1 and 1 are allotted to that member the purchaser is entitled only to such of the properties as are common to the sale certificate and the share of that member under the decree namely properties A and B He is not entitled to have the equivalent of properties C and D out of properties 1 and 1 (r)

D is entitled to 10 annas share in a village. Out of this share he mortgages 6 annas to B. In execution of a simple money decree obtained by C against D, a 4 annas share is attached and sold. The presumption is, in the absence of specific indications to the contrary, that the share sold was the share which was not mortgaged (s).

94 Sale in execution of a mortgage decree—Where mortgaged property is sold in execution of a mortgage decree obtained by the mortgagee against the mortgagor the interest both of the mortgagor and mortgagee passes to the purchaser (t)

Variance between proclamation of sale and sale certificate—O 21 r 66 requires that where property is ordered to be sold in execution of a decree the proclamation of sale should specify as fairly and accurately as possible the property to be sold. By the present rule it is provided that where property is sold, and the sale becomes absolute the Court shall grant a certificate specifying the property sold. It sometimes happens that the property as described in the certificate of sale is different from that described in the proclamation of sale. In such a case the description of the property in the proclamation of sale is conclusive as to what was the subject matter of the sale. As stated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Thalur Barmha v Jiban Ram (u) that which is sold in a judicial sale of this kind can be nothing but the property attached and that property is conclusively described in and by the schedule to which the attachment refers—that is the schedule of the attached property in the proclamation of sale. Thus where a judgment debtor owned a mahal of which a 10 annas share was mortgaged and the proclamation of sale stated that what was to be sold was a 6 annas share in the mahal included in the mortgage but the purchaser obtained a certificate of sale in which the property described was a 6 annas share in the mahal not included in the mortgage it was held that the sale certificate should be set aside. The Court has no power to grant a certificate in which the property described is different from that specified in the proclamation of sale (v). Similarly where the proclamation of sale stated that the whole interest of five brothers in a mortgaged property was to be sold and by a mistake on the part of the officer in charge of the sale the certificate of sale omitted to mention the names of four of them it was held that what was sold to the purchaser was the property as described in the proclamation of sale and not the property as erroneously described in the sale certificate (w). The real question in such cases under the present Code of Civil Procedure seems therefore to be what was the sale: i.e. what was bargained and paid for and that must depend not on erroneous statements of what was offered for sale but on what was actually offered for sale and bid for. What [is actually] offered for sale [is] determined by the order of the Court and the proclamation (x).

Effect of new interpretation of law on sale—A purchased at a Court sale the right title and interest of B in an impartible zamindari. By the law as then interpreted the holder of such a zamindari was only entitled to a life interest in the zamindari. [A must therefore be deemed to have purchased only the life interest of B]. Subsequently this interpretation of the law was reversed by the Judicial Committee which decided that the holder of an impartible zamindari is entitled to an absolute interest in it and that such interest is alienable. The new interpretation does not entitle A to claim that what he purchased at the sale was the absolute interest of B (y).

Amendment of certificate of sale—A purchaser at a Court sale may apply to the Court for amendment of the sale certificate where the description of the property in the certificate differs from that in the proclamation. The Court may allow or refuse the amendment but no appeal lies from the order in either case. Such an order is not appealable under s 104. Nor is it appealable as a decree under s 47 for the question cannot be regarded as one relating to the execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree the decree being fully executed. The only question in such a case is whether the

Limitation—The provisions of the Limitation Act do not apply to an application for a sale certificate. The reason is that it is the duty of the Court on the sale becoming absolute to issue a sale certificate and there is no duty imposed on the purchaser to apply for such a certificate. The action of the Court in granting the certificate is ministerial and not judicial. The Limitation Act does not apply to applications to the Court to do what it has no discretion to refuse nor to applications for exercise of functions of a ministerial character. Hence if the Court fails to issue a sale certificate and the purchaser has thereupon to apply to the Court for a grant of the certificate the application may be made at any time (a)

Effect of certificate of sale on irregularities—All irregularities though material are cured by the certificate of sale (b)

Certificate of sale and res judicata—A sale certificate is just like a deed of sale and it does not operate as a plea of res judicata. Where a defendant contends that the act of the Court did not pass title to the property in dispute to the plaintiff and the plaintiff produces a sale certificate the defendant is barred not by sec 11 relating to res judicata but by sec 47 of the Code (c)

attachment of such property and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under rule 94, the Court shall, on the application of the purchaser, order delivery to be made by putting such purchaser or any person whom he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf in possession of the property, and, if need be, by removing any person who refuses to vacate the same

Delivery of possession to purchaser—The possession contemplated by this rule is khas or actual possession. See notes to r 35 of this Order. For the form of the order for delivery see App E form No 39

The period of limitation for a suit for delivery of possession is two years from the date when the sale becomes absolute [ib art 138]

Procedure under this rule—If the Court finds on inquiry that the property is in the occupancy (1) of the judgment debtor (2) or of some person on his behalf (3) or of some person claiming title under him the Court shall order delivery to be made by putting the purchaser in possession of the property. If however the Court finds that the person in possession of the property is holding the property on his own account the Court has no option but to dismiss the application under this rule (d)

It may be observed that a purchaser at a Court sale is not bound to apply for possession under this rule. He may at his option bring a regular suit for possession the period of limitation for the suit being 12 years as stated above. The remedy by way of application and that by way of suit are concurrent (e). Further the fact that an application has been made under this rule and it is rejected as being time barred (f) or on any other ground (g) is no bar to a regular suit for possession.

96 [S 319] Where the property sold is in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same and a certificate in respect thereof has been granted under rule 94 the Court shall, on the application of the purchaser, order delivery to be made by affixing a copy of the certificate of sale in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum or other customary mode, at some convenient place, that the interest of the judgment debtor has been transferred to the purchaser.

Delivery of possession to purchaser—The possession contemplated by this rule is symbolical possession. See notes to r 30 above.

Resistance to delivery of possession to decree holder or purchaser

97 [Ss 328 334] (1) Where the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property or the purchaser of any such property sold in execution of a decree is resisted or obstructed by any person in obtaining possession of the property, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such resistance or obstruction.

(2) The Court shall fix a day for investigating the matter and shall summon the party against whom the application is made to appear and answer the same.

When rule applies—The rule does not apply unless the auction purchaser has made an attempt to obtain possession of the property either through Court or out of Court and he is resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession (h)

Regular suit—The decree holder may either resort to the summary remedy provided by this rule or he may bring a regular suit. Failure on the part of the decree holder to avail himself of the remedy under this rule does not deprive him of his right to bring a regular suit against the party obstructing execution of the decree (i). But if he applies under this rule and fails the order against him is conclusive unless he brings a suit to establish his right to possession as provided by r 103 below. Such a suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order (j). See Limitation Act 1908 ch I art 11 A.

Limitation—The period of limitation for an application complaining of resistance or obstruction to delivery of possession of immovable property decreed or sold in execution of a decree is 30 days from the date of the resistance or obstruction (Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 17).

Fresh application for delivery of possession—Under the present Code a holder of a decree for possession of immovable property applies for possession under O 21 r 30 while an auction purchaser applies for possession under O 21 r 90. The present rule deals with obstruction or resistance in obtaining possession. An important question that arises in this connection is whether if a decree holder or auction purchaser who is obstructed or resisted in obtaining possession omits to apply under this rule within 30 days from the date of obstruction or resistance the only other remedy open to him is to proceed by a regular suit or whether he is entitled to a fresh writ of possession. It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (l) and Patna (l) that he is entitled to make a fresh application for delivery of possession and to a fresh warrant for possession. On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Bombay (m) and Allahabad (n) that he is not so entitled and that his only remedy is by a regular suit.

Whether O 9 applies to proceedings under this rule—The provisions of O 9 do not apply to proceedings under this rule. See notes to O 9 r 9. Whether this rule does apply to execution proceedings.

If however the Court finds that the person in possession of the property is holding the property on his own account the Court has no option but to dismiss the application under this rule (d)

When rule applies—This rule does not apply unless the auction purchaser has made an attempt to obtain possession of the property either through Court or out of Court and he is resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession (b)

Regular suit. The decree holder may either resort to the summary remedy provided by this rule or he may bring a regular suit. Failure on the part of the decree holder to avail himself of the remedy under this rule does not deprive him of his right to bring a regular suit against the party obstructing execution of the decree (c). But if he applies under this rule and fails the order against him is conclusive unless he brings a suit to establish his right to possession as provided by r 103 below. Such a suit must be brought within a year from the date of the order (j). See Limitation Act 1908 ch. I art 114.

Limitation—The period of limitation for an application complaining of resistance or obstruction to delivery of possession of immovable property decreed or sold in execution of a decree is 30 days from the date of the resistance or obstruction (Limitation Act 1908 ch. I art 114).

Fresh application for delivery of possession—Under the present Code a holder of a decree for possession of immovable property applies for possession under O 21 r 3 while an auction purchaser applies for possession under O 21 r 30. The present rule deals with resistance or obstruction in obtaining possession. An important question that arises in the connection is whether if a decree holder or auction purchaser who is resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession omits to apply under this rule within 30 days from the date of obstruction or resistance the only other remedy open to him is to proceed by a regular suit whether he is entitled to a fresh writ of possession. It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (k) and Patna (l) that he is entitled to make a fresh application for delivery of possession and to a fresh warrant for possession. On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Bombay (m) and Allahabad (n) that he is not entitled and that his only remedy is by a regular suit.

Whether O 9 applies to proceedings under this rule—The provisions of O 9 not apply to proceedings under this rule. See notes to O 9 r 9. Whether this rule does apply to execution proceedings.

tion is caused by a person other than the judgment debtor unless the Court is satisfied that the person was acting at the instigation of the judgment debtor (o)

Purchaser from a judgment debtor pending attachment—The High Court of Madras has held that proceedings can be instituted under this rule against a purchaser from a judgment debtor pending attachment though such a purchaser is not expressly mentioned in the rule. The reasons given are (1) that this rule is to be read with r 95 which expressly provides for the institution of proceedings against such a purchaser under that rule and (2) that such a purchaser is a representative of the judgment debtor within the meaning of s 146 so that proceedings which can be instituted against a judgment debtor can also be instituted against him (p)

Presidency Small Cause Court—This rule applies to proceedings under Chapter 7 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act 1882 relating to recovery of possession of immovable property by virtue of s 48 of that Act (q)

Appeal—See notes to s 47. Questions between the auction purchaser on the one hand etc. See also notes to r 101 below under the head Appeal. It is submitted that r 103 excludes an appeal from an order under this rule

99 [Cf Ss 331, 335] Where the Court is satisfied that the resistance or obstruction was occasioned by any person (other than the judgment-debtor) claiming in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the Court shall make an order dismissing the application

Resistance or obstruction
by bona fide claimant

When this rule applies—The present rule deals with two cases of claimants in good faith namely (1) persons claiming on their own account and (2) persons claiming on account of some person other than the judgment debtor

Person other than judgment debtor claiming to be in possession on his own account—The word possession as used in this rule is not limited to actual physical possession. It includes also constructive possession such as possession through tenants or servants. Hence a landlord who is in possession of a property through his tenant is a person in possession of the property on his own account within the meaning of this rule (r)

Where in a suit brought by a plaintiff against two defendants a decree is passed by consent against one of them only the other defendant is not a judgment debtor. He is a person other than the judgment debtor within the meaning of this rule (s)

Sub tenants—A lets his house to B. B sublets the house to C. A files a suit against B for possession and obtains a decree against B. C is not joined as a party to the suit. C obstructs A in obtaining possession of the property. Can C be said to be in possession on his own account within the meaning of this rule? The High Court of Calcutta (t) has held that the words any person claiming to be in possession on his own account mean any person claiming to be in possession as a matter of fact on his own account and that a sub tenant is such a person. On the other hand the High Court of Bombay (u) has held that the words any person claiming to be in possession on his own account means any person claiming to be in possession on his own title, and that a sub tenant is not such a person. According to the former view A is not entitled to an order for possession against G. According to the latter view he is.

The Bombay High Court has also held that G is not entitled to claim the benefit of the Bombay Rent Act against A there being no privity of contract between him and A (v).

Transferee pendente lite—See r 102 below

Appeal—See notes to rr 93 and 101 under the head, Appeal

100 [S 332] (1) Where any person other than the judgment debtor is dispossessed of immovable property by the holder of a decree for the possession of such property or, where such property has been sold in execution of a decree, by the purchaser thereof, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such dispossession

Dispossession by decree holder or purchaser

(2) The Court shall fix a day for investigating the matter and shall summon the party against whom the application is made to appear and answer the same

Rules 100 and 101—These rules are to be read together

When this rule applies—This rule refers to a person who has been dispossessed by an auction purchaser who has taken possession of the property through the Court. He complains to the Court of such dispossession and the Court makes a summary investigation and if it holds that the applicant was in possession of the property on his own account and not on account of the judgment debtor it directs under r 101 that possession be given back to the applicant. The party against whom the order is made may then institute a suit under r 103 to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property (w).

Any person other than the judgment debtor—See notes to s 47

Representatives on p 156. A purchaser of a portion of a holding from a judgment debtor is his representative and is not entitled to apply under this rule (x). The Patna High Court has held that a purchaser from a judgment debtor of a non transferable holding is also a representative and not entitled to apply (y). But the Calcutta High Court has come to the opposite conclusion and says that so far as the decree holder is concerned he is a trespasser and is entitled to apply under this rule (z).

Is dispossessed—Where mere symbolical possession is delivered to the decree holder or purchaser under r 96 the person in possession cannot be said to be dispossessed within the meaning of this rule so as to entitle him to apply under this rule (a). It is only the delivery of actual possession (r 95) that can constitute dispossession within the meaning of this rule. A person who is in possession through his tenant

102 [S 333] Nothing in rules 99 and 101 shall apply to resistance or obstruction in execution of a decree for the possession of immovable property by a person to whom the judgment debtor has transferred the property after the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed or to the dispossession of any such person

If an order is made under r 99 or r 101, it is conclusive against the party against whom it is made unless he brings a suit to establish his right as provided by r 103 below. This rule provides that nothing in rr 99 and 101 applies to resistance by a transferee pendente lite from the judgment debtor. If an order is made in execution proceedings in such a case r 103 does not apply. The Oudh Court has held that where a transferee pendente lite pays off a prior usufructuary mortgage and enters into possession of the property and resists the decree holder in obtaining possession he must be treated in relation to his position as a purchaser from the possessory mortgagee and that the case falls within r 99 above and is not affected by the rule of pendente lite (j).

103 [S 332 fourth para S 333, second para] Any party not being a judgment debtor against whom an order is made under rule 98, rule 99 or rule 101 may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property but subject, to the result of such suit (if any), the order shall be conclusive

Orders conclusive subject to the suit
Suit to establish right to present possession—The suit must be brought within one year from the date of the order Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 114. If no suit is brought within the aforesaid period the order will be conclusive (k).

This rule does not apply unless an order has been made under r 98, r 99 or r 101. Therefore where an application is made under r 97 or r 100 but the Court declines to pass any order upon the application thinking it best that the applicant should be referred to a separate suit the present rule does not apply and any suit which the applicant may subsequently institute for possession is not a suit under this rule and it is not therefore governed by art 114A of the Limitation Act (l). Not only is it necessary that an actual order should have been made but the order must have been one made after investigation as contemplated by r 97 sub r (2) and r 100 sub r (2). An order dismissing an application for default of prosecution is not an order made after investigation. The present rule therefore does not apply to such an order (m).

Scope of suit under this rule—It must not be supposed that a suit under this rule is concerned only with actual possession at the date of the order. The suit is to establish the right which the plaintiff claims to the present possession of the property and this right may be established without showing that the plaintiff was in actual possession at the date of the order against him (n).

Suit by auction purchaser for possession under a different right—An auction purchaser against whom an order is made under r 99 or r 101 may bring a suit under this rule to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property. Where a suit is brought by him under this rule the suit is one for possession under his auction purchase and the cause of action in the suit is the adverse decision under r 99 or r 100. A suit under the present rule is quite irrespective of any other cause of action which such person apart from his character as auction purchaser may have against the opposite party. It is therefore competent to the auction purchaser to abandon all his right in the auction sale including the right to bring a suit under this rule as auction-purchaser and to bring a suit against the opposite party for possession upon a different title altogether. To such a suit the provisions of the present rule do not apply and the suit need not be brought within one year from the date of the order as required by art 11 A of the Limitation Act (o).

Order dismissing application under rule 101—A makes an application under r 100. The application is dismissed under r 101. A is a party against whom an order is made under r 101 within the meaning of the present rule though there is no express provision for dismissal of an application under r 101 (p).

Order dismissing an application under r 95—An order dismissing an application under r 95 cannot be treated as an order under r 99 so as to attract the application of the present rule (q).

ORDER XXII

Death, Marriage and Insolvency of Parties

- 1 [S 361] The death of a plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate if the right to sue survives

No abatement by party's death if right to sue survives

Application of order to appeals—The provisions of this order apply to appeals. See s 107 sub s (2) and r 11 below.

Application of Order to execution proceedings—The provisions of this order apply to execution proceedings except rr 3 4 and 8. See r 12 below.

Right to sue—The right to sue means the right to bring a suit asserting a right to the same relief which the deceased plaintiff asserted at the time of his death (r).

In what cases the right to sue survives and in what cases it does not.—To answer this question we may turn to the provisions of—

I the Indian Contract Act 9 of 1872 sec 37 and

II the Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 sec 306

I Contract Act s 37—Section 37 of the Contract Act runs as follows. Promises bind the representatives of the promisors in case of the death of such promisors before performance unless a contrary intention appears from the contract. The words in italics refer to contracts involving the exercise of special skill or involving special personal confidence for these are not binding on the representatives of the promisors. A promises to paint a picture for B by a certain day at a certain price. A dies before the day. The contract cannot be enforced either by A's representatives against B or by B against A's representatives. The reason is that the right to sue does not survive to or against the representatives of A.

II Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 sec 306—Section 306 of the Succession Act is as follows All demands whatsoever and all rights to prosecute or demand any action or special proceedings existing in favour of or against a person at the time of his decease survive to and against his executors or administrators except causes of action for defamation assault as defined in the Indian Penal Code or other personal injuries not causing the death of the party and except also cases where after the death of the party the relief sought could not be enjoyed or granting it would be nugatory

The effect of this section is that the right to sue does not survive in the following cases —

(i) Suits for defamation assault or other personal injuries not causing the death of the party [Where death is caused by a personal injury the legal representative of the deceased may sue the wrong doer for damages see Act 13 of 1855]

(ii) Cases where after the death of the party the relief sought could not be enjoyed or granting it would be nugatory

The Calcutta High Court has held that it does and that A's legal representative is entitled to continue the suit (v) On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Bombay (f) Patna (u) Madras (v) and Allahabad (u) that the right to sue does not survive and that the suit abates on A's death

11 The right to sue for damages for breach of contract the right to sue on a promissory note the right to sue for a debt the right to sue on a mortgage the right to sue for wrong done to property are all instances of rights that are not extinguished on the death of the plaintiff or defendant In all these cases the suit does not abate on the death of the plaintiff or defendant An agreement referring matters in dispute to arbitration is not in this country revoked by the death of any of the parties thereto before the award is made Hence the question whether the legal representative of a deceased party is or is not entitled to enforce the contract to refer is a question which would depend upon whether the right dealt with in the reference is of a purely personal nature or is one which survives to the legal representative (x)

If a suit for damages for defamation but the suit is dismissed, the appellant appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal, the appellant's representative is not entitled to prosecute the appeal. The reason is that the decree in the original suit being against the appellant, the right to sue survives in appeal. Right to sue. But the right to sue in a suit for defamation does not survive to the legal representative, hence the appeal abates. Similarly if B is pending, the appellant is not entitled to continue the appeal against A or present it, not even if the suit was dismissed with costs (b).

2 [S 362] Where there are more plaintiffs or defendants than one and any of them dies, and where the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, the Court shall cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record and the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs or against the surviving defendant or defendants.

Executors and trustees—Where a suit is brought by executors or trustees, the right to sue in the death of any one of them survives to the surviving plaintiffs alone. Where a suit is brought against executors or trustees, the right to sue survives against the surviving defendant alone.

Joint Hindu family—See note to r 3 below. Joint Hindu Family and legal representative.

3 [Ss 363, 365, 366] (1) Where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or a sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit.

(2) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under sub-rule (1) the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned and, on the application of the defendant, the Court may award to him the costs which he may have incurred in defending the suit, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased plaintiff.

1. The words "so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned" in sub-rule (2) are new. See notes below. The suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned.

- 2 The words the suit shall abate in sub rule (2) have been substituted for the words the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate which occurred in sec 366 of the Code of 1882. The latter words gave rise to a conflict of opinion as to whether an order that a suit shall abate was appealable. The High Courts of Bombay (c) and Madras (d) held that such an order was a decree and was therefore appealable. The Allahabad High Court (e) held that the order was not appealable. No such question can arise under the present rule for it is no longer necessary to make an order that the suit shall abate. The suit abates ipso facto if no application is made under sub rule (1) within the time limited by law. It has been so held by the High Court of Lahore (f) and a Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad (g).

Limitation—The application under this rule must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased plaintiff or appellant. Limitation Act 1908 Sch I art 176.

The suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned—Where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiffs or plaintiff alone the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs may proceed with the suit. This is the case dealt with in r 2 above. The present rule provides inter alia that where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiffs alone the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff ought to be made a party to the suit. For this purpose an application should be made to the Court and it must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased plaintiff. Sub rule (2) provides that where no such application is made the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned. The words italicized above mean that the suit shall primarily abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned but they do not mean that the suit shall in no case abate as a whole. If the suit is of such a nature that it can proceed in the absence of the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff it will abate so far only as the deceased plaintiff is concerned. A suit by the partners of a firm to recover a partnership debt is a suit of this nature so that if one of the partners dies pending the suit and his legal representative is not brought on the record the suit will abate only so far as the deceased partner is concerned (h). But if it is of such a character that it cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative it will abate as a whole. A suit by some of the partners of a firm against the other partners for dissolution and for accounts is a suit of this character so that if one of the plaintiffs (or defendants) dies and his legal representative is not brought on the record the suit will abate as a whole (i). See notes above. Alterations in the rule No 1.

This rule applies to appeals—The provisions of this rule apply not only to the case of a deceased plaintiff but to the case of a deceased appellant [see sec 107 and r 11 below]. Therefore where one of two or more appellants dies and the right to appeal does not survive to the surviving appellant alone the legal representative of the deceased appellant ought to be brought on the record. If this is not done the appeal will abate so far as the deceased appellant is concerned. But the appeal will abate as a whole if the case is of such a nature that the appeal cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative of the deceased appellant.

There is one class of cases in which the appeal cannot abate as a whole but abates only so far as the deceased appellant is concerned and these are cases which come within O 41 r 4 corresponding with sec 514 of the Code of 1882 O 41 r 4 provides that where there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants in a suit and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or all the defendants as the case may be. Where several plaintiffs or defendants jointly appeal from a decree in a case to which O 41 r 4 applies and one of the appellants dies pending the appeal but his legal representative is not brought on the record within the period of limitation the appeal abates so far only as the deceased appellant is concerned and not as a whole. A and B sue C, D and E for possession of certain property alleging that it had been unlawfully dispossessed by the defendants. The defence is that the land belongs to C, D and E. The Court finds that the property belongs to the plaintiffs and a decree is passed in favour of the plaintiffs. C, D and E appeal from the decree. E dies pending the appeal but his legal representative is not brought on the record within the period of limitation. A and B (respondents) contend that the appeal has abated as a whole and it could not therefore be proceeded with. Does the appeal abate as a whole? No it abates only so far as the deceased appellant is concerned and the appeal should therefore be proceeded with. The reason is that the ground of appeal being common to all the appellants viz that they were the lawful owners of the land any one of them might have appealed from the whole decree under O 41 r 4 and so the death of one of the appellants cannot affect the right of the other appellants to proceed with the appeal. The same principle applies to suits for partition redemption and for a declaration of title to the property in suit (j). The High Court of Calcutta holds that O 41 r 4 does not apply on the grounds that a decree cannot be varied or reversed in favour of a person who is dead, and that the appeal having abated the rights between the deceased appellant and the respondents must be deemed to have been determined by the decree of the lower Court (k). In one Calcutta case A, B and C sued D, E and F for ejectment but the suit was dismissed. A, B and C appealed from the decree. A died pending the appeal but no steps were taken to bring his legal representative on the record within the period of limitation. It was held that the appeal abated as a whole. It was also held that if at the hearing of the appeal B and C instead of asking for ejectment asked only for joint possession with D, E and F the Appellate Court could grant leave to them to amend the plaint by asking for joint possession though on terms that they should pay all costs incurred up to that date (l). See notes to r 4 below.

Suit or appeal shall abate as against the deceased defendant or respondent

Suit for pre-emption—A decree in a suit for pre-emption passed against the defendants respondents in ignorance of the death of one of them and without bringing his legal representative on the record is a nullity as the right to sue in such a case does not survive against the surviving defendants alone (m). On the other hand when three plaintiffs appeal from a decree dismissing their suit for pre-emption and one of them dies pending the appeal and his legal representatives are not impleaded the appeal abates as regards the deceased alone for each pre-emptor has an independent right to are unknown a bona fide application by those who are willing to join in making the application is a sufficient compliance with this rule. The same principles apply to appeal. See notes to r 4 below under the same head (r).

Wrong person as legal representative—See notes to r 4 below under the same head.

Joint Hindu family and legal representative—The High Court of Patna has held that this rule is to be applied even if the plaintiffs are members of a joint Hindu family and that r 4 is to be applied even if the defendants are members of a joint family. According to that Court the legal representatives of a deceased coparcener within the meaning of sec 2 (11) are the surviving coparceners and the latter must be brought on the record in their representative character though they may be already on the record in their own capacity (w). On the other hand it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the case of members of a joint Hindu family is governed by r 2 above; that the right to sue survives to or against the surviving coparceners alone and if they are already on the record it is not necessary to bring them on the record in their representative capacity also (x).

Legal representative already on record in another character—The Lahore High Court in one case (y) held that the fact that the legal representative of the deceased party is already on the record in his individual capacity does not dispense with the application of this or the next rule. This decision was dissented from in a latter case (z) on the ground that rule 2 is independent of and in no way subject to the provisions of rule 4 (or of rule 3). The High Court of Patna has held that the fact that one of the legal representatives of a deceased party is already on the record but not as such does not prevent the abatement of the suit or appeal and the other party to the suit is not thereby relieved from the duty of applying within time for the substitution of the legal representative of the deceased (a). As to joint Hindu family see notes above.

A, B and C sue D and E for possession of certain land: A dies pending the suit leaving B and C as his heirs. No application is made by B and C to bring them on record as the legal representatives of A. Held by the Pangoon High Court that the suit abates only as to A and not as a whole the reason given being that the surviving plaintiffs themselves are the sole legal representatives of the deceased plaintiffs (b).

Determination of question as to legal representative—The present rule presupposes that the party claiming to represent the deceased plaintiff is his legal representative. If there is a dispute as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff it should be determined by the Court under r 5 below (c).

What pleas may be taken by a legal representative—The legal representative of a deceased plaintiff can only prosecute the cause of action as originally framed (d). Likewise the defendant can raise no defence against the legal representative other than what he could have raised against the deceased plaintiff himself (e). But this is not the case if the real defendant is an institution such as a temple which may be represented at different stages by different trustees. For if the original suit is against the trustee

3 who created a debt agreeing to pay it out of the temple funds and that trustee is removed it is open to his successor to raise the plea not taken by the first trustee namely that the temple funds were not liable for the debt. A Hindu son sues his father and the purchaser from the father to set aside a sale of ancestral property made by the father alleging that the sale was without legal necessity. The son dies pending the suit. As the father's sale is impeached the father is not the proper legal representative but some other member of the family interested in setting aside the sale must be appointed (g)

Minor applicant—A minor is as much entitled to be made a party as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff as an adult. But he must apply through a next friend (h)

Death of plaintiff after preliminary and before final decree—In some cases (i) the rule has been applied where plaintiff dies after the preliminary decree but before the final decree. These cases are however rendered obsolete by the dictum of Privy Council in Lachmi Narain v Balmukund (j) that a decree once passed confers rights and imposes liabilities which are fixed until the decree is reversed or varied in appeal. The later decisions are that the suit cannot abate between preliminary and final decree (k)

Death after final decree—The provisions of this Order do not apply where a party dies after the final decree is passed. Thus if A sues B but the suit is dismissed and A dies after the dismissal his legal representative may appeal from the decree without making any application under this rule to be brought on the record in place of the deceased (l). After a preliminary decree was passed on a mortgage a compromise decree was passed which operated as a final decree. The plaintiff died after the final decree. It was held that the legal representative could apply for execution under O 21 r 16 and there was no occasion for substitution (m). See also r 12 below

Death of pauper applicant—Where there is only an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis and the applicant dies before the leave is granted the right to sue as a pauper being a personal right cannot survive to his legal representative. But the legal representative may present a fresh application for leave to sue in forma pauperis or he may institute a suit for the same relief which the deceased claimed if the right to sue survives (n)

Effect of abatement on rights of parties—Where a suit has abated and the abatement has not been set aside under r 9 below the defendant is entitled as long as he continues in possession of the suit property to plead against the plaintiff and those claiming under him that the order of abatement is conclusive of the rights to the property. In such a case the order of abatement operates as a judgment in favour of the defendant to the same extent as a judgment on the merits (o)

Suit under O 1 r 8 and abatement.—See notes to O 1 r 8, Abatement of suit and Abatement of appeal

Execution proceedings.—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution See r 12 below

Revision.—When the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff applies within the prescribed period to have his name entered on the record the Court is bound under this rule to enter his name. If the Court fails to do so it amounts to a failure to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law under this rule and the High Court may interfere in revision under sec 115 (p)

Appeal.—The decisions on the question of appeal are not uniform. In some cases to be presently considered the alteration introduced in the present rule namely the substitution of the words the suit shall abate for the words the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate which occurred in the corresponding sec 366 of the Code of 1882 has not been noticed see notes above. Alterations in the rule No 2. We proceed to consider the decisions of each High Court separately

Madras.—The Madras High Court has held that where on the death of a plaintiff two rival claimants apply to the Court to be brought upon the record as the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff and the Court decides in favour of one of them and against the other the party against whom the decision is given is not entitled to appeal the reason given being that there is no abatement of the suit in such a case as the suit can be proceeded with by the other claimant (g). A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has also held that even if a sole plaintiff dies and only one person claims to be his legal representative an order refusing his application to be brought on the record is not one from which an appeal lies (r). But the Court declined to express an opinion as to what the consequence would be if the petitioner appeals against the actual order of abatement or dismissal. Presumably section 146 would enable him to do so as a person claiming under the deceased plaintiff

Allahabad.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that no appeal lies from an adjudication that a suit (s) or an appeal (t) has abated whether the abatement is due to the fact that no application was made to bring the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff on the record (u) or the abatement follows on the dismissal of the application made by a person to be brought upon the record as the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff (v) the reason given being that such an adjudication does not amount to a decree. In a recent case where A had obtained an ex parte decree against B and B had applied to set aside the decree and thereafter B died and on B's death his son applied to continue the application and the application was granted notwithstanding opposition on A's part it was held that the case did not fall either under r 3 or r 4 of this order and that no appeal lay from the order (w). See, sec 146 above

Lahore.—In a case where a person applied to be brought on the record as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff and the Court refused the application on the ground that he was not the legal representative and also made a separate order recording that the suit had abated inasmuch as no application by any legal representative had been made held by the High Court of Lahore that the order dismissing the application was not appealable under the Code as it was really a matter collateral to the suit. As to the order recording the abatement the Court said it would amount to a decree and be appealable as such if the applicant was already a party to the suit in another character (x). In another case (y) where an appeal was declared to have abated as a whole it was held following a Full Bench ruling of the same High Court (z) that whether the final decision was called an abatement or a dismissal it came within the definition of decree and was appealable as such the applicants having been parties to the suit.

Oudh—The Oudh Court has held that a decision that a suit has abated coupled with a refusal to bring the legal representative on the record on the ground that the cause of action did not survive operates as a decree and is appealable (a).

4 [S 368] (1) Where one of two or more defendants dies and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, or a sole defendant or sole surviving defendant dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representative of the deceased defendant to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit.

Proceed in case of death of one of several defendants or of sole defendant

(2) Any person so made a party may make any defence appropriate to his character as legal representative of the deceased defendant.

(3) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under sub rule (1), the suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant.

Alterations in the rule —

- 1 The words used in sec 368 of the Code of 1882 were any person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant. The words used in the present rule are the legal representative of the deceased defendant. See notes below. Effect of decree against legal representative of deceased defendant.
- 2 Sub rule (2) is new.
- 3 The words as against the deceased defendant in sub rule (3) are new. See notes below. The suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant.

Suit—The word suit in this rule includes an appeal and the word defendant a respondent see r 11 b low.

Limitation—The application under this rule must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased defendant or respondent. Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 177. The alteration in the language of art 177 as it stood in the Limitation Act 1877 art 145 C clearly shows that the word respondent in the present article is not confined to a respondent only in first appeal as was held by the High Court of Madras under the old article (b) but that it includes a respondent also in second appeal as was held by the High Court of Calcutta and Allahabad (c). See also r 11 below.

Where no application made within the period of limitation The application to bring the legal representative of the deceased defendant on the record should as stated above be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased defendant. If no such application is made within the foregoing period the suit abates against the deceased defendant (sub rule (3)) though the plaintiff was ignorant of the death of the deceased (d). After abatement the only course open to the plaintiff is to make an application under r 9 sub r (2) to have the abatement set aside. Such an application should be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement [Limitation Act 1908 s 11 art 171] but the Court may entertain the application even after 90 days if sufficient cause is shown (e) [sec 9 sub r 3 and Limitation Act 1908 s 5]. As to the inherent power of the Court to bring the legal representative of a deceased defendant on the record after abatement see notes below. It may be stated that where a defendant dies pending a suit it is open to its legal representative to apply to be brought on the record notwithstanding the plaintiff's omission to implead him (f).

defendant or respondent only (g) A suit on a joint and several promissory note against the promisers is a suit of this nature. But if the suit or appeal cannot proceed in the absence of the legal representative the suit or appeal will abate as a whole (A) A suit by a partner against his co-partners for dissolution of partnership and for accounts is a suit of this nature [see ill. (2)] under the head II Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate as a whole

The test often adopted in such cases is whether in the event of the appeal being allowed as against the remaining respondents there would or would not be two contradictory decrees in the same litigation with respect to the same subject matter. It is clear that a Court should not be called upon to make two inconsistent decrees about the same property and in order to avoid conflicting decrees the Court has no alternative but to dismiss the appeal as a whole. If on the other hand the success of the appeal would not lead to such a result there is no valid reason why the Court should not hear the appeal and adjudicate upon the dispute between the parties who are before it (i)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that where the plaintiffs are joint owners and a decree is passed for them for possession and the defendant appeals from the decree making the plaintiffs respondents and one of the plaintiffs-respondents dies pending the appeal the appeal abates as a whole the reason given being that the Court should not be called upon to make two contradictory decrees in the same litigation, which would be the result if the appeals were allowed as against the surviving joint owners, and the decree of the lower Court left undisturbed as against the deceased joint owner (j).

A and B sue C D and E for declaration of title and for possession and a decree is passed for them. C D and E appeal from the decree. Pending the appeal C dies. No steps are taken to bring his legal representative on the record within the period of limitation. According to the Calcutta decision the appeal abates as a whole. The reason given is that if the defendants succeed in the appeal then there would be two decrees one against the surviving plaintiffs respondents and another decree of the lower Court in favour of the deceased plaintiff to the effect that the property in suit belongs to the plaintiffs of which he was a proprietor. Further as to O 41 r 4 the Calcutta High Court has said that the rule is limited to the case of appellants and does not apply to the case of respondents (l). On the other hand the High Court of Bombay has held that the appeal abates only as against deceased and it should be heard on the merits against the other joint owners. After the appeal is heard on the merits the Court may pass such decree as the case may require (l). It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that where a joint decree is passed in a suit for redemption of a mortgage brought by two or more plaintiffs and the defendants appeal from the decree and one of the plaintiffs respondents dies pending the appeal but his legal representatives are not impleaded within the period of limitation the appeal abates only so far as the deceased respondent is concerned but not as a whole (m). See notes to r 3 above.

This rule applies to appeals.

Where there is no possibility of contradictory decrees the appeal abates only so far as concerns the deceased defendant or respondent but not as a whole. A Hindu widow sells immovable property belonging to her husband to A B and C. It is stated in the sale deed that the property is sold to A B and C in equal shares. After the sale the next reversioner sues the widow and A B and C for a declaration that the sale is not valid beyond the life time of the widow but the suit is dismissed. The reversioner appeals from the decree. During the pendency of the appeal A dies but his legal representative is not brought on the record within the period of limitation. The appeal abates as against A alone but not as a whole. The reason is that the interest of A in the property is separate from those of the surviving respondents B and C the shares having been defined in the sale deed and that it could not therefore be said that the decree of the appellate Court if passed in favour of the appellant would prove ineffective or inconsistent with that part of the decree of the lower Court which had become final upon the abatement of the appeal qua A (n).

1 Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate as against deceased defendant or respondent only—(1) A mortgages certain property to B C stands surety for repayment of the mortgage debt. B sues A and C praying as against A for a sale of the mortgaged property and as against C for a decree for the payment of the mortgage debt. C dies pending the suit. No application is made by B to make the legal representative of C a party to the suit within 6 months [now 90 days] from the date of C's death. The suit abates as against C only and not as a whole. Mehdi Husain v Sugra Begam (1902) 20 All 206. [In this case it is clear that B could have abandoned his claim against C and sued A alone on the mortgage.]

(2) A lets certain lands to B and C. A then sues B and C for arrears of rent but the suit is dismissed. A files an appeal the respondents being B and C. C dies pending the appeal. No application is made by A to substitute C's legal representative in C's place within 6 months [now 90 days] from the date of C's death. The appeal does not

(3) A and B obtain a joint decree for redemption against C who appeals. A dies pending the appeal and his legal representatives are not brought on the record. The appeal abates against A alone Varun Das v Sheo Din (1926) 49 All 251 91 I C 809 (21) A 234 (In this case either A or B could have sued to redeem)

II Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate as a whole—(1) A, B and C are joint owners of certain property. The property is sold for arrears of Government revenue and purchased by D. A, B and C sued D to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud and irregularities and a decree is passed in their favour. D files an appeal from the decree against A, B and C. C dies pending the appeal but D makes no application to bring C's legal representative on the record within the period of limitation. The appeal abates not only as against C but as a whole. In this case it is clear that A, B and C being joint owners the suit would have been bad if C were not joined as a party to the suit. Again if the appellate Court heard the appeal in the absence of C's legal representative and came to the conclusion that the decree of the lower Court should be reversed the decree could then be reversed only as to A and B but it could not be reversed as to C for C's representative is not on the record. But this would be a reductio ad absurdum for the whole appeal could not be reversed as to the undetermined shares of some joint holders [that is A and B] and confirmed as to the undetermined share of other joint holders [that is in this case C]. The case therefore is one in which the appeal could not proceed in the absence of C's legal representative. The appeal therefore must abate as a whole Dharanjit v Chandeshwar (1907) 11 Cal W N 504 Kali Dayal v Jagendra Nath (1919) 24 C W N 44 54 I C 822 Bejoy Gopal v Lmesh Chandra (1901) 6 C W N 196 Manindra v Bhagubhai (1906) 30 Cal W N 40 90 I C 946 (26) A C 330 Madhapore Zamindari Co v Amulya Nath (1906) 53 Cal 752 90 I C 649 (21) A C 893 Hadu v Lala (1910) Punj Rec no 41 p 107 91 I C 901 Jamna v Sarjit (1919) Punj Rec no 67 p 166 52 I C 510 Haji Moham mad v Mahlu (1924) 5 Lah 429 86 I C 592 (20) A L 124 Muhammad v Abdulla (28) A L 969 According to the Bombay ruling the appeal abates as against C only and it should be heard on the merits against A and B. (2) A sues his partners B, C, D and F for dissolution and for accounts of the partnership. A decree is passed in the suit by which it is ordered that a sum of Rs 9000 should be contributed by A, B and C and that out of that sum Rs 1740 should be paid to D and the rest to F. A appeals from the decree making B, C, D and F party respondents. B and C also appeal from the decree making A, D and F party respondents. Pending the appeal D dies. No application is made by the appellants in either appeal to bring on the record the legal representative of D within the period of limitation. The appeal abates as a whole for as the suit is for partnership accounts it is not one in which the appeals could proceed in the absence of the legal representative of D. Poy Chunder v Gunga Das (1904) 31 Cal 457 31 I A 71 Moti Lal v Ram Varan (1917) 39 All 301 40 I C 1006 Jamnadas v Sorabji (1891) 16 Bom 27

Appellate Court and abatement—Where a defendant appeals from a decree and the plaintiff respondent dies pending the appeal without the legal representatives

being joined within the period of limitation it is the appeal which abates and not the suit ( )

Inherent power to add legal representative as a party after abatement—Notwithstanding the abatement of a suit the Court has the power in a proper case to bring on the record the representative of a deceased defendant under s 151 and O 1 r 10. Thus B and C for partition of joint family property. A preliminary decree was passed and a commissioner is appointed to make a partition according to the rights declared in the decree. B then dies but no application is made to bring his legal representative on the record within the period of limitation. Though the suit abates as regards B the Court may add B's representative as a defendant (p). But no such order can be made if a preliminary decree has been passed (q).

Effect of decree against legal representative of deceased defendant—The words used in sec 395 were "any person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant." The words used in the present rule are "the legal representative of the deceased defendant." It was accordingly held under the Code of 1859 that where a person alleged by the plaintiff to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant was brought on the record without any objection by him and a decree was passed in the suit the estate of the deceased was bound by the decree in the absence of fraud or collusion (r). But in view of the altered wording of the present rule it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to allege that a particular person is the legal representative of a deceased defendant and for such person to be brought on the record as representing the estate of the deceased. Thus if the sole defendant dies pending a suit against him for the recovery of money leaving sons and daughters but in ignorance of the existence of these heirs his brother is brought on the record as his representative and a decree is passed against the estate of the deceased the decree is not binding on the estate and on the persons rightly entitled to that estate (s).

Two or more legal representatives—If there are several legal representatives it seems to suffice if at least one of them is impleaded whether in the suit (t), or in the appeal (u). The Lahore High Court in one case (t) held that rule 4 is sufficiently complied with if all the legal representatives known after diligent inquiry are joined. But in another case (v) where only two out of three heirs of a deceased respondent were brought on the record the same Court held that the appeal abated as the whole estate was not represented. See notes to r 3 above under the same head.

Indian Succession Act and legal representative—In the case of a person subject to the Indian Succession Act his legal representatives within the meaning of s 2 (11) of the Code are his executors or administrators and not his heirs (x).

Joint Hindu family and legal representative—See notes to r 3 above under the same head.

4 Death of insolvent respondent—An appeal preferred by the creditors of an insolvent against an order of adjudication abates on his death as the right to sue does not survive within the meaning of this rule (y)

Wrong person as legal representative—An application to bring on the record as legal representative of a deceased defendant a person who is not in fact such representative will be of no avail to save the running of limitation in the case of a subsequent application to implead the person who really is the legal representative (z) As already stated if the wrong person is impleaded as legal representative the decree will not bind the true heir (a)

What pleas may be taken by a legal representative—See sub r (2) and notes under the same head to r 3 above

Rehearing of suit or appeal—A plaintiff whose suit is heard and dismissed is not entitled to a rehearing of the suit on the ground that one of the defendants had died previous to the hearing of the suit and that the suit was heard without bringing the legal representative of the deceased defendant on the record The right to have the suit reheard is the right of the legal representative [which he would not care to exercise as the suit was dismissed] and not the right of the unsuccessful plaintiff The same rule applies to appeals (b)

Pro forma defendant—Omission to bring on record the legal representative of the defendant against whom no relief is claimed does not cause the suit to abate (c)

Death of defendant after preliminary and before final decree—It has been held in several cases that this rule applies where a defendant dies after the preliminary and before the final decree and that his legal representatives must be brought on the record otherwise the suit abates so far as concerns the deceased defendant (d) But it is difficult to reconcile these cases with the decision of Privy Council in Lachmi Narain v Bal Mukund (e) In a recent case the Oudh Court held relying upon Lachmi Narain a case that this rule does not apply where a defendant dies after the passing of a preliminary decree (f) See notes to r 3 above Death of plaintiff after preliminary and before final decree

Decree for or against a dead person—A decree against a person who was dead at the date of the institution of the suit is a nullity (g) Similarly a decree passed against a defendant who died pending the suit without bringing his legal representative on the record is a nullity and it cannot be executed against the legal representative (h) A decree passed against a respondent in ignorance of the fact of his death is also a nullity (i) If one of several defendants is discovered to have been dead at the institution of the suit there is no question of abatement nor should the suit be dismissed as against him The Court should remove the name of the deceased from the record and proceed under O 1 r 10 (j). A decree in a suit for rent against several joint tenants of whom some are dead at the institution of the suit is a nullity as against those who are dead but is valid as a money decree as against those who are living for under sec 43 of the Contract Act because the liability of a joint promisor is joint and several (1). But it has been held that a decree passed by the Privy Council against the respondents in ignorance of the death of one of them is not a nullity though the legal representative of the deceased was not brought on the record the decree being an order of the Sovereign (1).

O 41 r 20 and abatement.—O 41 r 20 does not override the provisions of O 2 of the Code (m).

Sub rule (2) Defence appropriate to his character as legal representative.—See notes to r 3 above. What pleas may be taken by a legal representative.

O 1 r 8, and abatement.—See notes to O 1 r 8 under the same head.

Execution proceedings.—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution of a decree see r 1 below.

Appeal.—It has been held by the High Court of Lahore that an adjudication that an appeal has stated as a whole amounts to a decree and is appealable as such (n). See notes to r 3 above. Appeal.

5 [S 367] Where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or a deceased defendant, such question shall be determined by the Court.

Determined by the Court as to legal representative of

- 1 The words where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative have been substituted for the words if any dispute arises as to who is the legal representative. The object is to make it clear that this rule applies not only where two or more persons claim to be the legal representative of a deceased party but where there is only one claimant and his representative character is denied. This is in accordance with the interpretation put upon the words of the old section in the undermentioned cases (o).
- 2 Under the old section where a question arose as to whether any person was or was not the legal representative of a deceased party the Court had the power either to stay the suit until the question was determined in another suit or to determine the question itself. Under the present rule the Court is bound to determine the question itself (p).
- 3 It is provided by rules 3 and 4 of this Order that once the Court determines who the legal representative is and the legal representative is brought on the record under those rules the Court shall proceed with the suit. No objection therefore as to the representative character of such person can be entertained after he is brought on the record though the hearing of the suit has not commenced Under the old section the objection could be taken at or before the first hearing of the suit. But the words at or before the first hearing have been omitted in the present rule the object being that the objections as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased party should be taken before such person is made a party under rules 3 and 4 above (g). But if a person alleging himself to be a legal representative is brought on the record as such without notice to the other side the other side is entitled to raise the objection at the hearing (r).

Legal representative—See s 2 cl (11) and notes to r 3 above. Legal representative of deceased plaintiff

Shall be determined—If the Court of first instance fails to determine the question as to who is the legal representative it is necessary for the appellate Court to determine it (s).

Objection as to representative character when to be taken—See notes above. Alteration in the rule No 3.

Effect of order under this rule—The Allahabad High Court at one time seemed to decide that this rule provides a summary procedure for appointing a person to be the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff for the purpose of prosecuting the suit and that an order appointing a legal representative does not operate as a final determination of the representative character of the person appointed in other words it does not operate as res judicata (t). But in a later case the same High Court disapproved of this decision and held that an order under this rule does operate as res judicata (u).

Power of Court to correct its order—The Court has power to correct an ex parte order made under this rule (v).

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order under this rule (w). But a party aggrieved by the order may object to the order in an appeal from the decree (s 100) provided he was a party to the decree (x). But the order will not be set aside unless it is shown that it has affected the decision of the case (y). See notes to r 3 above. Appeal

6 [Ver] Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing rules, whether the cause of action survives or not there shall be no abatement by reason of the death of either party between the conclusion of the hearing and the pronouncing of the judgment, but judgment may in such case be pronounced notwithstanding the death and shall have the same force and effect as if it had been pronounced before the death took place.

No abatement by reason of death after hearing—This rule is new. It gives effect to the decision in the undermentioned cases ( )

In a marriage suit the judgment referred to in this rule is the judgment supporting the final decree and not the judgment supporting the preliminary decree and the hearing referred to in the rule is the hearing if any upon which judgment is to be delivered determining the plaintiff's right to a final decree. Therefore this rule does not apply where a party to a marriage suit dies before the application for a final decree is made and heard (a). See notes to r 3 above. Death of plaintiff after preliminary and before final decree and notes to r 4 above. Death of defendant after preliminary and before final decree.

7 [S 369] (1) The marriage of a female plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate, but the suit may notwithstanding be proceeded with to judgment, and where the decree is against a female defendant, it may be executed against her alone.

(2) Where the husband is by law liable for the debts of his wife the decree may, with the permission of the Court, be executed against the husband also, and in case of judgment for the wife execution of the decree may, with such permission, be issued upon the application of the husband, where the husband is by law entitled to the subject matter of the decree.

Liability for wife's debts—See Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract Act 18 and notes thereto.

8 [S 370] (1) The insolvency of a plaintiff in any suit which the assignee or receiver might maintain for the benefit of his creditors, shall not cause the suit to abate, unless such assignee or receiver declines to continue the suit or (unless for any special reason the Court otherwise directs) to give security for the costs thereof within such time as the Court may direct.

(2) Where the assignee or receiver neglects or refuses to continue the suit and to give such security within the time so ordered, the defendant may apply for the dismissal of the suit on the ground of the plaintiff's insolvency, and the Court may make an order dismissing the suit and awarding

Power of Court to correct its order—The Court has power to correct an ex parte order made under this rule (v)

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order under this rule (w) But a party aggrieved by the order may object to the order in an appeal from the decree [s 10b] provided he was a party to the decree (x) But the order will not be set aside unless it is shown that it has affected the decision of the case (y) See notes to r 3 above Appeal

6 [New] Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing rules whether the cause of action survives or not there shall be no abatement by reason of the death of either party between the conclusion of the hearing and the pronouncing of the judgment but judgment may in such case be pronounced notwithstanding the death and shall have the same force and effect as if it had been pronounced before the death took place

No abatement by reason of death after hearing.—This rule is new. It gives effect to the decision in the underlined case (1).

In a mortgage suit the judgment referred to in the rule is the judgment upholding the final decree and not the judgment upholding the preliminary decree and the hearing referred to in the rule is the hearing final up on which judgment is to be delivered leaving the plaintiff a right to a final decree. Therefore this rule does not apply where a party takes mortgage suit before the application for a final decree is made and heard (a). See note 1 r 3 above. Death of plaintiff after preliminary and before final decree and note 1 r 4 above. Death of defendant after preliminary and before final decree.

7 [S 369] (1) The marriage of a female plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate, but the suit may notwithstanding be proceeded with to judgment, and where the decree is against a female defendant it may be executed against her alone.

(2) Where the husband is by law liable for the debts of his wife the decree may, with the permission of the Court, be executed against the husband also and in case of judgment for the wife execution of the decree may, with such permission, be issued upon the application of the husband, where the husband is by law entitled to the subject matter of the decree.

Liability for wife's debts—see Idol and Mulla's Indian Contract Act

8 [S 370] (1) The insolvency of a plaintiff in any suit which the assignee or receiver might maintain for the benefit of his creditors, shall not cause the suit to abate, unless such assignee or receiver declines to continue the suit or (unless for any special reason the Court otherwise directs) to give security for the costs thereof within such time as the Court may direct.

(2) Where the assignee or receiver neglects or refuses to continue the suit and to give such security within the time so ordered, the defendant may apply for the dismissal of the suit on the ground of the plaintiff's insolvency, and the Court may make an order dismissing the suit and awarding

8 to the defendant the costs which he has incurred in defending the same to be proved as a debt against the plaintiff's estate

Insolvency of plaintiff—This rule lays down the procedure to be followed when a plaintiff becomes insolvent. The suit should not be dismissed for default of appearance for O 9 r 8 cannot apply where there is known to be no person in the position of the plaintiff who has any right or duty to appear (b)

The procedure laid down in this rule applies to appeals see r 11 below. Thus if a decree is passed in a suit by A against B and B appeals from the decree and pending the appeal B becomes insolvent and the Official Assignee does not give security for costs the Court must under this rule dismiss the suit. If the plaintiff respondent has filed cross objections they could not be heard the dismissal of the suit being in effect an abatement of the appeal (c)

Insolvency of defendant—As to the case of the insolvency of a defendant in a presidency town it is now provided by sec 13 of the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909 that where a defendant to a suit has been adjudged an insolvent the Court may at any time after the making of the order of adjudication stay any suit or other proceeding pending against the insolvent before any Judge or Judges of the Court or in any other Court subject to the superintendence of the Court. The same section also enacts that any Court in which proceedings are pending against a debtor may on proof that an order of adjudication has been made against him under the Act either stay the proceedings or allow them to continue on such terms as it may think just. As to cases governed by the Provincial Insolvency Act 1900 see sec 29. See also notes to r 10 below.

Insolvency of the defendant joinder of Official Assignee

Insolvency—This rule does not apply to a case where the adjudication has been annulled. In such a case the dismissal for the non appearance of the plaintiff or the Official Assignee on the date fixed for the hearing is under O 9 r 9 (d)

Limitation—There is no limitation provided for the Official Assignee to appear and apply for substitution. Again where the plaintiff's name is struck off and the Official Assignee is substituted for the insolvent plaintiff and the adjudication is thereafter annulled there is no limitation for the plaintiff to appear and apply for the restoration of his name on the record (e)

Insolvency of pauper applicant—In the case of a pauper who has applied for leave to sue as a pauper the present rule can be applied only after leave to sue is granted but not before (f)

Costs payable by plaintiff prior to his insolvency—The general principle is that a person who comes in by representation whether it be an assignee in bankruptcy or as an executor or administrator of an original plaintiff where costs are due by the person whom he represents the suit cannot be carried on except upon the costs of the original suit being paid. It has accordingly been held that where a plaintiff who has been ordered to pay the costs of a proceeding in the suit becomes bankrupt and the suit is revived by his assignee the Court will stay proceedings until payment of the costs which the plaintiff has been ordered to pay (g). The security required of the Official Assignee is for costs incurred prior to the insolvency (h)

Costs of successful defendant—Where a suit is continued by the assignee in bankruptcy and the defendant obtains judgment with costs the defendant is entitled to be paid all his costs in full and not merely the costs as from the date of insolvency with liberty to prove for the costs previously incurred (i)

Practice—As to the form of the order under this rule see the undermentioned case (j)

Execution proceedings—This rule does not apply to proceedings in execution See r 12 below

Cause of action arising after insolvency—A an undischarged insolvent sues B for brokerage earned by him subsequent to his adjudication B applies for security for costs If the Official Assignee has not intervened no order should be made for security for costs (l) It may be observed that under the Presidency towns Insolvency Act 1909 property acquired by an insolvent after adjudication does not vest in the Official Assignee until he intervenes and claims it on behalf of the creditors In cases governed by the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920 such property vests immediately on the making of order of adjudication

9. [Ss 371, 372A] (1) Where a suit abates or is dismissed under this Order, no fresh suit shall be brought on the same cause of action

(2) The plaintiff or the person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or the assignee or the receiver in the case of an insolvent plaintiff may apply for an order to set aside the abatement or dismissal, and if it is proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from continuing the suit, the Court shall set aside the abatement or dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit

(3) The provisions of section 5 of the Indian Limitation Act 1877, shall apply to applications under sub rule (2)

Sub rule (1) No fresh suit on the same cause of action—This rule prohibits a fresh suit on the same cause of action As to the meaning of Cause of action see notes to s 20 above Cause of action

A a member of a joint Hindu family sues B for redemption of a mortgage of ancestral property executed by A to B A then dies A's heirs are not brought on the record and the suit abates Subsequently A's son and grandsons institute another suit against B for redemption of the same mortgage There is no indication that A's suit was brought by him in a representative capacity that is as representing the joint family The second suit is not barred (l)

r 9 r 4 (3) (m) (2) the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff where a suit has abated under r 3 (2) (3) the assignee of an insolvent plaintiff where a suit is dismissed under r 8 (2)

Limitation—An application under this rule for an order to set aside an abatement must be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement [Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 77] Similarly an application for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit must be made within 60 days from the date of the order of dismissal [Ib Art 172] If no application is made within 60 days the Court has the power under s 5 of the Limitation Act to admit the application after the expiry of that period if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within 60 days See sub r (3) In an Oudh case a decree was passed against a defendant in ignorance of his death but on application of his legal representatives the decree was treated as a nullity delay was excused the representatives impleaded and the appeal heard de novo (n)

Sub rule (2) Sufficient cause—An application to bring upon the record the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff must be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased [Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 176] An application to bring upon the record the legal representative of a deceased defendant must also be made within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased [Ib Art 177] If no application is made within the prescribed period the suit abates in the case of a deceased plaintiff under r 3 (2) and in the case of a deceased defendant under r 4 (3) But the plaintiff or the person claiming to be the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff as the case may be may apply under r (9) (2) for an order to set aside the abatement The application to set aside the abatement must be made within 60 days from the date of the abatement If no application is made within 60 days the Court may under s 5 of the Limitation Act admit the application if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within 60 days see sub r (3)

An abatement ought not to be set aside as a matter of course or lightly The reason is that when a suit abates the setting aside of the abatement deprives the party in whose favour the abatement operates of a valuable right Under sub r (9) the applicant has to satisfy the Court that he was prevented by some sufficient cause from making the application to bring the legal representative of the deceased upon the record within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased Under sub r (3) the applicant has to satisfy the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application to set aside the abatement within 60 days from the date of abatement (o) The two sub rules are distinct In dealing with an application under sub r (2) the Court has to decide whether there was sufficient cause for not bringing the legal representative of the deceased upon the record within 90 days from the date of the death of the deceased independently of sub rule (3) (p)

Ignorance of the death of the deceased (q) or of the whereabouts of the legal representatives of the deceased (r) may be a sufficient cause for excusing the delay unless the ignorance was due to negligence Where the defendants appealed from a decree passed against them and one of the defendants died pending the appeal and the legal representative of the deceased was under the impression that the co defendants were prosecuting the appeal and challenging the validity of the entire decree it was held that it was a sufficient cause for excusing the delay in making the application to bring him on the record in place of the deceased (j)

Sub rule (3)—See notes above Sub rule (2) Sufficient Cause

Substitution without setting aside abatement—The Patna High Court has held that where a sole defendant dies and the suit has abated no order can be made for substituting his legal representative in his place until the abatement has been set aside under this rule (t) The Bombay High Court would treat the omission to set aside the abatement as merely a formal defect (u)

Minor and abatement—Where an application on behalf of a minor to be brought on the record in place of his deceased father who was the plaintiff in the suit was dismissed under r 3 above as being time barred and the minor then made a second application to be brought on the record and that application was also dismissed it was held that the lower Court should have in the circumstances of the case treated the second application as one under r 9 to set aside the abatement and that it should have in the circumstances of the case set aside the abatement (v)

Remand—When the High Court in second appeal declares the first appeal to have abated it has no power to set aside the abatement but should remand the case to the lower Appellate Court for disposal under this rule (x)

Cause of action in revived suit.—Where an abatement is set aside under this rule the suit is revived No fresh cause of action can be imported into the revived suit for the proceedings in the revived suit are a continuation of the proceedings in the original suit (z)

Appeal—An appeal lies under the Code from an order refusing to set aside the abatement or dismissal of a suit O 43 r 1 (k) But no appeal lies under the Code from an order setting aside an abatement But it has been held that if the order setting aside the abatement is passed without jurisdiction and is really not one under r 9 it is appealable or at least open to revision (y)

Letters Patent appeal—The High Court of Allahabad has held that an appeal lies under cl 10 of the Letters Patent of that Court (corresponding with cl 15 of the Letters Patent of the High Court of Calcutta from an order of a single judge of the High Court refusing to set aside the abatement of an appeal The decision proceeds upon two grounds namely (1) that an order rejecting the application to set aside an abatement would if unappealable be a final order determining once and for all the rights of parties and (2) that an appeal was allowed by the Code to the High Court from an order of a District Judge refusing to set aside an abatement of a suit and it would be strange if there was permission to appeal as undoubtedly there was from the lower appellate Court to the High Court that there should not also be the right of appeal not merely in a suit but when the question arose in a Court of appeal (z)

The High Court of Calcutta has held that an order setting aside the abatement of a suit is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such the reason given being that when a suit has abated the setting aside of the abatement deprives the party in whose favour the abatement operates of a valuable right (a)

(2) The attachment of a decree pending an appeal therefrom shall be deemed to be an interest entitling the person who procured such attachment to the benefit of sub rule (1)

Alterations in the rule—(1) The words either in addition to or in substitution for the person from whom it has passed which occurred in sec 372 of the Code of 1859 after the words interest has come or devolved have been omitted. It would seem to follow from some of the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the undermentioned case (b) that the effect of the omission of those words is that a transferee pendente lite cannot under this Code be added as a party but that he may be substituted for his transferor. It is not clear whether their Lordships intended to go that length. If they did a difficulty would arise in every case where a mortgagee pendente lite applied to be joined as a party.

(2) Sub rule (2) is new. See notes below under the heading Sub rule (2)

Other cases of assignment creation or devolution of interest—It will be observed that the preceding rules deal with certain specified cases of assignment creation and devolution of interest. Rule 8 deals with the case of assignment on the insolvency of a plaintiff rule 7 with the case of creation of an interest in a husband on marriage and rules 2 3 and 4 with the case of devolution of interest on the death of a party to a suit. The present rule provides for cases of assignment creation and devolution of interest other than those mentioned above (c). See notes below Devolution of interest

Assignment of interest—This includes a sale or a mortgage or a lease (d) of the property in suit also an assignment of a mortgage (e)

Devolution of interest representative suits—Rules 2 3 and 4 relate to cases of devolution of interest on the death of a plaintiff or a defendant. These rules however do not apply where a suit is brought by or against a person in his representative character e.g. by or against the head of a mutt or the manager of a temple as such. In such a case the present rule applies so that if the head of the mutt or manager of the temple dies his successor may be substituted in his place. But the rule is not confined to devolution of interest by death. It also applies if the head of the mutt or manager of the temple resigns his office or is removed from office (f). In such a case also the successor to the head of the mutt (g) or to the manager of the temple (h) may be substituted as a party under this rule. But if the successor does not apply to be substituted as a party the original plaintiff may continue the suit and his successor will be bound by the result of the litigation (i). Where during the pendency of a suit brought by the manager of an encumbered estate the estate was released from management and restored to the owners it was held that the owners could apply under this rule to be made plaintiff in place of the manager (j).

Interest—The word interest in this rule means interest in the property the subject matter of the suit (l).

2. A sues the firm of B & C to recover Rs. 5,000. Pending the suit the firm of B & C transfers all its assets and liabilities to the firm of X & Y. Thereupon A applies to the Court under this rule to have the firm of X & Y joined as a party defendant. The firm of X & Y should not be joined as a party for the assignment cannot be said in any sense to be an assignment of the defendant's interest in the subject matter of the suit. Harish Chandra v Chandpore Co Ltd (1903) 30 Cal 961. (a) A sues B for recovery of possession of certain immovable property. The defence is that B is the full owner of the property. Pending the suit B is adjudged insolvent and his estate vests in the Official Assignee. The Official Assignee is entitled to be substituted as a party defendant under this rule. The reason is that the order of adjudication operates as a statutory transfer of the interest of the insolvent in the subject matter of the suit to the Official Assignee. see Punithavelu v Bhashyam (1902) 20 Mad 406. *Subbaya Bros v J. Annulment of order of adjudication—Where a suit is brought by the Official Assignee and the order of adjudication is annulled pending the suit the insolvent is entitled to be substituted as plaintiff under this rule (n)

During the pendency of a suit—These words mean before a final decree or order has been passed or made in the suit [see the marginal note to the rule] Hence the provisions of this rule apply if the assignment creation or devolution of interest takes place before a final decree or order is passed or made in the suit. In the case of an appeal the provisions of this rule apply if the assignment etc takes place before a final decree or order is passed or made in the appeal [see r 11 below] Though a suit may be compromised and the terms of the compromise filed in Court the suit will be deemed to be pending until a decree is passed in terms of the compromise. Until the decree is passed a transferee pendente lite is entitled to apply under this rule to be joined as a party (o). If he is joined as a party he is entitled to object to a decree being passed in terms of the compromise arrived at between his transferor and the opposite party (p). But if he is not joined as a party he is bound by the decree passed on the compromise (q).

Application under this rule when to be made—This rule only governs an application to continue a suit. An application by a transferee of the interest of a party made after the termination of a suit is not within this rule (r). But where an appeal is preferred from the decree an application under this rule can be made to the appellate Court even though the devolution of interest occurred when the case was pending in the trial Court (s).

He may however appeal from the decree under sec. 146 as a person claiming under B within the meaning of that section. Sivaramaswami v. Lakshmi (1918) 41 Mad 510 48 I C 840.

No new suit—It is clear from the terms of this rule that when a party is brought on the record under this rule there is as regards him no new suit at all. He is brought on the record as a party to a suit that has already been instituted and that suit is continued by or against him. His substitution as a party does not initiate as regards him a new proceeding. (u) See notes below Limitation.

Trial Court can bring assignee on record pending appeal—The Court of first instance has jurisdiction to bring on record the assignee of a party to the suit though there may be an appeal pending in the appellate Court from an interlocutory order made by the Court of first instance (1)

Transfer of decree—This rule does not apply to transfers of decrees O 21
 c 16 applies to such transfers (u)

Doctrine of lis pendens.—In this connection may be noted the provisions of sec. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act 1889 which runs as follows: During the active prosecution of a contentious suit or proceeding in which any right to any prosecution of a contentious suit or proceeding in which any right to any immovable property is directly and specifically in question the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or proceeding so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein except under the authority of the Court and on such terms as it may impose.

Limitation—The right to apply under this rule accrues from day to day and is not therefore barred by lapse of time. An application therefore to be added or substituted as a party under this rule may be made at any time (x).

Appeal—Under the Code of 1832 an appeal was allowed from an order giving leave to be joined as a party but none from an order refusing such leave (y). Under the present Code [O 43 r 1 (1)] an appeal lies from an order giving or refusing to give leave ( ). The High Court of Madras has held that an order purporting to be passed under this rule is appealable though on the facts the order should not have been passed under this rule (a).

Letters Patent Appeal—An order refusing leave to be joined as a party is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such (b).

11 [S 582, 1st para] In the application of this Order to appeals so far as may be, the word “plaintiff” shall be held to include an appellant, the word “defendant” a respondent, and the word “suit” an appeal.

Application of Order to appeals

12 [New] Nothing in rules 3, 4 and 8 shall apply to proceedings in execution of a decree or order.

Application of Order to proceedings

Execution proceedings—Rules 3 and 4 relate to the death of a party pending a suit or appeal. Rule 8 relates to the insolvency of a plaintiff pending a suit and the insolvency of an appellant pending an appeal. The present rule provides that nothing in rules 3, 4 and 8 shall apply to proceedings in execution of a decree. It sets at rest the conflict on the question whether the provisions relating to the abatement of suits and appeals apply to proceedings in execution.

ORDER XXIII

Withdrawal and Adjustment of Suits

1 [S 73] (1) At any time after the institution of a suit the plaintiff may, as against all or any of the defendants, withdraw his suit or abandon part of his claim.

Withdrawal of suit or abandonment of part of claim

(2) Where the Court is satisfied—

(a) that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or

(b) that there are other sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit for the subject matter of a suit or part of a claim, it may, on such terms as it thinks fit, grant the plaintiff permission to withdraw from such suit or abandon such part of a claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject matter of such suit or such part of a claim.

(3) Where the plaintiff withdraws from a suit, or abandons part of a claim, without the permission referred to in

1 a case however the Court should not act under this rule but return the plaint under O 7 r 10 to the plaintiff to be presented to the proper Court (u) But O 7 r 10 does not apply to Chartered High Courts In the case therefore of a Chartered High Court the Court may it seems act under this rule

Other sufficient grounds —Sec 97 of the Code of 1859 ran as follows —

If the plaintiff at any time before final judgment satisfies the Court that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the same matter it shall be competent to the Court to grant such permission on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it may deem proper

It is to be noted that sec 97 of the Code of 1859 did not contain the words some formal defect which occur in the present Code In Walson v Collector of Rayshaye (v) the plaintiff sued the defendant to set aside an auction sale of a putnee Taluk for arrears of rent A preliminary issue was framed whether the plaintiff was in a position to sue A commission was issued for the examination of witnesses but it was returned unexecuted as the witnesses had not been presented for examination Upon this the Court finding no excuse for the plaintiff's neglect dismissed the suit for want of evidence but with a reservation that the order made was not to be a bar to the plaintiff from proceeding as if the action has not been brought The plaintiff then brought a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action The High Court of Bengal held that the second suit was barred as res judicata under s 2 of the Code of 1859 This decision was affirmed on appeal by the Privy Council In the course of the judgment their Lordships of the Privy Council referring apparently to sec 97 of the Code of 1859 said as follows —

There is a proceeding in those Courts (Courts of India) called a non suit which operates as a dismissal of the suit without barring the right of the party to litigate the matter in a fresh suit But that seems to be limited to cases of misjoinder either of parties or matters in contest in the suit to cases in which a material document has been rejected because it has not borne proper stamp and to cases in which there has been an erroneous valuation of the subject of the suit In all those cases the suit fails by reason of some point of form but their Lordships are aware of no case in which upon an issue joined and the party having failed to produce the evidence which he was bound to produce in support of that issue liberty has been given to him to bring a second suit except in the particular instance that is now before them

The passage cited above indicates their Lordships' view of the meaning of the words sufficient grounds in sec 9 of the Code of 1859 This decision was followed by the High Court of Bengal in Madan Ram v I rail (x) where it was held that a plaintiff cannot be permitted to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit after issues have been joined and he has failed to produce the evidence to support his claim Madan Ram a case was also a case under the Code of 1859 The words by reason of some formal defect appeared for the first time in sec 313 of the Code of 1877 The decision in Walson a case was also followed by the High Court of Calcutta in Kharda Co Ltd v Doorga Charan (y) a case under the present Code The question in that case was whether a plaintiff can be permitted to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit after he has adduced all his evidence and finds that the evidence is insufficient to establish his case It was contended for the plaintiff that the words other sufficient grounds were wide enough to entitle the Court to allow the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit under any circumstances that might be deemed sufficient by the Court but this contention was overruled and it was held that the Court had no power to allow a plaintiff to withdraw from the suit after evidence had been adduced and the evidence was found to be insufficient to support his case. In the course of his judgment Mookerji J. after referring to clauses (a) and (b) of sub rule (2) said: "The intention plainly is that a ground indicated in clause (b) must be of the same nature as the ground specified in clause (a). This decision has been followed by the same High Court in subsequent cases (g). The High Courts of Patna (2) and Lahore (a) have followed the Calcutta decisions. The Oudh Court also holds that other sufficient grounds must be ejusdem generis with a formal defect (b). The High Court of Bombay held in some cases that the Court should not allow a suit to be withdrawn after the parties were ready for trial if such withdrawal might operate to the prejudice of the defendant (c). But this view was dissented from in a later case in which the Court followed the Calcutta decisions (d). In a recent case the same High Court held that it is wrong to grant leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to file a fresh suit after the evidence is concluded though the hearing may be adjourned for final arguments (e). In Allahabad (f) leave to withdraw has been granted where the plaintiff fails to give formal proof of a document which is essential for his success. In Madras there is a conflict of opinion whether the words 'other sufficient grounds' mean grounds analogous to a formal defect as held in Calcutta or include grounds which may not be analogous to a formal defect. In one case (g) the High Court held that the words 'other sufficient grounds' must be ejusdem generis with the words 'some formal defect' and that the Court had no power under this rule to give leave to the plaintiff after a substantial portion of his evidence had been heard. In a later case (h) however Sadashiva Ayyar J. said that the words 'other sufficient grounds' were not ejusdem generis with the words 'some formal defect' and that they included grounds which might not be analogous to a formal defect and that even if they did not objection to a suit on the ground of jurisdiction or insufficient Court fees were analogous to formal defects. It appears therefore that the majority of Judges are in favour of the view that the mere inability of the plaintiff to prove his case is not a sufficient ground within the meaning of this rule for giving him leave to withdraw with liberty to institute a fresh suit.

The Calcutta High Court has held that the plaintiff should not be allowed to withdraw his suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit after the suit has been heard and decided on the merits (i). Where a plaintiff sought to recover a sum of money upon certain allegations which were found untrue by the first Court and the first Court dismissed the suit and on appeal the District Judge came to the same conclusion but granted leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit the High Court held that the order should not have been made and set it aside (j).

On such terms as it thinks fit.—Where leave is granted to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit the defendant is

In a recent case the same High Court held that it is wrong to grant leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to file a fresh suit after the evidence is concluded though the hearing may be adjourned for final arguments (e). In Allahabad (f) leave to withdraw has been granted where the plaintiff fails to give formal proof of a document which is essential for his success. In Madras there is a conflict of opinion whether the words 'other sufficient grounds' mean grounds analogous to a formal defect as held in Calcutta or include grounds which may not be analogous to a formal defect. In one case (g) the High Court held that the words 'other sufficient grounds' must be ejusdem generis with the words 'some formal defect' and that the Court had no power under this rule to give leave to the plaintiff after a substantial portion of his evidence had been heard. In a later case (h) however Sadashiva Ayyar J. said that the words 'other sufficient grounds' were not ejusdem generis with the words 'some formal defect' and that they included grounds which might not be analogous to a formal defect and that even if they did not objection to a suit on the ground of jurisdiction or insufficient Court fees were analogous to formal defects. It appears therefore that the majority of Judges are in favour of the view that the mere inability of the plaintiff to prove his case is not a sufficient ground within the meaning of this rule for giving him leave to withdraw with liberty to institute a fresh suit.

The Calcutta High Court has held that the plaintiff should not be allowed to withdraw his suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit after the suit has been heard and decided on the merits (i). Where a plaintiff sought to recover a sum of money upon certain allegations which were found untrue by the first Court and the first Court dismissed the suit and on appeal the District Judge came to the same conclusion but granted leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit the High Court held that the order should not have been made and set it aside (j).

On such terms as it thinks fit—Where leave is granted to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit the defendant is

1 ordinarily entitled to the costs of the suit (l) The High Court of Madras has held that where leave is granted to a plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs on or before a specified date and he fails to do so he is precluded from bringing a second suit and if such suit is brought it should be dismissed (l) That Court also held that if leave is granted to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs (without specifying any date) the plaintiff is precluded from bringing a second suit unless the costs are paid before the institution of the second suit The payment of costs after the close of the trial in the second suit is not a compliance with the condition (m) But the same Court has held that when it is absolutely impossible for the plaintiff to pay the costs on or before the date fixed by the Court as where the exact amount of costs cannot be ascertained in time the Court has power to extend the time (n)

The High Court of Calcutta has not taken the same strict view of the condition as to the payment of costs as the Madras High Court Thus in Abdul Azi v Ebrahim (o) where leave was granted to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs it was held that though the payment of costs was a condition precedent to the institution of a second suit non payment of costs before the institution of the second suit did not render the fresh suit bad ab initio and further that payment of costs before the trial of the fresh suit cured the irregularity In Shillal v Gaya (p) Sir Lawrence Jenkins while agreeing with the result of the ruling in Abdul Azi v Ebrahim based his decision on somewhat different ground In that case also permission was granted to the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs The plaintiff did not pay the costs and brought a second suit The suit was dismissed by the Munsif for non payment of costs The plaintiff appealed to the Subordinate Judge Pending the appeal the plaintiff paid the defendant's costs The Subordinate Judge thereupon sent back the case to the Munsif for trial on the merits It was held that inasmuch as the permission to withdraw and bring a fresh suit was made conditional on a certain payment the original suit could not be deemed to be withdrawn until those costs were paid and it must therefore be deemed to be a pending suit which became disposed of as soon as payment was made In the course of the judgment the learned Judge said

When a plaintiff has obtained leave to withdraw upon payment of costs it is his duty to pay the costs at once for until they were paid there is no withdrawal with the permission of the Court In that view when the case came before the Munsif he was not entitled to dismiss it All he could do was to regard sec 10 (of the Code) as a bar to his proceeding with the trial of the suit In so far as he dismissed it he exercised a power that was not vested in him and I think the Subordinate Judge was right when on payment of the costs he set aside the decree of the Munsif and sent back the case in order that the Munsif should proceed with the trial for on the payment of those costs there was the withdrawal complete under O 23 It appears to me important in cases of this kind to have regard to the precise terms of the section and I think it will be well that the Court when giving permission to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit should see that the orders are complete and the proper order in such circumstances is one which limits the time within which the payment should be made and which goes on to direct that on failure to pay within the time the original suit is dismissed with costs The High Court of Patna has followed the Calcutta decisions (q) The High Court of Madras has dissented from the view taken by the Calcutta High Court in Shillal v Gaya and held that the withdrawal operates not when the costs are paid but from the date of the Court's order granting permission to withdraw (r)

Where a plaintiff who had brought a suit for redemption against the mortgagee was allowed to withdraw the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit within two years and he brought the fresh suit after two years the High Court of Bombay held that he was entitled to do so. The reason given was that a mortgagor has a right to sue for redemption at any time within the period of limitation unless his equity of redemption has in the meantime been extinguished (s)

Notice.—Though this rule does not specifically require that notice of an application under it must be given to the opposite party still it is an elementary rule of universal application that a judicial order which may possibly affect or prejudice any party cannot be made unless he has been afforded an opportunity to be heard. Hence if an order is made under this rule granting leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit without giving notice to the opposite party the order will be set aside under s 115 of the Code on the ground of material irregularity (t)

Permission need not be express.—The permission mentioned in this section need not be given in express terms. It is sufficient if it can be implied from the order read with the application on which the order was made (u)

Form of order.—Where leave is granted to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit the order must not be one dismissing the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit but one granting permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit (v). Where leave is refused the Court should simply dismiss the application. It should not make an order disposing of the suit on the assumption that the plaintiff would withdraw the suit under sub-rule (1) if the application was refused (w)

Permission extends to one fresh suit only.—The permission granted in the original suit to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter extends only to the filing of one fresh suit and not more. Hence where leave is granted to a plaintiff to bring a fresh suit on payment of the defendant's costs and the plaintiff brings a fresh suit without paying the costs and the suit is dismissed the dismissal is a bar to the institution of a third suit in respect of the same subject matter (x)

Dismissal of suit coupled with liberty to bring a fresh suit.—There is no power in the Courts of India to dismiss a suit with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit for the same matter (y)

Liberty to consolidate withdrawn suit with a pending suit.—A Court it seems has no power under this rule to grant permission to a plaintiff to consolidate the claim in the suit which is withdrawn with a claim in another suit pending at the time. But if such an order is made it cannot be said to be one made without jurisdiction and it is not a nullity (z). But there is nothing to prevent the Court from granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from two suits with liberty to bring a fresh suit consolidating the claims in the two suits (a)

1 Withdrawing with permission Additional relief in fresh suit.—The effect of withdrawing a suit with the permission of the Court is to leave the parties in the same position as that in which they stood before the suit was brought. Therefore the plaintiff may include in the fresh suit a relief which he might have included in the first suit but which he had omitted to include in it (b)

Withdrawing with permission after suit has abated against some of the defendants.—Where a suit has abated against a defendant and it is then withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit such permission does not entitle the plaintiff to join the legal representatives of such defendant as party defendants in the fresh suit (c)

Withdrawing without permission Bar of fresh suit.—Where a plaintiff withdraws from a suit without the permission of the Court he is precluded from instituting a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter [sub rule (3)] and against the same defendant. The rule is mandatory and when a suit by an idol was withdrawn a second suit by a sebari or manager of the idol was held to be barred (d). See notes below Same defendant and Same subject matter

Same defendant.—Though the rule does not expressly say so the fresh suit that is barred must be a suit against the same defendant. A second suit will not be barred if it is brought against a different person. A obtains a decree against B and in execution of the decree attached certain property alleged to belong to B. C intervenes under O 21 r 55 alleging that the property belongs to him. C's application is rejected and he brings a regular suit against A alone to establish his title to the property. C then withdraws from the suit without obtaining permission of the Court to bring a second suit for the same subject matter. After the suit has been withdrawn the attachment falls through. A then re-attaches the same property in execution of the same decree and the property is sold and purchased by D. C does not appear to contest the second execution proceeding after the withdrawal of his suit. He then institutes a suit against D to recover possession of the property alleging that the property is his sole and exclusive property. The suit is not barred under this rule as B the judgment debtor was not a party to the first suit (e)

Same subject matter.—As already stated if a suit is withdrawn without the permission of the Court the plaintiff is precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter. The expression used in the corresponding s 373 of the Code of 1882 was matter. A Calcutta case under the Code of 1882 said that matter did not mean property but that it had reference to the right in property which the plaintiff seeks to enforce. In that case A had instituted a suit to establish his right to sell certain property in satisfaction of a decree against B but he withdrew the suit without obtaining leave to bring a fresh suit. Subsequently he instituted another suit to establish his right to sell the same property in satisfaction of another decree against B. It was held that the second suit was not barred. The Court said. Now though the property in respect of which the present suit is brought is the same as that in respect of which the former suit was brought still that would not be sufficient to make the present suit one for the same matter as that for which the former suit was brought within the meaning of s 373 for the cause of action in the two suits was different (f). In a Madras case under the present Code where the next reversionary heir of a deceased Hindu instituted a suit against the widow of the deceased and an alieness from her of her husband's property for a declaration that the alienation was not binding on the estate and on the death of the widow withdrew the suit without obtaining leave to bring a fresh suit it was held that the subsequent suit which he brought against the alienee for possession of the same property was not barred. Wallis C.J. in delivering the judgment of the Court said: "The terms subject matter and the same matter which occurred in the corresponding section 373 of the old Code have not been defined and must we think be construed strictly in a penal provision of this character. Without attempting an exhaustive definition of all that may be included in the term subject matter we are of opinion that where as in the present case the cause of action and the relief claimed in the second suit are not the same as the cause of action and the relief claimed in the first suit the second suit cannot be considered to have been brought in respect of the same subject matter as the first suit." (g) The contrary however was held by the Chief Court of the Punjab in a case in which the facts were almost similar to the Madras case (h). In a Bombay case (i) A sued to eject L but finding that the notice to quit was defective withdrew the suit without obtaining the leave of the Court. Subsequently A gave a formal notice to quit and brought a fresh suit for ejectment. It was held that the suit was not barred under this rule as the previous suit was not for the same subject matter as the second suit. Scott C.J. said: "We are of opinion that subject matter means to use the words of Order I Rule 1 the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed. Obviously the first series of acts or transactions which formed the basis of the first suit was incomplete or the plaintiff would have been able to prosecute his suit to decree. It was incomplete because there was no notice to quit. The second series of acts or transactions is complete because the notice to quit has been given and therefore the two suits are not in respect of the same subject matter. But the withdrawal of a prior suit for a declaration of title to certain war bonds is a bar to a subsequent suit for consequential relief in respect of the same bonds [that is for recovery of possession]." (j)

A suit for partition however stands on a different footing the cause of action in such a suit being a recurring cause of action. Hence the withdrawal of a suit for partition of joint property though without permission of the Court is no bar to a second suit for partition of the same property against the same defendants (l).

Withdrawing without leave of Court but with consent of defendant—In a case decided under s. 97 of the Code of 1859 it was observed by Norman J. that where a plaintiff withdraws his suit without the permission of the Court but with the consent of the defendant he is not precluded from instituting a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter (k). The observations of Norman J. on this point have been doubted in a recent case (m). The doubt seems to be well founded.

Withdrawing from suit pending arbitration—When the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration by an order of the Court made under Schedule II para. 3 the Court has no power under this rule to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit. The provisions of this rule do not apply to such a case for when once a matter is referred to arbitration the Court is precluded from dealing with it in the same suit save in the manner and to the extent provided in Schedule II. A sues B for possession of certain property. The matters in difference between the parties are referred to arbitration by an order of the Court. The Court has no power either before or after the award is made to grant

1 permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit (x) But where a reference to arbitration has been made without the intervention of the Court (that is not by an order of the Court) and one of the parties to the reference applies to the Court under Schedule II para 20 to file the award the provisions of this rule apply and it is open to the applicant to withdraw the application though numbered and registered as a suit under that para 20 under sub r (1) of this rule (o)

Power of appellate Court to give leave to plaintiff to withdraw from suit—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (p) Madras (q) and Bombay (r) that where a plaintiff's suit is dismissed and he appeals from the decree the appellate Court has power to allow the plaintiff appellant to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of the same subject matter see s 107 (2) The contrary view seems to be implied in a Calcutta decision (s) But an appellate Court has no power to grant such leave before the appeal is admitted (f)

Erroneous order granting leave to withdraw and jurisdiction—An order for withdrawal of a suit with leave to institute a fresh suit made in circumstances not within the scope of this rule that is made in a case where there is no formal defect or other sufficient ground within the meaning of this rule cannot be treated as an order made without jurisdiction [though it may be challenged in revision on the ground of material irregularity—see notes below Revision] such order is consequently not null and void (u) The order not being a nullity a fresh suit instituted upon leave so granted is maintainable it is not barred as res judicata Further the Court trying the subsequent suit is not competent to enter into the question whether the Court which granted the plaintiff permission to withdraw the first suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit had power to make the order and had properly made it (v)

Appeal—An order under this rule granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit or to abandon a part of his claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit is not appealable Such an order is not one of the appealable orders mentioned in O 43 r 1 nor is it a decree within the meaning of s 2 (2) (w)

Letters Patent appeal—An order of a single Judge of a High Court granting leave to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and appealable as such (x) Similarly an order of a single Judge of a High Court dismissing an application for the revision of an order giving leave to withdraw a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is a judgment within the meaning of that clause and is appealable as such (y)

Revision—Though an order granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit is not appealable it is open to revision if it falls within s 115 of the Code An order is open to revision under that section if the Court which made it had no jurisdiction to make it as in the undermentioned case ( ) or if the Court acted illegally or with material irregularity in making the order

An order granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit in circumstances not within the scope of the present rule that is in a case in which there is no formal defect or other sufficient ground for making it as where the order is made on the ground of the plaintiff's inability to prove his case cannot be treated as an order made without jurisdiction [see notes Erroneous order granting leave to withdraw and jurisdiction] The High Court therefore has no power to interfere with such an order on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction (a) But it has been held in a series of cases that the High Court will interfere with such an order on the ground of material irregularity and will set it aside in revision (b) Similarly the High Court will interfere and set aside in revision on the ground of material irregularity an order granting leave to a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit if the order was made ex parte (c) or if leave was granted without assigning any reasons (d) or if leave was granted on the ground that there was a formal defect or other sufficient ground but no inquiry was made as to whether there was in fact a formal defect or other sufficient ground (e) In a Patna case, the High Court held that where the defendant himself alleges a formal defect the Court has jurisdiction to pass any order it pleases under this rule (f) But this seems to be an extreme view In a Madras case where the plaintiff deliberately undervalued his suit and paid insufficient court fees and brought the suit in a District Munsif's Court and then applied for leave to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit and leave was granted, the Court was held to have acted with material irregularity and the order was set aside in revision (g) In a Calcutta case the first Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit on a finding that the plaintiff's allegations were untrue On appeal the District Judge came to the same conclusion but granted leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit The High Court held that the order was not properly made and set it aside (h)

In Allahabad it has been held that the High Court will interfere in revision if the lower Court has not applied its mind to the circumstances of the case and the provisions of this rule in other words if it has not exercised a judicial discretion (i) But if the lower Court has exercised a judicial discretion, the High Court will not interfere in revision merely because the High Court itself might have taken a different view of the matter (j)

Effect of reversal of order granting leave to withdraw—Where a fresh suit is filed before the reversal in revision of an order granting leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit the procedure is to declare the fresh suit null and void and to direct the lower Court to proceed with the original suit from the stage which it had reached when the order granting leave was made by that Court (l)

Sub rule (4) Co plaintiffs

Co plaintiffs—By sub r (4) it is enacted that nothing in this rule shall be deemed to authorize the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others. This sub rule limits the jurisdiction of the Court to grant permission to withdraw a suit to cases where all the plaintiffs join in the application. Where the Court in contravention of this sub rule allows two out of four plaintiffs without the consent of the other two to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit it acts without jurisdiction and a second suit in respect of the same subject matter is barred. But if the suit that was withdrawn was a suit for partition the second suit it has been held will not be barred for a cause of action in a suit for partition is a recurring one and a joint owner has a right to come to Court at any time provided he proves that he has a subsisting joint title and possession in the property within the period of limitation (i)

Rule does not apply

Bengal Rent Act—The provisions of this rule do not apply to suits instituted under the Bengal Rent Act 10 of 1859 which is a complete Code in itself (m)

Probate proceedings—This rule does not apply to probate proceedings the provision in s 55 of the Probate and Administration Act 5 of 1881 [now Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925 s 208] being qualified by the words so far as the circumstances of the case will admit (n)

Execution proceeding—See r 4 below

2 [S 374] In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding rule, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted

Limitation law not affected by first suit

Limitation—The fresh suit must be instituted within the period of limitation. It will not lie after the period of limitation even though the suit that was permitted to be withdrawn was within the period of limitation (o). But if the first suit was brought in a Court that had no jurisdiction to entertain it that Court would have no power under rule 1 above to give leave to withdraw with liberty to bring a fresh suit. If it does give leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit the order is one made without jurisdiction. Hence if a second suit is instituted though upon leave so granted the case will be governed not by the provisions of this rule but by those of sec 14 of the Limitation Act 1908 and the time during which the first suit was prosecuted will be excluded in computing the period of limitation for the second suit (p) or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit

Alterations in the rule—This rule differs from the corresponding s 375 of the Code of 1880 in three respects namely —

- 1 The words where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that have been added into the rule to set at rest the conflict of opinion noted below in the commentary under the head Where a compromise set up by one party is denied by the other
- 2 The words the Court shall order such agreement to be recorded have been substituted for the words such agreement shall be recorded The object is to bring out the word order prominently as an appeal is now given from an order made under this rule recording or refusing to record an agreement See O 43 r 1 cl (m) and notes below Appeal
- 3 The words and such decree shall be final so far as it relates to so much of the subject matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement compromise or satisfaction which occurred in the old section after the words so far as it relates to the suit have been omitted See notes to s 96 Sub s (3) consent decree not appealable

Scope of the rule—The agreement compromise or satisfaction contemplated by this rule may (1) relate to the whole suit or (2) it may relate only to a part thereof or (3) it may also comprise matters that do not relate to the suit When the agreement relates to the whole suit the Court must on being invited by the parties record the agreement and pass a decree in accordance with the agreement and the suit stops there Where the agreement relates to a part only of the suit the Court must on the application of the parties pass a decree in accordance with the agreement and the suit may be proceeded with as to the rest Where the agreement besides relating to the suit or a part thereof comprises matters that do not relate to the suit the decree must comprise only such terms of the agreement as relate to the suit but not the rest As to the case where a decree comprises matters not relating to the suit see below notes Where the decree comprises matters that do not relate to the suit

Procedure to be followed under this rule—It is important to note that a consent decree under this rule can be passed only after an order is made directing the compromise to be recorded This is not a mere matter of form as the aggrieved party has a right of appeal against such order under O 43 r 1 cl (m) (g) See notes below Appeal

Where a compromise set up by one party is denied by the other—If a party to a suit alleges that the suit has been adjusted by a lawful agreement and applies to the Court to record the agreement and to pass a decree in accordance therewith but the opposite party to the suit denies the agreement or wishes to recede from it the question arises whether the Court has power in the one case to decide if the agreement was effected and to pass a decree accordingly and in the other case to pass a decree in spite of the opposite parties reluctance Under the old section both branches of this question were answered in the affirmative by the High Courts of Bombay Madras and Calcutta (r), but in the negative by the High Court of Allahabad (s). According to the Allahabad decisions the Court had no power under the old section to record an agreement and to pass a decree in accordance therewith unless both the parties consented before the Court to have the agreement recorded. Thus even where there was an agreement to adjust the suit the Court could act under that section only if both the parties were in agreement at the moment of moving the Court and if they were not then in accord the agreement could only be enforced by a fresh suit for specific performance. The conflict arose from the words "if a suit be adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise with which s 375 commenced." The present rule gives effect to the Bombay Madras and Calcutta decisions. The words "where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part" clearly show that the Court has power under this rule where an agreement or compromise is denied to decide whether as a fact the alleged agreement or compromise was made and if it is established that it was made to record it (t).

Submission and award—It was held in two Bombay cases under the Code of 1882 that when the matters in difference in a pending suit are referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court and an award is made the submission and the award must be treated as an adjustment of the suit by an agreement within the meaning of s 373 of that Code and might be recorded as an adjustment under that section (u). In the later of the two cases (1) Starling J said that it was open to the plaintiff to proceed under s 525 (now sch II para 20) but that it was not obligatory upon him to do so as there was no express provision in the Code of 1882 that no other course than that prescribed by s 595 should be followed.

The present Code however does contain such a provision for it is enacted by s 80 that save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Arbitration Act 1899 or by any other law for the time being in force all references to arbitration whether by an order in a suit or otherwise and all proceedings thereunder shall be governed by the provisions contained in the second Schedule. In a Bombay case decided under this Code it was held by Davar J that where in a pending suit the parties go to arbitration without the intervention of the Court and an award is made the provisions of para 20 of Schedule II do not apply to the award, but that the submission and the award may be recorded as an adjustment under this rule. As to s 80 it was said that the words "any other law for the time being in force" were wide enough to include the provisions of O 23 r 3 (w). Four years later Sir Norman Macleod another judge of the same High Court held in Shahajshah v Tyab Hays Ayub (x) that the words "any other law for the time being in force" in s 80 do not include the present rule and that having regard to the provisions of that section a submission and an award could not be recorded as an adjustment under this rule and that the correct procedure was to apply to the Court to file the award under paragraphs 20 and 21 of Sch. II. The above decisions were reviewed by Sir Norman Macleod in Manila v Goculdas (y). The learned Judge came to the conclusion that his decision in Shahajshah's case was erroneous and said "They [that is the parties] may make the agreement an order of Court and then paras 1 to 15 of Schedule II apply. If they do not make the agreement an order of Court they cannot ask for the agreement to be filed under para 17 they cannot ask for the award if made to be filed under para 20 and 21 If an award is made and both parties accept the award they can apply for a consent decree in terms thereof and there is no need to apply for an order recording the terms of the adjustment If the plaintiff disputes the award for any reason and proceeds with the suit the defendant may plead the award and have the case set down for hearing on the issue whether the award is binding as an adjustment If the defendant disputes the award, the plaintiff may have the case set down for trial on the issue whether the adjustment could be recorded. Either party may file a suit to enforce the award and apply for a stay of the original suit The ground of the ruling in Mansilal's case is that a submission and an award properly made in accordance with the submission amounts to an adjustment within the meaning of this rule and as such it may be enforced under the general law of contract The result according to that ruling is that where parties to a suit refer their disputes to arbitration without the intervention of the Court and an award is made an application to press a decree in terms of the award is an application to record a compromise within the meaning of this rule Further if an objection is taken to the award on the ground of misconduct on the part of the arbitrator the Court acting under this rule has jurisdiction under this rule to enquire into the charge of misconduct If the Court does make the inquiry and refuses to record the submission and award the order is not open to revision under s 115 above ( ) The High Court of Calcutta has dissented from the decision in Mansilal's case and held that the words any other law for the time being in force in s 89 do not include the present rule further that where in a pending suit the parties go to arbitration without an order of the Court the award cannot be enforced under this rule or Schedule II or under the Arbitration Act also that if a submission to arbitration of matters in difference in a pending suit is to take place there is no provision for it other than the provisions in Schedule II (a) The result according to the Calcutta decisions is that if an award is made under a reference without an order of the Court in a pending suit the Court should not take any notice of the award, and the suit may be proceeded with on the application of either party (b) The High Court of Lahore has held that an award made without the intervention of the Court in a pending suit cannot be recorded as an adjustment under this rule unless all parties agree thereto (c) A Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad has dissented from the Calcutta rulings and held that a submission and an award may be recorded as an adjustment under this rule (d) And so has a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (e) The Bombay High Court has recently reconsidered the matter in a Full Bench without altering its opinion (f) but it is submitted with respect that the view taken by the Calcutta High Court is correct In a recent Bombay case (g) Rangnekar J expressed his preference for the view taken by the Calcutta High Court If a party does not object to the submission and award being recorded as an adjustment under this rule he is estopped from objecting that the Court had no power to do so under this rule (h)

A mere agreement to refer to arbitration matters in difference in a pending suit where the parties have not gone beyond the agreement to refer and no award has been made cannot be treated as an adjustment of the suit within the meaning of this rule (i)

- 3 Further a decree obtained upon an award on a reference to the presiding judge and another individual must be regarded as a consent decree and it is not subject to the provisions of Sch. II (j)

Agreement adjusting a suit—Where in the course of a suit the pleaders for both parties agreed that if a certain fact appeared upon a certain document the Court should decree the suit otherwise the suit should be dismissed it was held that the agreement was not one adjusting the suit within the meaning of this rule for it was not complete and left something to be done by the Court viz to ascertain whether a certain fact appeared upon a certain document (k) But an agreement that the parties will consent to a decree being passed in terms to be stated by a person named is an adjustment of the claim (l) Where a defendant made an offer to the plaintiff that if a certain witness in the case would eat lachcha food served by the plaintiff the suit should be decreed and the plaintiff accepted the offer and the witness ate the food served by the plaintiff it was held that the offer and its acceptance amounted to a contract and that the suit should be decreed It was also held that the present rule did not apply to such a case (m)

Agreement to take oath under the Oaths Act—It was agreed in the course of the hearing of a suit between the plaintiff and the defendant that the plaintiff should take a certain oath on a certain date and that if he did so there should be a decree for him but that if he failed to do so his suit should be dismissed but it was held the agreement does not amount to an adjustment of the suit so as to entitle the defendant to have the suit dismissed on plaintiff's failure to take the oath The Court should not dismiss the suit but should record the refusal and the reasons thereof under s 12 of the Oaths Act 10 of 1873 and proceed with the trial (n)

Lawful agreement or compromise.—Where both parties to a suit apply to the Court under this rule to pass a decree in accordance with the compromise arrived at between them the Court has no power to refuse to pass the decree on the ground that it considers the compromise is too favourable to one of the parties (o) An agreement may be lawful although it is voidable for fraud or undue influence (p) The rule does not refer to such agreements but if the agreement or compromise is unlawful as where it is opposed to public policy the Court should refuse to pass a decree in accordance with the compromise even if the parties consent (q) If a decree is passed under this rule on a compromise which is not lawful the Court should not enforce the decree in execution proceedings Thus a sale of an office attached to a temple is against public policy Hence if in a suit against the holder of such an office a compromise is arrived at whereby the holder of the office consents to the office being sold in satisfaction of the debt due to the plaintiff and a decree is passed on the compromise the Court should notwithstanding the consent decree refuse to sell the office in execution (r) It is clear that if the matter had rested in contract only the Court could not have enforced the sale in a suit brought for that purpose The mere fact that the contract is embodied in a decree does not alter the incidents of the contract By private agreement converted into a decree parties cannot empower themselves to do that which they could not have done by private agreement alone (s) Therefore a decree passed on a compromise with a minor (t) or with a guardian ad litem of a minor after the minor has attained majority (u) is a nullity. The principle is that where a decree is based on an agreement of compromise the Court must be taken to adopt the agreement with all its incidents (v).

The contract of the parties is not the less a contract and subject to the incidents of a contract because there is superadded the command of a judge (u). On this principle in a case where A sued B on a mortgage and C who was a second mortgagee was joined as a party defendant and A and B entered into a compromise whereby A agreed to pay B more than he was entitled to the Court refused to pass a decree in terms of the agreement on the ground that the compromise was detrimental to the interests of C and that it was not therefore lawful within the meaning of this rule (x). See notes to s 11 above. Consent decree and estoppel. The following are further illustrations —

(a) B holds certain lands under a lease from A. The rent falls into arrears and A sues B for arrears of rent and for possession. It is subsequently agreed between the parties that B should continue to hold the lands as A's tenant but upon fresh terms arranged between the parties which include a forfeiture clause that if default should be made in payment of rent on the due dates the lease should be forfeited. A decree is passed in terms of the agreement under this rule. B commits default in payment of rent. A thereupon applies for possession of the land in execution of the decree. B offers to pay the arrears and applies that he may be relieved against forfeiture. It is clear that if the matter had rested in contract only the Court could have granted the relief. The mere fact therefore that the agreement has been recorded and a decree passed in accordance therewith does not preclude the Court from granting relief against forfeiture (y).

(b) The facts are the same as in the above illustration except that instead of proceeding in execution A institutes a fresh suit against B for possession on default of payment of rent. The same principle applies (z). It would seem that the proper procedure in cases where the forfeiture clause is in the form stated in ill (a) is to enforce the forfeiture not by an application to execute the consent decree but by a regular suit (a). The clause does no more than declare the right of forfeiture and to that extent the decree is declaratory and it is an elementary principle that a declaratory decree can only be enforced by a suit.

Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act—A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that a compromise in a suit between parties one of whom is an agriculturist within the meaning of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act (XVII of 1880) is not rendered illegal by want of compliance with the provisions of sec 15B of that Act (b) and that the compromise may be recorded under this rule. But the same High Court has also held that the present rule does not exclude the operation of the special provisions of s 12 of that Act and the Court can under that section go behind the transaction although the whole of the claim is admitted by the agriculturist defendant (c).

Compromise of probate proceedings—Unless a will is proved in some form no grant of probate can be made merely on the consent of parties. Hence an agreement or compromise as regards the genuineness and due execution of a will if its effect is to exclude evidence in proof of the will is not lawful within the meaning of this rule and no probate can be granted merely because the caveator consents to the grant. Such an agreement is against public policy for its object is to exclude inquiry into the genuineness of the will which it is the duty of the Probate Court to make (d) It is therefore open to the caveator before probate is granted to withdraw from the compromise and to require that the will be proved (e) For the same reason if an executor as the result of a compromise withdraws his petition for probate he is not precluded by the provisions of r 1 above from presenting another petition for probate though the first petition was withdrawn without the permission of the Court (f)

Form of decree where compromise includes matters which do not relate to the suit—In Hemant Kumar v Midnapore Zamindars Co (g) where a decree comprised lands outside the suit their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows —

A perfectly proper and effectual method of carrying out the terms of this [rule] would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement and then to conclude with an order relative to that part that was the subject of the suit or it could introduce the agreement in a schedule to the decree but in either case although the operative part of the decree would be properly confined to the actual subject matter of the then existing litigation the decree taken as a whole would include the agreement Thus in fact is what the decree did in the present case It may be that as a decree it was incapable of being executed outside the lands of the suit but that does not prevent it being received in evidence of its contents

It is clear from this passage that where a suit is adjusted by a lawful agreement between the parties the proper course is to recite the agreement in the decree or to annex it as a schedule to the decree but in either case the operative part of the decree should be confined to the actual subject matter of the suit It would be wrong to refuse to incorporate in the decree matters which form part of the compromise because they are extraneous to the suit such matters should be excluded only from the operative part of the decree

Where in a testamentary suit consent terms are proposed some of which fall within the testamentary jurisdiction and others do not the decree may properly embody all the terms in a schedule for reference but its operative part should be confined to such terms as are within its jurisdiction and the Testamentary Court should leave the parties to take separate proceedings in the ordinary original civil jurisdiction to enforce the remaining terms if necessary (h)

Matters which relate to the suit—As already stated that when a compromise comprises matters extraneous to the suit the operative part of the decree should be confined to matters that relate to the suit But what are matters that relate to the suit? In Gobinda v Duarka Nath (i) Mitra J said

The question whether any particular term relates to the suit must be decided from the frame of the suit the relief claimed and the relief allowed by the decree on adjustment by lawful agreement The mutual connection of the different parts of the relief granted by a consent decree is an important element for consideration in each case in deciding whether any portion of the relief is within the scope of the suit No hard and fast rule can be laid down each case being governed by its own facts In a later Calcutta case (j) Pankaj J said In some of the decisions section 375 [now O 23 r 3] has been applied by making a distinction between property in suit and property extraneous to the litigation. Where a suit is merely for the recovery of specific properties that distinction will be adequate and will be equal to the distinction between matters which relate to the suit and matters which do not. In some cases however suits are not for the recovery of property but to establish particular rights and I certainly prefer the opinion expressed in the case reported in 35 Cal 63<sup>1</sup> to the effect that the facts have to be looked at as a whole in order to decide whether matters have been introduced into the suit that do not relate to the suit. As to the latter class of case it may be stated that as a general rule all terms which form the consideration for the adjustment of the matters in dispute whether they form the subject matter of the suit or not become related to the suit and can be embodied in the decree. Thus where A sued B on a promissory note and a compromise was arrived at between the parties whereby B agreed to pay the amount of the note by instalments and the amount was also made a charge on certain immovable property of B it was held that there was nothing in the present rule to preclude the Court from making the amount a charge on B's property even though the relief claimed was for a money decree only. The charge though not claimed as a relief related to the suit (l). It formed the consideration for the time allowed for payment of the sum decreed by instalments and thus constituted an integral and necessary part of the adjustment of the claim in the suit (l). It has similarly been held that where A and B are joint tenants of certain land and A having paid up the entire rent sues B for contribution and a compromise is arrived at whereby B in consideration of A abandoning his claim gives up his share of the land to A the term as to B giving up his share is a term which relates to the suit (m). Where in execution of a decree obtained by A against B A attaches certain property and C claiming the property as his own brings a suit against A for a declaration of his title to the property and a compromise is arrived at between the parties whereby A admits C's ownership of the property and C agrees to execute a mortgage of the same property in favour of A for the amount of the decree obtained by A against B the term as to the execution of the mortgage is a term which relates to the suit (n). But where A sued B to restrain B from building a projected house in such a way as to interfere with A's enjoyment of light and air and a compromise was arrived at between the parties whereby B undertook not to build his house higher than it originally was and also agreed not to let water into the passage between the houses it was held that the arrangement as to the passage did not relate to the suit and that the operative part of the decree should be confined to the undertaking as to the house (o). But the parties can get over the difficulty by amending the pleadings with the leave of the Court so as to comprise in the pleadings and the decree matters that did not relate to the original suit but are comprised in the compromise (p). In a Patna case where the plaintiff claimed Rs 7000 with interest at the rate of 9½ per cent per annum and a consent decree was passed whereby the defendant agreed to pay Rs 2500 with interest at the rate of 9 per cent per annum if the amount was paid on a specified date but at 24 per cent per annum if it was not paid on or before that date the Court refused execution of the decree with interest at 24 per cent on the ground that that part of the compromise which provided for the payment of interest at the rate of 24 per cent per annum was outside the scope of the suit and allowed execution with interest at

Parties—If persons other than parties to the suit are parties to the compromise it cannot be recorded unless those persons are brought on the record as parties to the suit This is because the Court has to be satisfied before recording a compromise under this rule that there is a lawful compromise and this is not possible in the absence of those that are not parties to the suit (r) In a case where the first defendant transferred his interest in the subject matter of the suit to the second defendant who effected a compromise with the plaintiff the Privy Council held that the fact that the first defendant remained on the record did not give him sufficient interest to entitle him to raise any objection to the compromise or to appeal from the decree (s)

Compromise pending arbitration—The Calcutta High Court has held that where the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration under an order of reference made by the Court and pending the reference the parties adjust the suit by an agreement in writing signed by them and the arbitrators the agreement does not amount to an award Nor can it be recorded as an adjustment under this rule unless the arbitration has been superseded by an order of the Court the mere fact that the time for making the award has expired does not amount to a supersession of the arbitration there must be an order of supersession under para 8 of Schedule II (t) In a Madras case where the lower Court had under somewhat similar circumstances recorded the adjustment under the present rule it was held that as the time for making the award had expired when the adjustment was recorded the Court must be deemed to have exercised its power to supersede the arbitration under para 8 of Schedule II (u)

Execution of decree based on a compromise—This rule requires that where the Court is invited to pass a decree in terms of an agreement or compromise the agreement or compromise should be lawful and further that the operative part of the decree should be confined to the actual subject matter of the suit But what if a decree is passed on an agreement that is not lawful or that the operative part of the decree comprises matters that do not relate to the suit Is the Court bound to execute the decree literally according to its terms? The decisions on the subject may be summarized as follows—

First where a consent decree is based on an agreement or compromise that is not lawful—As to this it has been held that so far as the decree embodies unlawful terms of a compromise it is inoperative and will not be enforced (v) The subject has already been dealt with above in the notes Unlawful agreement or compromise

Next where a consent decree embraces matters that do not relate to the suit—Where a decree passed on a compromise includes terms that relate to the suit all the terms may be enforced in execution of the decree But where it contains terms that do not relate to the suit there is a conflict of opinion whether those terms can be enforced in execution According to the Allahabad and Madras decisions such terms can be enforced in execution of the decree (w) It is not open to the party against whom the decree is sought to be executed to object to the decree on the ground that it contains matters foreign to the suit. Such an objection it has been said by the Madras High Court must be taken by way of appeal from the decree [and now by way of appeal under O 43 r 2 (m) from the order recording the compromise] and it cannot be taken in execution of the decree (x). On the other hand the High Court of Calcutta has said that such terms cannot be enforced in execution of the decree but they may be enforced as a contract by a separate suit (y). Such a suit however according to the Allahabad High Court would be barred under s 47 the question in the view taken by that Court being one relating to execution (z). In Hemanti Kumari v Midnapur Zamindars Co (a) where a decree comprised lands outside the suit the Judicial Committee observed. A perfectly proper and effectual method of carrying out the terms of [the present rule] would be for the decree to recite the whole of the agreement and then to conclude with an order relative to that part that was the subject of the suit or it could introduce the agreement in a schedule to the decree but in either case although the operative part of the decree would be properly confined to the actual subject matter of the then existing litigation the decree taken as a whole would include the agreement. This in fact is what the decree did in the present case. It may be that as a decree it was incapable of being executed outside the lands of the district but that does not prevent it being received in evidence of its contents. The correct view it is submitted is that the decree may be executed as to the operative part alone which as stated above is to be confined to the actual subject matter of the suit. As to the rest it may be enforced as a contract by a separate suit.

Appeal—An order under this rule recording or refusing to record a compromise is appealable under O 43 r 1 (m). The Court may under this rule either record a compromise or it may refuse to do so. If an order is made recording the compromise the Court must pass a decree in accordance with the compromise. If an order is made refusing to record the compromise the suit will be proceeded with. But in either case as stated above an appeal will lie from the order. Where an order is made recording the agreement an appeal may be preferred on any of the following grounds—

- 1 That there was no compromise at all or no such compromise as the Court ordered to be recorded (b)
- 2 That the compromise is not lawful (c)
- 3 That the compromise recorded by the Court comprises matters that do not relate to the suit (d)

A compromise entered into by a pleader without the authority of his client is no compromise at all (e) and as such it comes under group (1) above.

It has been held by the High Courts of Lahore (f) and Madras (g) that the fact that a decree has been passed in accordance with the compromise does not preclude an appeal from the order recording the compromise. On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that an appeal from the order is incompetent if the appeal

Execution proceedings—See r 4 below

4 [S 375 A] Nothing in this Order shall apply to any proceedings in execution of a decree or order

Proceedings in execution of decrees not affected

Proceedings in execution—One effect of this rule is that the provisions of r 3 shall not apply to execution proceedings The reason is that O 21 r 2 and s 47 taken together provide a complete procedure for recording compromises arrived at in execution proceedings (j) This rule also prevents the provisions of r 1 from applying to proceedings in execution Hence where an application for execution of a decree has been made the Court has no power to allow the applicant to withdraw the application under r 1 (2) above with permission to make a fresh application (l) For the same reason the applicant cannot withdraw his application under r 1 (1) above though he may apply for its dismissal if he does not wish to proceed farther with it (i) The High Court of Bombay has held that a compromise of a suit for partnership accounts after the passing of a preliminary decree and during the pendency of an enquiry before the Commissioner for taking accounts is not a compromise of a proceeding in execution Such a compromise may therefore be recorded under r 3 above (m) In Rangoon it has been held that an agreement between the mortgagor and the mortgagee after the preliminary decree for sale and before the final decree whereby the mortgagee agrees to allow an extension of time to the mortgagor for payment of the decretal amount is within O 21 r 2 and not within r 3 above (n) The High Court of Patna has held that an application to set aside a sale under O 21 r 90 is not a proceeding in execution, and that a compromise arrived at between the parties that on the judgment debtor paying a certain sum into Court by a particular date the Court sale should be set aside may therefore be recorded under r 3 above (o) But the correctness of this decision is doubtful

Payment into Court with denial of liability—There is no provision in his rule enabling a defendant to pay money into Court with a denial of liability in other word without prejudice to his contentions as there is in the corresponding English rule see R S C O 22 rr 1 and 6

Mere willingness to pay—A mere averment of willingness to pay made in the written statement is not equivalent to payment into Court and it does not stop interest from running (p)

Suit to recover a debt or damages—This order applies only to a suit to recover a debt or damages and not to any other suits. Where a suit is instituted against a defendant to recover a debt or damages he may pay into Court such amounts as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim. By such payment into Court the defendant may be benefited (1) in respect of interest for which see r 3 and (2) in respect of costs for which see r 4 and illustrations thereto

Suit for injunction—A suit for an injunction to restrain a defendant from building so as to interfere with the plaintiff's light and air but not including any claim for damages is not a suit for debt or damages within the meaning of this rule. No doubt the Court has in such a suit a discretion under s 10 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877 to award damages in lieu of injunction but this circumstance does not make the suit one for damages within the meaning of this rule (q). But it has been held by the High Court of Bombay in view of the long established practice of that Court that where a defendant in a suit for an injunction pure and simple pays into Court a sum which he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim though it be with defence denying liability and the Court allows damages only to the plaintiff and that too to the extent of the amount deposited by the defendant the principle underlying r 4 below ought to regulate the discretion of the Court (which it has under s 35) in directing the payment of costs (r).

Suit for accounts—This rule does not apply to suits for accounts (s).

Suit to recover debt or damages together with other relief—This rule applies to suits to recover debt or damages though there may be other reliefs claimed in the suit e.g. injunction (t).

At any stage of the suit—This means before decree as indicated by the words in full of the claim and the subsequent rules. See notes to r 3 below. Execution proceedings.

Payment into Court and insolvency of defendant—In England it has been held that when money is paid into Court admitting liability the plaintiff in the event of the defendant's bankruptcy is a secured creditor in respect of it and when liability is denied he is a secured creditor to the extent to which his claim is admitted by the trustee in bankruptcy or proved (u).

2 [S 377] Notice of the deposit shall be given through the Court by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the amount of the deposit shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be paid to the plaintiff on his application

Unless the Court otherwise directs —These words show that the Court has a discretion to refuse to allow monies to be paid out. That discretion however should be exercised reasonably. Where the money sued for and paid into Court is due on a promissory note it would be unreasonable in the absence of special circumstances not to allow the plaintiff to take the money out. The fact that the payment into Court is accompanied by a denial of liability on the ground of minority is not such a circumstance (v). Where there are conflicting claims as where the amount deposited in Court is claimed by different parties no party can withdraw the amount without an order of the Court (u).

3 [S 378] No interest shall be allowed to the plaintiff on any sum deposited by the defendant from the date of the receipt of such notice, whether the sum deposited is in full of the claim or falls short thereof.

Interest on deposit not allowed to plaintiff after notice

Tender—A plea of tender before action must in order to stop interest be accompanied by a payment into Court after action otherwise the tender is ineffectual (x).

Execution proceedings—The principle of this rule applies to proceedings in execution therefore if money is paid into Court by a judgment debtor no interest should be allowed to the decree holder on the amount so paid although such amount may not in fact be the whole amount due under the decree (y).

4 [S 379] (1) Where the plaintiff accepts such amount as satisfaction in part only of his claim, he may prosecute his suit for the balance, and, if the Court decides that the deposit by the defendant was a full satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim the plaintiff shall pay the costs of the suit incurred after the deposit and the costs incurred previous thereto, so far as they were caused by excess in the plaintiff's claim.

Procedure where plaintiff accepts deposit as satisfaction in part

(2) Where the plaintiff accepts such amount as satisfaction in full of his claim, he shall present to the Court a statement to that effect and such statement shall be filed and the Court shall pronounce judgment accordingly, and, in directing by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, the Court shall consider which of the parties is most to blame for the litigation.

- (b) where none of the plaintiffs has sufficient immovable property within British India other than the property in suit
- II (a) Where the plaintiff is a woman
- (b) where her suit is for the payment of money and
- (c) she does not possess sufficient immovable property within British India

Discretion of Court in requiring security for costs from non resident plaintiff—The word may implies discretion In the exercise of this discretion the Court will not order security for costs from a plaintiff residing out of British India in cases in which he cannot be rendered liable for the defendant's costs e.g. an administration suit by the plaintiff as a creditor or a legatee in which the plaintiff's claim is admitted or a suit on a mortgage or a promissory note where there is no defence In such cases no security for costs will be ordered even though the plaintiff resides out of British India and has not sufficient immovable property within British India not even though the plaintiff be a woman (a)

Resides—The residence intended in this rule is residence under such circumstances as will afford a reasonable probability that the plaintiff will be forthcoming when the suit is decided Mere presence in British territory at the time of suit is not residence (b) Thus a resident of a Native State staying in Bombay for the sole purpose of taking proceedings to get his wife back cannot be said to reside in Bombay within the meaning of this rule (c) See notes to s. 20 above Actually and voluntarily resides

Trading corporations—The residence and domicile of an incorporated trading company are determined by the situation of its principal place of business By the principal place of business is meant the place where the administrative business of the company is conducted This may not be the place where its manufacture or other operations are carried on Dicey's Conflict of Laws 3rd ed p 164

British India—Aden is within British India (d) The Kathiawar States are not within British India (e) nor is the Cantonment of Wadhwan (f) nor the Cantonment of Secunderabad (g) nor the Rajkot Civil Station (h) See notes to s. 1 British India p 4 above

Immovable property—A plaintiff who is entitled under a will to a beneficial interest in a part of the surplus income derived from immovable property cannot be said to possess immovable property within the meaning of this rule (i) Leasehold property is immovable property within the meaning of this rule (j)

Poverty of plaintiff—Vere poverty is no ground for requiring a plaintiff to give security for the costs of the suit (l) But it is otherwise if he is not the real litigant and issuing on behalf of another who is not a party to the suit (l) In a recent Bombay case a suit was brought by a Parsi father and his minor daughter as plaintiffs for damages for the defendant's breach of his promise to marry the daughter The father was an undischarged insolvent and it was alleged that the suit was really the father's suit and that he was seeking to make money out of his daughter's engagement The Court upon these grounds ordered the father to furnish security for the costs of the defendant (m) In the last mentioned case the Court relied upon a dictum of Bowen L. J. in Courell v Taylor (n) that in order to prevent abuse if an insolvent sues as nominal plaintiff for the benefit of somebody else he must give security

Inherent power to order security for costs—The case for security for costs from a puppet plaintiff is clearly outside the scope of this rule It can only be brought in under the inherent power of the Court In one case the Calcutta High Court said that it had such power (o) In a later case the same High Court said that the Court had no such power the reason given being that the inherent power of the Court cannot be invoked in matters for which the Code does actually provide (p) See notes above Poverty of plaintiff

Where leave has been granted to plaintiff to sue as a pauper—The Court has no power under this rule to require security for costs from a person to whom leave has been granted under O 33 r 8 to sue as a pauper for to do so would be to render the leave nugatory (q) If an order is made requiring a plaintiff to furnish security for the costs of the defendant and leave is subsequently granted to the plaintiff to continue the suit as a pauper the order ceases to operate as regards antecedent costs provided leave is granted before the time limited for giving security has expired (r)

Where the plaintiff is a minor—The power as to requiring security for costs is a discretionary one and except in exceptional cases neither a minor plaintiff nor his or her next friend should be required to give security for costs (s) not even if both the minor and his next friend are residing out of British India and do not own immovable property in British India (t)

Where the plaintiff is a woman—The necessity for the provisions of sub r (3) arises from the provisions of s 56 by which it is enacted that no woman can be arrested or detained in the civil prison in execution of a decree for the payment of money (u) But the Court has a discretion in the matter and in the exercise of its discretion it will not as a general rule require security for costs from a woman plaintiff if the result of such an order will be practically to defeat the suit where it has been instituted bona fide (v)

Persons exempted from attending Court—Amongst those so exempted are women who according to the custom and manners of the country ought not to be compelled to appear in public (see s 132) This is a right which no Court has power to refuse (f) Such women ought to be examined on commission even though they may have appeared in public before (g) and though an allegation of immorality is made against them (h) A woman may have entirely abandoned the protection of the parda and yet she may be exempted under s 132 from giving evidence in Court if the Court is satisfied having regard to the class and community to which she belongs that she should not be compelled to appear in the witness box (i) A religious preceptor is not one of the persons exempted from attending the Court (j)

Sickness or infirmity—If sickness or infirmity is alleged the character and gravity of that sickness or infirmity must be ascertained and the risk consequent upon a refusal to issue a commission must be taken into consideration At the same time the importance of having witnesses present before the Court should not altogether be lost sight of (k) The application may be granted even if the defence consists of an equitable counterclaim If it is found that the vendor is unable to attend Court by reason of sickness or infirmity the Court has discretion to grant or refuse the application Such discretion cannot be revised under sec 115 above (l)

Evidence taken on commission under this rule—Where evidence is taken on commission under this rule the procedure laid down in r 8 below should be strictly observed (m)

Arbitration—It is competent to the Court to issue a commission for the examination of witnesses though the matters in difference in the suit have been referred to arbitration under Schedule II of this Code (n)

4 [S 386] (1) Any Court may in any O 26 suit issue a commission for the examination of—

Persons for whose examination commi. kon may be ue

- (a) any person resident beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction,
- (b) any person who is about to leave such limits before the date on which he is required to be examined in Court, and
- (c) any civil or military officer of the Government who cannot, in the opinion of the Court, attend without detriment to the public service

(2) Such commission may be issued to any Court, not being a High Court, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person resides, or to any pleader or other person whom the Court issuing the commission may appoint

(3) The Court on issuing any commission under this rule shall direct whether the commission shall be returned to itself or to any subordinate Court

Form—For form of commission to examine absent witness see App H form No 7

May issue—The Court has a discretion to grant or refuse a commission (o) But the discretion must be exercised judicially (p) If the Court fails to exercise the discretion judicially such failure is of itself no ground for interfering with the decree in appeal the appellate Court should not interfere unless it is shown if the lower Court has exercised its discretion judicially the decision would have been different from what it was (q)

Commission for the examination of witnesses—Ordinarily in the case of a witness not under the control of the party asking for a commission who resides beyond the limit fixed under O 16 r 19 (b) a commission should issue as a matter of right unless the Court is satisfied that the party is merely abusing its authority to issue process It is not for the Court to decide whether the party will be benefited thereby or not that is a matter entirely for the party (r)

Plaintiff asking for a commission to examine himself—Suppose a plaintiff residing in Delhi institutes a suit in Bombay and then applies to the Bombay Court for the issue of a commission for his examination in Delhi In such a case the Court will refuse the application unless a very strong case is made out because the Bombay tribunal is that chosen by the plaintiff himself (s)

Reading depositions in evidence—Evidence taken on commission cannot be used without the consent of the opposite party unless the conditions of clause (a) are fulfilled or the record shews that the discretion under clause (b) has been exercised by the Court (k)

According to the practice prevailing on the Original Side of the High Court of Calcutta evidence taken on commission is not treated as evidence in the suit until it has been tendered and read as evidence in the suit by the party on whose behalf it has been taken. It follows that evidence taken under a commission at the instance of one party cannot be used by the opposite party until it is tendered and read as evidence by the party on whose behalf it has been taken (i). On the other hand the practice in the Courts in the Mofussil of Calcutta is to treat the deposition of a witness examined on commission as evidence in the case even though it has not been formally tendered and this practice has been said to be not only perfectly consistent but also in strict accordance with the provisions of rules 7 and 8 (j).

Admissibility of documents—Where a document is produced before a Commissioner and no objection is taken to its admissibility no such objection can be taken before the Court hearing the suit to which the commission is returned (l). But if the admissibility of the document is objected to before the Commissioner the party who has objected to the admissibility of the document before the Commissioner on one ground is not precluded from objecting to its admissibility before the Court on any other ground (i).

Commission for local investigations

9 [S 392] In any suit in which the Court deems a local investigation to be requisite or proper for the purpose of elucidating any matter in dispute, or of ascertaining the market value of any property, or the amount of any mesne profits or damages or annual net profits, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such investigation and to report thereon to the Court.

Provided that, where the Local Government has made rules as to the persons to whom such commission shall be issued, the Court shall be bound by such rules.

Commission when to be issued—The words and the same cannot be conveniently conducted by the judge in person which occurred in the old section after the words net profits have been omitted in this rule. The effect of the alteration is that the issue of a commission for local investigation is no longer restricted to cases where the Judge is unable conveniently to make the investigation himself. As the rule now stands a Judge may issue a commission in any case where he deems it fit to do so irrespective of his own convenience (m).

Personal investigation by Judge—A Judge has power to make a local investigation in person in any case in which he sees fit to do so (a) See O 18 r 18

Commission for local investigation—This rule does not authorise a Court to delegate to a Commissioner the trial of any material issue which the Court itself is bound to try (o)

Commissioner's report—Where in a suit as to a right of way a commissioner was appointed under this rule to prepare a map of the locality in question it was held that the statements of the village officers made to him with regard to the right of way were inadmissible in evidence (p)

Interference with commissioner's report—Interference with the result of a careful local investigation except upon clearly defined and sufficient grounds is to be deprecated (q)

Amount of profits—The report of a commissioner appointed by a Court of Revenue to ascertain the amount of actual collection in a suit for profits under s 164 of the Agra Tenancy Act is admissible in evidence having regard to this rule and rules 16 17 and 18 (r)

Mesne profits—burden of proof—See notes to O 20 r 12 Burden of proof on p 622 above

Form—For form of commission for local investigation see App H form no 9

10 [S 393] (1) The Commissioner, after such local inspection as he deems necessary and after reducing to writing the evidence taken by him shall return such evidence, together with his report in writing signed by him, to the Court

(2) The report of the Commissioner and the evidence taken by him (but not the evidence without the report) shall be evidence in the suit and shall form part of the record, but the Court or, with the permission of the Court, any of the parties to the suit may examine the Commissioner personally in open Court touching any of the matters referred to him or mentioned in his report, or as to his report, or as to the manner in which he has made the investigation

(3) Where the Court is for any reason dissatisfied with the proceedings of the Commissioner, it may direct such further inquiry to be made as it shall think fit

Further evidence after commissioner's report—This rule does not contemplate the tender of further evidence after the Commissioner's report except the examination of the Commissioner himself but it does not forbid it. It is consistent with either course and the point must be decided on general principles according to the facts of each case (s)

Commissions to examine accounts

11 [S 394] In any suit in which an examination or adjustment of accounts is necessary, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit directing him to make such examination or adjustment

Commission to examine or adjust accounts

Commission to examine accounts—The words of this rule clearly indicate that no order can be made for the appointment of a commissioner unless the examination or adjustment of accounts is considered necessary (t)

The commissioner to whom a suit is referred by a Judge on the original side of the High Court of Bombay is entitled to decide questions of law which may arise while taking accounts (u)

Form—For form of commission to examine accounts see App H form no 9

12 [S 395] (1) The Court shall furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such instructions as appear necessary, and the instructions shall distinctly specify whether the Commissioner is merely to transmit the proceedings which he may hold on the inquiry, or also to report his own opinion on the point referred for his examination

Court to give Commissioner necessary instructions

(2) The proceedings and report (if any) of the Commissioner shall be evidence in the suit, but where the Court has reason to be dissatisfied with them, it may direct such further inquiry as it shall think fit

Proceedings and report to be evidence Court may direct further inquiry

Commissions to make partitions

13 [S 396, 1st para] Where a preliminary decree for partition has been passed, the Court may, in any case not provided for by section 54, issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit to make the partition or separation according to the rights as declared in such decree

Alteration in the rule—The singular person has been substituted for the plural persons. Under the old section it was held that the use of the plural person showed that the Court could not issue a commission to make partitions to a single Commissioner (v) The substitution of the singular person for the plural persons clearly shows that under the present rule the commission may be issued to a single Commissioner

Form—For form of commission to make a partition see App H form no 10

14 [S 396 2nd and 3rd paras ] (1) The Commissioner shall, after such inquiry as may be necessary, divide the property into as many shares as may be directed by the order under which the commission was issued, and shall allot such shares to the parties, and may, if authorized thereto by the said order, award sums to be paid for the purpose of equalizing the value of the shares

Procedure of Commissioner

(2) The Commissioner shall then prepare and sign a report or the Commissioners (where the commission was issued to more than one person and they cannot agree) shall prepare and sign separate reports appointing the share of each party and distinguishing each share (if so directed by the said order) by metes and bounds Such report or reports shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court, and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports, shall confirm, vary or set aside the same

(3) Where the Court confirms or varies the report or reports it shall pass a decree in accordance with the same as confirmed or varied, but where the Court sets aside the report or reports it shall either issue a new commission or make such other order as it shall think fit

Alteration in the rule—The words shall confirm vary or set aside the same at the end of sub rule (2) and the whole of sub rule (3) have been substituted for the words shall either quash the same and issue a new commission or (where the Commissioners agree in their report) pass a decree in accordance therewith Under the wording of the old section it was held that the Court must either accept the report or reject the report and that it had no power to vary it (w) The word vary has been added into sub rule (2) to enable the Court to modify the report in a proper case

Resistance to Commissioner—Where a commission has been issued to make a partition the circumstance that the plaintiff or his agent resists the Commissioner is not sufficient to justify the dismissal of the suit (x)

15 [S 397] Before issuing any commission under this Order, the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expenses of the commission to be, within a time to be fixed, paid into Court by the party at whose instance or for whose benefit the commission is issued

Expenses of commission to be paid into Court

16 [S 398] Any Commissioner appointed under this Order, may, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment,— Powers of Commissioners

- (a) examine the parties themselves and any witness whom they or any of them may produce, and any other person whom the Commissioner thinks proper to call upon to give evidence in the matter referred to him,
- (b) call for and examine documents and other things relevant to the subject of inquiry,
- (c) at any reasonable time enter upon or into any land or building mentioned in the order

17 [S 399] (1) The provisions of this Code relating to the summoning, attendance and examination of witnesses, and to the remuneration of, and penalties to be imposed upon witnesses, shall apply to persons required to give evidence or to produce documents under this Order whether the commission in execution of which they are so required has been issued by a Court situate within or by a Court situate beyond the limits of British India, and for the purposes of this rule the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a Civil Court

Attendance and examination of witnesses before Commissioner

(2) A Commissioner may apply to any Court (not being a High Court) within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides for the issue of any process which he may find it necessary to issue to or against such witness, and such Court may, in its discretion, issue such process as it considers reasonable and proper

Sub rule (2) — This sub rule is new. It enables the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides to issue a summons for his examination on the application of the Commissioner. In the absence of any such provision in the old section

it was held that where a witness failed to appear before a Commissioner pursuant to a notice issued by him the only course left open to the Commissioner was to return the commission to the Court from which it was issued and the latter Court would then send the commission to the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the witness to be examined resided (y)

18 [S 400] (1) Where a commission is issued under this Order the Court shall direct that the parties to the suit shall appear before the Commissioner in person or by their agents or pleaders

(2) Where all or any of the parties do not so appear, the Commissioner may proceed in their absence

ORDER XXVII

Suits by or against the Government or Public Officers in their official capacity

1 [New] In any suit by or against the Secretary of State for India in Council, the plaint or written statement shall be signed by such person as the Government may, by general or special order, appoint in this behalf, and shall be verified by any person whom the Government may so appoint and who is acquainted with the facts of the case

Suits by or against Government—Suits by or against the Government must be instituted by or against the Secretary of State for India in Council see s 79 above

Notice in suits against Secretary of State or public officer—See s 80 above

2 [S 417] Persons being ex officio or otherwise authorized to act for the Government in respect of any judicial proceeding shall be deemed to be the recognized agents by whom appearances, acts and applications under this Code may be made or done on behalf of the Government

Recognised Agents—In the Punjab all Government pleaders are authorised to act for Government as their recognised agents without any power of attorney Such pleaders are recognised agents within the meaning of this rule (z)

4 [S 419] The Government pleader in any Court, or such other person as the Local Government may for any Court appoint in this behalf, shall be the agent of the Government for the purpose of receiving processes against the Secretary of State for India in Council issued by such Court

5 [S 420] The Court, in fixing the day for the Secretary of State for India in Council to answer to the plaint, shall allow a reasonable time for the necessary communication with the Government through the proper channel, and for the issue of instructions to the Government pleader to appear and answer on behalf of the said Secretary of State for India in Council or the Government, and may extend the time at its discretion

6 [S 421] The Court may also, in any case in which the Government pleader is not accompanied by any person on the part of the Secretary of State for India in Council, who may be able to answer any material questions relating to the suit, direct the attendance of such a person

7 [S 423] (1) Where the defendant is a public officer and, on receiving the summons, considers it proper to make a reference to the Government before answering the plaint, he may apply to the Court to grant such extension of the time fixed in the summons as may be necessary to enable him to make such reference and to receive orders thereon through the proper channel

(2) Upon such application the Court shall extend the time for so long as appears to it to be necessary

8 [Ss 426, 427] (1) Where the Government under- O 2 takes the defence of a suit against a public officer, the Government pleader, upon being furnished with authority to appear and answer the plaint, shall apply to the Court, and upon such application the Court shall cause a note of his authority to be entered in the register of civil suits

(2) Where no application under sub rule (1) is made by the Government pleader on or before the day fixed in the notice for the defendant to appear and answer, the case shall proceed as in a suit between private parties

Provided that the defendant shall not be liable to arrest, nor his property to attachment, otherwise than in execution of a decree

ORDER XXVIII

Suits by or against Military Men or Airmen

1 [S 466] (1) Where any officer, soldier or airman O 2 actually serving the Government in a military or air-force capacity is a party to a suit, and cannot obtain leave of absence for the purpose of prosecuting or defending the suit in person, he may authorize any person to sue or defend in his stead

(2) The authority shall be in writing and shall be signed by the officer soldier or airman in the presence of (a) his commanding officer, or the next subordinate officer, if the party is himself the commanding officer, or (b) where the officer, soldier or airman is serving in military or air force staff employment, the head or other superior officer of the office in which he is employed Such commanding or other officer shall countersign the authority which shall be filed in Court

(3) When so filed the countersignature shall be sufficient proof that the authority was duly executed, and that the officer, soldier or airman by whom it was granted could not obtain leave of absence for the purpose of prosecuting or defending the suit in person

Explanation—In this Order the expression "commanding officer" means the officer in actual command for the time being of any regiment, corps detachment or depot to which the officer, soldier or airman belongs

Changes in the rule—The words or airman have been added in the heading of this Order and in this rule after the word soldier by the Repealing and Amendment Act 1927. The words or air force in this rule were inserted after the word military by the same Act

2 [S 465] Any person authorized by an officer, soldier or airman to prosecute or defend a suit in his stead may prosecute or defend it in person in the same manner as the officer, soldier or airman could do if present, or he may appoint a pleader to prosecute or defend the suit on behalf of such officer, soldier or airman

Person so authorized may act personally or appoint pleader

Changes in the rule—See note to r 1 Changes in the rule

3 [S 467] Processes served upon any person authorized by an officer, soldier or airman under rule 1 or upon any pleader appointed as aforesaid by such person shall be as effectual as if they had been served on the party in person

Service on person so authorized or on his pleader to be good service

Changes in the rule—See note to r 1 Changes in the rule

ORDER XXIX

Suits by or against Corporations

1 [S 435] In suits by or against a corporation, any pleading may be signed and verified on behalf of the corporation by the secretary or by any director or other principal officer of the corporation who is able to depose to the facts of the case

Companies authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or trustee—All reference has been omitted in this and the next following rule to companies authorised to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee as such companies if any there be are very rare

Foreign corporation—The procedure prescribed by this rule applies to foreign corporations also. A foreign corporation can claim the benefit of this rule although not registered under the Indian Companies Act or under an Act of Parliament (a). Thus a plaint in a suit by the Singer Manufacturing Company which is a company incorporated in the United States may be verified by an agent holding a general power of attorney from the company as a principal officer of the company within the meaning of this rule (b) The fact that the Agent also acts for another foreign firm is not material (c)

Suit by an unregistered or unincorporated society—A suit by an unregistered or unincorporated society must be brought in the names of all the members of the society (d) Where there are numerous members the suit may be instituted by one or more of them with the permission of the Court on behalf of all [O 1 r 8]

Suit by or against a registered company—A suit by or against a registered company must be instituted in the name of the company A suit against two companies described as the India General S N and R Co Ltd and the Rivers S N Co Ltd by their joint Agent A E Rogers is substantially a suit against Rogers and it is in contravention of the provisions of this rule The words by their joint agent A E Rogers should be omitted (e) But if the relief is really sought against the Company and the error is one of misdescription a suit nominally against the Agent may be treated as a suit against the Company (f)

Other principal officer of the corporation—The manager at Lucknow of the local branch of the Delhi and London Bank was authorised by a power of attorney to manage the affairs of the Bank and to substitute any person for himself In pursuance of this power he gave a power of attorney to the accountant of the Bank to manage the affairs of the Bank but the power omitted words giving authority to sue It was held that the accountant was under the circumstances the principal officer of the Bank and that he could as such sign and verify the plaint in a suit filed by the bank (g)

Principal Officer able to depose to the facts of the case—The Calcutta High Court has held that as regards every pleading on behalf of a company or corporation the fitness to verify of the person purporting to verify it must be proved by affidavit (h) Note the difference in punctuation between this rule and r 3 below

Dismissal of suit—Where in the case of a suit by a corporation the plaint is signed and verified by an officer other than a principal officer of the corporation the suit should be dismissed (i) Similarly the suit should be dismissed if in the case of an unregistered or unincorporated society the suit is brought in the names of some only of the members of the society (j) See notes above

2 [S 436] Subject to any statutory provision regulating service of process, where the suit is against a corporation, the summons may be served—

Service on corporation

ORDER XXX

Suits by or against Firms and Persons carrying on business in names other than their own

1 1 [New R S C O 48A, r 1] (1) Any two or more persons claiming or being liable as partners and carrying on business in British India may sue or be sued in the name of the firm (if any) of which such persons were partners at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, and any party to a suit may in such case apply to the Court for a statement of the names and addresses of the persons who were, at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, partners in such firm, to be furnished and verified in such manner as the Court may direct

(2) Where persons sue or are sued as partners in the name of their firm under sub rule (1), it shall, in the case of any pleading or other document required by or under this Code to be signed, verified or certified by the plaintiff or the defendant, suffice if such pleading or other document is signed, verified or certified by any one of such persons

Suits by or against firms.—The whole of this Order is new. It is a reproduction almost verbatim of the principal rules comprised in O 48A of the English rules. The rules as to the attachment of partnership property and the execution of decree against firms will be found in O 21 rr 49 and 50 above

In applying English decisions under the corresponding rules in England it must be remembered that there is a distinction between the English and the Indian law as to the liability of partners. According to the English law the liability is joint according to the Indian law it is joint and several. See Indian Contract Act 1872, ss. 42 to 45

Under sec 45 of the Contract Act one of two joint promisees cannot sue alone. This order modifies that section and if the promisees are partners enables one to sue alone but only if he sues in the name of the partnership (1)

This Order deals with the mode of suing firms. Rule 1 provides that two or more persons claiming or being liable as partners may sue or be sued in the firm name. Rule 3 provides that where a suit is instituted by partners in the name of their firm the plaintiffs shall on demand in writing by the defendant declare in writing the names and places of residence of the partners. If the plaintiffs fail to comply with the demand the Court may stay further proceedings. If the demand is complied with the suit will proceed as if all the partners had been named as plaintiffs in the plaint. As regards signature and verification where a suit is brought in a firm name it is provided by r 1 sub r (2) that it will suffice if the pleading or any other document required to be signed or verified is signed or verified by any one of the partners. It is not necessary that all the partners should sign or verify it. As regards appearance in a suit brought against a firm it is to be noted that a firm cannot appear as a firm and the partners should therefore appear individually in their own names but all subsequent proceedings should continue in the name of the firm (r 6). Where a suit is brought against a firm no partner can put in a personal defence (1). He can only file a written statement for and in the name of the firm. The decree also must be in the name of the firm (m) though all the partners may not have appeared (n).

Firm—As to the definition of a firm it is laid down in sec 239 of the Indian Contract Act 1872 that persons who have entered into partnership with one another are called collectively a firm. The Calcutta High Court has held that a partnership firm is not a person but merely a collective name of the individuals who are members of the partnership and as such cannot be a partner in another firm (o). If so a firm consisting of individuals and minor firms or of minor firms exclusively cannot be a firm within the meaning of this rule.

Minor—In England an infant's contract is voidable and he may be a partner. He is not however personally liable for the debts of the firm but a creditor who has obtained judgment against the firm in the proper form that is a judgment against the defendant firm other than 4 B an infant partner may levy execution against the partnership property (p). If the action is not brought against the firm in the firm name but is brought against the partners as nominee the infant partner ought not to be joined as a party (q). In India a minor's contract is void and a minor cannot be a partner. He may however be admitted to the benefits of partnership in which case his share in the property of the firm is liable for the obligations of the firm but he is not personally liable see Indian Contract Act 1872 s 247. The share referred to in s 247 is the right of the minor to participate in the property of the firm after its obligations are satisfied (r). When a minor has been admitted to the benefits of partnership a reference by the firm to arbitration will bind the minor to the extent of his share in the property of the firm (s). See O 21 r 30.

Suit against manager and owner of a firm—In a Bombay case (t) the plaintiff filed a suit against C A manager and owner of the shop of V C. It turned out that C K had died before the suit was filed and the plaintiff applied to bring the heirs of

r 1 C K on the record The period of limitation had by that time expired and so the lower Court dismissed the suit as time barred The High Court reversed the decree on the ground that the suit was in substance a suit against the firm

At the time of the accruing of the cause of action '—These words show that a suit may be brought by or against a firm in the firm name though the firm may have been dissolved before the date of the suit provided the cause of action arose before dissolution (u)

Carrying on business in British India —This rule applies to all partnerships carrying on business in British India Therefore a firm which carries on business in British India may be sued in the firm name under this rule although it be a foreign firm the members of which are resident out of the jurisdiction (t) The only question to be considered in order to see whether the case comes within the rule is whether the firm carries on business [in British India] (w) If it does the partners may be sued in the firm name If it does not the partners cannot sue (x) or be sued (y) in the firm name The expression carry on business has no special legal significance It must be interpreted in the ordinary business sense (z) A firm in England cannot be said to carry on business in Bombay merely because it has employed an agent in Bombay to collect orders for the firm the agent having no authority to accept or reject the orders (a) it does not make any difference that the name of the firm is affixed to the agent's office (b) See notes to s 20 Carries on business

Suit by firm on promissory note passed to a member—A firm may sue on a promissory note passed to one of its members though the note has been passed to him in his name (c)

Firm as agriculturist—The definition of agriculturist in sec. 2 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act 1879 can only apply to a firm sued under the provisions of O 30 r 1 if that firm by itself or by its servants or by tenants earns its livelihood wholly or principally by agriculture carried on within the limits of a district to which the Act extends The mere fact that one or all the members of a firm earn their livelihood principally from agricultural income does not make the firm itself an agriculturist within the meaning of that Act (d)

Statement of names and addresses—Rule 2 enables a defendant to obtain disclosure of the names of the partners in a plaintiff firm by a statement in writing by the plaintiffs or their pleader Under r 1 any party to the suit may apply to the Court for a statement of the names of the partners in the plaintiff or defendant firm to be furnished and verified in such manner as the Court may direct (e) It is perhaps not altogether easy to reconcile the two rules but r 2 is applicable to the case only of plaintiff whereas r 1 applies generally (f) Where an affidavit has been filed under r 1 or a declaration made under r 2 the Court has no power to require the deponent or declarant to attend to be cross examined on the affidavit or declaration nor has the Court any power to direct the separate trial of an issue as to whether a person whose name has been disclosed in the affidavit or declaration was a partner in the firm at the time the cause of action accrued (g) But the statement of names disclosed in the affidavit or declaration will be treated as embodied in the plaint and will be a necessary part of the cause of action and if the plaintiffs fail in establishing it, the suit will fail (h)

2 [Aen R S C, O 48 A, r 2] (1) Where a suit is instituted by partners in the name of their firm, the plaintiffs or their pleader shall on demand in writing by or on behalf of any defendant, forthwith declare in writing the names and places of residence of all the persons constituting the firm or whose behalf the suit is instituted

(2) Where the plaintiffs or their pleader fail to comply with any demand made under sub rule (1), all proceedings in the suit may, upon an application for that purpose, be stayed upon such terms as the Court may direct

(3) Where the names of the partners are declared in the manner referred to in sub rule (1), the suit shall proceed in the same manner, and the same consequences in all respects shall follow, as if they had been named as plaintiffs in the plaint

Provided that all the proceedings shall nevertheless continue in the name of the firm

Disclosure of partners names—See notes to r 1 above for names and addresses. If the plaintiff firm has not made a full disclosure of partners the proper procedure is not to dismiss the suit but to allow the defendant a further declaration making a full disclosure and thus to remedy the defect

Proceedings to continue in name of firm—See notes to r 1 above for proceedings against firms on p 850 and r 6 below. Subsequent proceedings to continue in name of firm.

3 [Aen R S C O 48 A r 3] Where persons are sued as partners in the name of a firm, summons shall be served

- (a) upon any one or more of the partners of the firm
- (b) at the principal place at which the business is carried on within British India, or at any person having, at the time of service, the control or management of the business there as the Court may direct, and such service shall be deemed good service upon the firm so sued, whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India.

Provided that, in the case of a partnership which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the summons shall be served upon every person within British India whom it is sought to make liable

Service of summons—This rule is to be read with r 1 above and with O 21 r 50. It applies only to suits against partners in the name of their firm. It provides a special mode of service upon firms carrying on business in British India whether the partners reside within or without British India (j). One mode of service authorized by the rule is service upon anyone or more of the partners the other is service as the principal place of business of the partnership within British India upon the manager of the business. If the summons is not served in either of these ways the service is irregular (k). If it is served in either of these ways the service is good service upon the firm whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India. The service being good service upon the firm any decree that may be passed in the suit against the firm may be executed against the property of the firm. When the firm has been dissolved the only method of service is under clause (a) on a partner (l) and if service by registered post has been ordered the registered letter should be addressed to a partner and not to the firm name at the place where the business used to be carried on (m).

If the service is effected in the first mode prescribed by the rule that is if the service is upon a partner it is good service upon the firm as well as upon that partner personally but it is not service upon any other member of the firm so as to make such member a person who has been individually served as a partner etc within the meaning of O 21 r 50 sub r (1) cl (c). If the service is effected in the second mode prescribed by the rule that is upon a manager at the place of partnership business and the manager is not a partner the service is good service upon the firm but it is not service upon any member of the firm so as to make such member a person who has been individually served as a partner etc within the meaning of O 21 r 50 sub r (1) cl (c) (n). This distinction is important for the purposes of execution for under O 21 r 50 where a decree has been passed against a firm execution can at once issue without leave of Court against the property of the firm and also against the separate property of any individual partner who was served with the writ. But execution cannot be issued without leave of Court against the separate property of any partner who was not served with the writ and did not appear (o).

Dissolution of partnership before institution of suit—Where there has been dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff he cannot make an outgoing partner liable unless he served the writ of summons upon him. A sues the firm of B & Co upon a promissory note passed to him by the firm. When the note was given the firm consisted of three partners X, Y and Z but Z had retired from the firm before the institution of the suit and X knew before he instituted the suit that Z had so retired. Z resides in British India but he is not individually served as required by the proviso to this rule

Z does not appear. A obtains a decree against the firm. The decree cannot be executed against the personal property of Z. Nor can A apply under O 21 r 50 sub r (2) for leave to execute the decree against the personal property of Z. So also on the death of a partner his personal estate cannot be made liable unless his legal representative is joined (p). This is because the present rule overrides O 21 r 50 and the latter rule only applies where there has been no dissolution to the knowledge of the plaintiff (q). The above ruling would not apply to the case of a partner who had left the firm before the institution of the suit without the knowledge of the plaintiff. If the plaintiff was not aware of the dissolution when he filed his suit the decree binds all the partners in the firm whether they have been served individually or not (r).

Service on manager, subsequent service on partner.—Where a summons is served upon a manager and subsequently upon a partner it is the date of the latter service from which time is to be counted for the appearance of the defendant firm (s).

Principal place at which the partnership business is carried on.—See notes to r 1 above. Carrying on business in British India.

As the Court may direct.—These words do not occur in the corresponding English rule. According to the English rule the summons may be served upon a partner or upon the manager at the plaintiff's option. Under the present rule it would seem that the plaintiff has no such option and that he should obtain the directions of the Court as to the mode of service. If the method of service prescribed by the Court is followed then prima facie there has been service on the firm (t). It is conceived however that omission to obtain such directions would not vitiate the service but would constitute at the most an irregularity within the meaning of s 90 above.

Notice to be given to the person served as to the capacity in which he is served.—See r 5 below and notes thereto.

4 [New] (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 45 of the Indian Contract Act 1872, where two or more persons may sue or be sued in the name of a firm under the foregoing provisions and any of such persons dies, whether before the institution or during the pendency of any suit, it shall not be necessary to join the legal representative of the deceased as a party to the suit.

(2) Nothing in sub rule (1) shall limit or otherwise affect any right which the legal representative of the deceased may have—to recover the amount of the note. The suit must under s. 45 of the Contract Act, be bought by C and D along with B's legal representative. The effect of the present rule is that where the suit is brought in the firm name it is not necessary to join B's legal representative as a party plaintiff (u). But the legal representative may apply to be made a party plaintiff. The mere fact that he does not apply will not affect his right to claim the benefit of any decree that may be passed in favour of C and D. If the suit is against the firm and one of the partners dies before or during the suit the decree can be enforced against the share of the deceased in the partnership property. But if the legal representatives are not joined it cannot be enforced against the personal estate of the deceased partner (r).

5 [New R S C, O 48A, r 4] Where a summons is issued to a firm and is served in the manner provided by rule 3, every person upon whom it is served shall be informed by notice in writing given at the time of such service, whether he is served as a partner or as a person having the control or management of the partnership business, or in both characters, and, in default of such notice, the person served shall be deemed to be served as a partner.

Notice in what capacity served

Notice in what capacity served—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name the summons will be issued against the firm. Such summons may be served either upon any one or more of the partners or upon the person in control of the business [r 3]. The present rule provides that the person served should be informed by notice in writing given at the time of service whether he is served as a partner or as a person in management of the business or in both characters. In default of notice the person served will be deemed—not merely presumed—to be served as a partner. If he contends that he is not a partner the proper course for him to adopt is to appear under protest under r 8 below denying that he is a partner. If he does not do so he will be deemed to have been served personally as a partner within the meaning of O 21 r 50 sub-r 1 cl. (c) and execution may be granted against him personally (w).

Service on manager—If service is effected on the person in control of the business and no notice is served as provided by this rule the service is not effective and cannot be made so [Annual Practice notes to O 48A r 4].

Appearance under protest—Where a summons is served upon a person as a partner but such person appears under protest denying that he is a partner the plaintiff may disregard the appearance altogether and proceed as if the summons had not been served that is, he may have service subsequently effected upon a partner or partners or upon any person having the control of the business as provided by r 3. The mere fact that the person served as a partner denies that he is a partner under protest does not preclude the plaintiff from firm (r 8 below).

Where a summons is served upon a person appears with denial of partnership management of the business the proper service is then one under r 3.

A person served as a manager of the partnership business need not appear unless he is a member of the firm sued (r 7 below). A managing partner of a business firm has an implied authority in the ordinary course of business to appoint solicitors to defend a suit brought against the firm in the firm name and to instruct them to enter an appearance for the other partners as well. written statement. In any case the written statement should be a written statement of the firm but where the partners cannot agree on one defence and a partner puts in a separate defence the proper form would be written statement of the defendant firm of AB & Co by X1 one of the partners appearing in the suit. It may be asked what is the plaintiff to do if he finds a series of inconsistent defences put in by the different partners? The answer is that to entitle him to judgment against the partnership he must to use a homely phrase beat all the defences—that is to say he must show and satisfy the judge at the trial that not one of the defences prevents a judgment being entered against the partnership (d). What would happen if some of the partners did not appear at all? In case say one partner alone chooses to appear he would be entitled and would be bound to put in a written statement for the firm. He might if he choose add by so and so one of the partners served and appearing but his defence would be the defence of the firm and the suit would be tried upon that defence and in that case judgment could be obtained against the firm. Of course if the partner chose to put in an improper defence and so rendered the partnership liable in a case where it ought not to be made liable he might thereby as between himself and his co partners be committing a breach of duty for which he would be liable to them but so far as the plaintiff is concerned the plaintiff would be able to obtain judgment against the firm. A partner is not entitled in a suit against a firm in the firm name to put in a personal defence he can only put in a defence for and in the name of the firm (e). But where a partner is sued personally along with the firm he may put in a personal defence besides defence for the firm (f).

Decree—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name the decree must be against the firm in the firm name (g). From this it follows that if one of the partners fails to appear no decree can be passed against him separately for want of appearance (h) and if any one partner does appear no decree can be passed against the firm for want of appearance (i) the appearance of one partner being the appearance of the firm (j). It can never be said that a decree against a firm is ex parte against one of the partners because he has not appeared. As soon as a decree is passed against a firm the assets of the firm are liable to satisfy it (k). The firm name is only a compendious way of describing in the writ the partners who compose the firm and a plaintiff who sues a firm sues the partners (l). But though the decree against the firm makes them all liable as to the partnership property it can only be decided in execution proceedings whether a particular partner is personally liable to satisfy the decree (m). See O 21 r 50 and notes to r 8 below. As to minor partner see notes to r 1. Minor

8 [New R S C O 48A r 7] Any person served with summons as a partner under rule 3 may appear under protest, denying that he is a partner, but such appearance shall not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving a summons on the firm and obtaining a decree against the firm in default of appearance where no partner has appeared

Appearance under protest—Where a person served with a summons as a partner denies that he is a partner he may enter appearance under protest under this rule. Where an appearance is entered under protest its effect is to nullify the service altogether as regards the defendant firm (n). In such a case the plaintiff may disregard the appearance under protest altogether and have the summons served upon one who is admittedly a partner or one who has the control or management of the defendant firm as provided by r 3 above and having obtained a decree against the firm he may apply for leave to execute it against such person under O 21 r 50. But the plaintiff is not bound to adopt this course. He may take out a chamber summons and contend that the party who appeared under protest is a partner or was a partner at the time the cause of action accrued and apply on that basis to strike out of such appearance the denial of partnership. See Annual Practice notes to O 48A rr 4 and 7. In a case where the plaintiff did not take out a summons to decide whether the party appearing under protest was a partner he was allowed an adjournment to serve the firm. But as it was not equitable that the claim should be left hanging over the protesting party pending proceedings under O 21 r 50 the Court directed that the issue whether or not he was a partner should be tried in the suit (o).

Party appearing under protest not entitled to file written statement on his own behalf—A party appearing under protest under this rule is not entitled to file a written statement on his own behalf even one denying that he is a partner (p).

Party appearing under protest not entitled to dispute liability of firm—In England a party appearing under protest is not allowed to plead in the alternative that if he is a partner the firm he is not liable (q).

Defence to party appearing under protest in proceeding under O 21 r 50—A party appearing under protest is entitled to take any defence in a proceeding against him under O 21 r 50 in addition to the defence that he was not a partner of the defendant firm, unless to do so will be to negative the provisions of a rule of procedure (r).

Scope of the rule—This rule provides that suits between a firm and one of its members or between two firms with a common member may be instituted in the firm name provided the firms carry on business in British India (r 1) But no execution can be issued in such a suit except by leave of the Court

10 [New R S C, O 48 A, r 11] Any person carrying on business in a name or style other than his own name, may be sued in such name or style as if it were a firm name, and, so far as the nature of the case will permit, all rules under this Order shall apply

Soft against person carry

Scope of the rule—A person trading by himself as a firm or in an assumed or trading name may be sued in his trade name but he cannot sue in that name (s) The words as if it were a firm and so far as the nature of the case will permit shew that the case is not identical for one man cannot constitute a firm (t) If a sole proprietor dies a suit after his death must be brought against his legal representatives (u) It cannot after his death be brought against him in his trade name If the suit is brought against him in his trade name the suit is one against a dead man and a nullity (v) If he dies pending the suit the suit will abate unless his legal representative is brought on the record within 90 days from the date of his death (w) This rule does not enable a plaintiff to sue the proprietor of a newspaper in the name of the newspaper (x)

Non resident foreigner—As to the corresponding English rule it has been held that it does not apply where the person carrying on business in a name other than his own is a foreign subject resident out of the jurisdiction though he may carry on business through an agent within the jurisdiction The decision proceeded upon the broad ground that an English Court has no jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business within the jurisdiction and that the words any person though large enough to include a foreigner refer only to an English subject (y) The question as to whether the Courts of this country have jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business here through an agent arose in the recent Privy Council case of Annamalai v Murugasa (z) but the point was not decided by their Lordships In both Courts in India it was assumed that the Court had jurisdiction but their Lordships said This assumption appears to their Lordships to require more attention than it had received

Application of foregoing rules—By the latter part of this rule all the foregoing rules of this Order relating to proceedings against firms are to apply to a person trading in a name other than his own so far as the nature of the case will permit By virtue of r 1 this rule does not apply unless the business is carried on in British India By virtue of rr 1 and 2 the person sued in his trade name may be required to disclose his real name and private address By virtue of r 3 the summons may be served upon the person sued or upon any person having the control or management of the business but in the latter case execution cannot be issued against the personal property of the persons sued except by leave of the Court [O 21 r 50] As regards appearance the person sued must appear in his own name (r 5)

ORDER XXXI

Suits by or against Trustees, Executors and Administrators

1 [S 437] In all suits concerning property vested in a trustee, executor or administrator, where the contention is between the persons beneficially interested in such property and a third person, the trustee, executor, or administrator shall represent the persons so interested, and it shall not ordinarily be necessary to make them parties to the suit. But the Court may, if it thinks fit, order them or any of them to be made parties.

Representation of beneficiaries in suits concerning property vested in trustees etc.

Scope of the rule.—This rule applies only where the contention is between the beneficiaries and a third person. It does not apply where the contention is between beneficiaries and trustees or between the beneficiaries inter se. In suit between beneficiaries and a third person the trustees sufficiently represent the beneficiaries (a) though the beneficiaries are an unascertained and unascertainable class (b) or persons (c). As to declaratory decrees it is provided by s 43 of the Specific Relief Act 1877 that a declaration made under s 42 of that Act is binding where any of the parties are trustees or the persons for whom if in existence at the date of the declaration such parties would be trustees. Compare RSC 16 r 8.

When beneficiaries may be added as parties.—Beneficiaries should always be made parties when the executors are wholly uninterested in the case as where they have fully administered the estate (d) or where they have an interest adverse to that of the beneficiaries (e). Where a suit was brought by an executor and the names of the beneficiaries who took possession of the estate pending the suit were substituted as plaintiffs it was held that it did not amount to a substitution of new plaintiffs within the meaning of s 22 of the Limitation Act (f).

A purchases certain property at an execution sale in the name of B. If the judgment debtor seeks to set aside the sale A is by virtue of this rule not a necessary party to the proceeding (g).

Suits by or against Minors and Persons of Unsound Mind

1 [S 440 1st para] Every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by a person who in such suit shall be called the next friend of the minor

Minor to sue by next friend

Minor—Every person domiciled in British India who has not completed the age of 18 years is a minor. In the case however of a minor of whose person or property a guardian has been appointed by a Court of Justice or whose property is under the superintendence of a Court of Wards the age of majority is deemed to have been attained on the minor completing his age of 21 years see Indian Majority Act IV of 1875 s 3.

Object of having next friend or guardian ad litem—As a minor is deemed incapable of prosecuting or defending a suit himself it is necessary that his interests in the suit should be watched by an adult person. Such person is in the case of a minor plaintiff called his next friend and in the case of a minor defendant his guardian ad litem or guardian for the suit. But neither the next friend nor the guardian ad litem is a party to the suit (l). The next friend or guardian ad litem may choose his own attorneys or change them (m). As to liability of next friend for costs see notes below.

Title of suit—Where a suit is brought on behalf of a minor the title of the suit should run thus A B a minor by his next friend C D v X Y. Where a suit is brought against a minor the title of the suit should be F G v A B a minor by his guardian ad litem C D. Where the title of a suit in a case was A B for self and his minor daughter C D instead of A B and C D a minor by her next friend A B and the objection was raised for the first time in appeal it was held that the error did not affect the merits of the case and that it was not therefore fatal to the suit (n) [s 99] See notes to r 3 below under the head Where a minor defendant is substantially represented by a guardian ad litem

Objection to authority of next friend—Where a minor plaintiff has a cause of action no objection to the authority to sue of the next friend through whom the suit is brought will be entertained in appeal (o)

When minor may sue without next friend—A minor may sue in a Presidency Small Cause Court without a next friend when the amount claimed does not exceed Rs 500 and is due to him for wages or for work done as a servant Presidency Small Cause Court Act 15 of 1882 s 32

Liability of next friend for costs—Where a suit brought by a minor by his next friend is dismissed and the Court finds that the suit was not for the benefit of the minor the Court may direct the next friend personally to pay the costs (p) But if the Court finds that there were reasonable grounds for instituting the suit and the next friend has acted bona fide the Court will not mulct the next friend in costs and will direct the costs to come out of the property of the minor (q)

There is nothing in the Code to authorise a Court to decree costs against a guardian ad litem except in the case referred to in r 11 below (r)

Suit on behalf of an alleged minor who in fact is not a minor—A suit instituted on behalf of a person alleged to be a minor by his next friend. It is found that the plaintiff was not in fact a minor at the date of the institution of the suit In such a case the suit should, according to Allahabad decisions be dismissed (s) according to Calcutta (t) Madras (u) and Lahore (v) decisions the plaint should be returned for amendment. The latter seems to be the better opinion.

Adult sued as minor—Where an adult is sued as a minor by his guardian ad litem and a decree is passed against him he is estopped from disputing the validity of the decree if he knew of the suit before the decree was passed If his property is sold in execution of the decree he is estopped from impeaching the same if he knew of the suit or of the proceedings in execution before the sale (w)

Minor suing as adult—Where a suit is brought by a minor without a next friend, and the defendant is aware of the plaintiff's minority but does not object and the plaintiff attains majority before the decree is passed the decree is binding upon the parties (x)

Estoppel—A minor who representing himself to be a major collects rents and gives receipts therefor is estopped from again recovering the rents once paid to him by instituting a suit through a next friend (y) Similarly a minor who representing himself to be of full age sells certain property and executes a deed of sale is estopped from suing to set aside the sale on the ground that he was a minor at the date of sale (z) But if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor the purchaser could not be said to have been misled by the false representation as to the vendor's age and the suit to set aside the sale would not then be barred (a) A Court of Equity will deprive a fraudulent minor of the benefit of the plea of infancy but he who invokes the aid of the Court must establish not only that a fraud was practised on him by the minor but that he was deceived into action by the fraud (b) It is clear that if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor he could not be said to have been deceived into action by the minor's misrepresentation as to his age

Where question of minority is in dispute—Where a person is sued as a major but he claims to be a minor the Court should frame an issue for the determination of the question of minority and for that purpose appoint a guardian for the alleged minor (c)

Attorney's Costs—An attorney is entitled to recover from the infant's estate the costs of a proper suit or defence of a suit in which the estate was involved. He is also entitled to have a charge declared on the estate for the amount of his costs (d)

2 [ S 442 ] (1) Where a suit is instituted by or on behalf of a minor without a next friend, the defendant may apply to have the plaint taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the pleader or other person by whom it was presented

Where suit is instituted without next friend plaint to be taken off the file

(2) Notice of such application shall be given to such person, and the Court, after hearing his objections (if any), may make such order in the matter as it thinks fit

Taking the plaint off the file—This rule contemplates the case where a suit is instituted without a next friend by a person who is alleged by the defendant to be a minor. In such a case the defendant may apply under this rule to have the plaint taken off the file. To bring his case within the rule the defendant must show that the plaintiff is a minor and that the suit was instituted without a next friend. Now the fact of minority—

(i) may either be apparent on the face of the plaint or

(ii) it may be ascertained upon objection by the defendant and enquiry by the Court

In case (i) the practice is to take the plaint off the file (e)

In case (ii) i.e. where the fact of minority is established after evidence has been taken on the point it may be found—

(a) that the plaintiff instituted the suit with the knowledge of the fact of minority and with the intention of deceiving the Court and evading the payment of costs in the event of failure or

(b) that the plaintiff had no such knowledge or intention

In case (a) the practice according to the Bombay decisions is to make an order under this rule directing the plaint to be taken off the file (f). According to the Calcutta decisions the Court should pass a decree dismissing the suit. The Calcutta High Court holds that the procedure prescribed by this rule namely taking the plaint off the file applies only to those cases where the fact of minority is apparent on the face of the plaint that is to say in case (i) and that it does not apply where the fact of minority is established on enquiry held by the Court upon that point (g). the practice of the two Courts is important in this way that while an appeal lies from a decree dismissing a suit no appeal lies from an order directing a plaint to be taken off the file

In ca c (b) the practice is to stay proceedings and to allow sufficient time to enable the minor plaintiff to be represented by a next friend (h)

The Court should take notice of the irregularity and refuse to proceed even if the suit is ex parte (i) If the defendant appears and does not object the Court should not reject the plaint but should allow the plaintiff time to get himself properly represented (j) When a next friend is appointed the objection that the suit was originally instituted without a next friend can no longer be urged (k) If the plaintiff attains majority before the Court has decided that he is a minor there is no necessity to appoint a next friend (l)

Costs—When a suit is instituted by a minor without a next friend the pleader or any other person presenting the plaint is liable for costs and the Court should not render the property of the minor liable for costs (m)

Decree for a minor in a suit instituted by him without a next friend—Where a suit is instituted by a minor without a next friend and the defendant does not object to it he will be deemed to have waived his objection The defendant cannot in such a case after a decree has been passed against him object to the execution of the decree on the ground that the suit was instituted by the minor without a next friend. The absence of a next friend does not make the suit a nullity The institution of a suit by a minor without a next friend is merely an irregularity which can be waived by the conduct of the defendant (n)

3 to the father or other natural guardian of the minor, or, where there is no father or other natural guardian, to the person in whose care the minor is, and after hearing any objection which may be urged on behalf of any person served with notice under this sub rule

Guardian ad litem—Where a guardian ad litem has once been appointed, his appointment endures for the whole of the litigation including proceedings in execution and appeal (o) The Calcutta High Court has held that a guardian ad litem appointed in the original suit does not continue as such in execution proceedings without fresh appointment (p) But it is submitted that this is erroneous for execution proceedings are a continuation of the suit

A guardian ad litem is not a party to a suit or appeal Therefore a suit or an appeal is not time barred merely because the order appointing a guardian ad litem is not made until after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit or appeal (q)

Proper person to be appointed guardian ad litem—It is the duty of the judge himself to decide who is the proper person to be appointed as guardian ad litem (r)

Plea of minority—A sues B B alleges that he is a minor In such a case the Court should frame a preliminary issue on the question of minority and appoint a guardian for the purpose of the enquiry on the question of minority If the defendant is found to be a minor a guardian ad litem should be appointed for him but if he is found to be a major the guardian appointed for the inquiry should cease to act and the defendant may conduct his own case (s) So also if a dispute arises as to whether a minor is the legal representative of a deceased party the Court should appoint a guardian ad litem and decide the matter (t)

Non representation—The provisions of this rule as to the appointment of a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant are imperative Hence if a minor is sued without a guardian ad litem and a decree is passed against him the decree is a nullity and it cannot be enforced against him (u) For the same reason it cannot operate as res judicata (v)

The Allahabad High Court has held that a minor against whom a decree has been passed without the appointment of a proper guardian ad litem may if the facts of the case justify, in that very suit (1) appeal from the decree or (2) apply for a review of judgment or (3) apply for an order under r 5 (2) below according as the circumstances of the case may permit or he may bring a regular suit to set aside the decree and the sale (if any) in execution of the decree (w) A minor however cannot resist execution of the decree on the ground that the decree is a nullity for a minor not represented by a proper guardian ad litem as where the guardian ad litem is a person whose interest is adverse to that of the minor [r 4] cannot be said to be a party to the suit within the meaning of s 47 above (x)

The Allahabad High Court has held that where a decree is a suit against a minor is set aside in a subsequent suit by the minor on the sole ground that he was not represented by a proper guardian ad litem the Court whose decree is set aside has inherent power to restore the suit and to proceed with the appointment of a fit and proper person as guardian ad litem for the minor defendant (y) But the Madras High Court has held that there is no such inherent jurisdiction (z) Again the Allahabad High Court has held that where an ex parte decree has been passed against a minor not properly represented the minor may apply to have the decree set aside under O 9 r 13 (a) The Madras High Court has held that no such application is competent the reason given being that a minor not properly represented in a suit cannot be regarded as a party to a suit and an application under O 9 r 13 can only be made by a party to the suit (b)

Substantial representation—When a minor defendant is not represented at all as in the cases referred in the preceding paragraph he is not a party to the suit and the decree as against him is a nullity That must be distinguished from another class of cases where the Court has recognised a guardian ad litem but has made no formal appointment or has made an appointment which is open to objection owing to some defect of procedure The rule in this latter class of cases is different for the decree will bind the minor unless it is shown that the defect of procedure has prejudiced him In this class of cases the leading case is that of Walia v Banke Behari (c) That was a suit brought against a minor but no order was applied for and none was made for the appointment of a guardian ad litem In the plaint however which was admitted by the Court the mother of the minor was described as his guardian Further the mother appeared throughout the proceedings in the suit as the minor's guardian A decree was passed against the minor and in the decree and the execution proceedings the mother was described as the minor's guardian In a suit brought by the minor on attaining majority to set aside the decree passed against him on the ground that no guardian ad litem had been appointed as required by the present rule it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council overruling the decision of the Calcutta High Court that the Court in which the former suit was instituted had by its action given sanction to the appearance of the mother as a guardian ad litem and that the absence of a formal order of appointment was not fatal to the suit unless it was shown that the defect in procedure prejudiced the minor Their Lordships observed that there was nothing in the proceedings of that suit to suggest that the interests of the minor were not duly protected by the mother or that the defect in procedure had prejudiced the minor and they accordingly held that the decree was binding upon the minor The particular defects of procedure that have been condoned on the ground of no prejudice to the minor are—omission to make a formal order of appointment (d) an appointment made without the affidavit required by r 3 (3)

being filed (e) or without notice to the minor under r 3 (4) (f) appointment of a Court guardian without notice to the person in whose care the minor is (g) But such irregularities will vitiate the decree if there is prejudice to the minor as in Sadashir v Trimbuk (h) and Shah Abdul Karim v Thakurdas (i) where no formal appointment was made and the minor's interest were not protected or in Bhagwan v Param (j) where a Nazir was appointed guardian without notice to the mother with whom the minor lived and he for want of funds took no steps to defend the suit The rule is well stated by Wallace J in Tirumalacharyulu v Ammisetti (k) as follows No irregularity by way of omission to send notice as required by O 32 r 3 shall operate to render void the presumed representation of the minor in a suit unless such omission has in fact prejudiced their defence and such prejudice is not a matter of assumption or presumption but of proof

Notice—Notice should be served both on the proposed guardian and on the minor and the wishes of the minor should be considered (l) But if there is no fraud or collusion failure to give notice to the minor is an irregularity which does not justify the Court in setting aside the decree (m)

Service of summons—There is no express provision in the Code for service on minors. Hence where the defendant is a minor he should be served with the summons in the way provided for service upon adults (n). But where a guardian ad litem has been appointed by the Court service of summons or of notice of hearing in the case of an appeal on such guardian is sufficient (o). As to service in suits brought against wards of Courts of Wards see Bengal Court of Wards Act 1879 s. 54 and Bombay Court of Wards Act 1900 s. 34.

Fraud of next friend or guardian ad litem—A decree passed against a minor properly represented is binding upon him as much as a decree passed against an adult but it is open to the minor to impeach the decree by a suit in cases where the next friend or guardian for the suit has been guilty of fraud or collusion in allowing the decree to be passed against him (7) or of culpable negligence which has brought prejudice to the minor (7)

Probate proceedings—Until a contest arises section 141 of the Code is not applicable to a probate proceeding so as to attract the applicability of this Order. But where a will of which probate is sought affects the interests of a minor it may be expedient as a rule of practice to appoint a guardian ad litem (v)

Who may act as next

guardian for the suit

(1) Any person who is of sound mind and has attained majority may act as next friend of a minor or as his guardian for the suit

Provided that the interest of such person is not adverse to that of the minor and that he is not, in the case of a next friend, a defendant, or, in the case of a guardian for the suit, a plaintiff

(2) Where a minor has a guardian appointed or declared by competent authority, no person other than such guardian shall act as the next friend of the minor or be appointed his guardian for the suit unless the Court considers, for reasons to be recorded, that it is for the minor's welfare that another person be permitted to act or be appointed, as the case may be

(3) No person shall without his consent be appointed guardian for the suit

(4) Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian, and may direct that the costs to be incurred by such officer in the performance of his duties as such guardian shall be borne either by the parties or by any one or more of the parties to the suit, or out of any fund in Court in which the minor is interested, and may give directions for the repayment or allowance of such costs as justice and the circumstances of the case may require

The rule is well stated by Wallace J in Tirumalacharyulu v Ammisetti (1) as follows. No irregularity by way of omission to send notice as required by O 32 r 3 shall operate to render void the presumed representation of the minor in a suit unless such omission has in fact prejudiced their defence and such prejudice is not a matter of assumption or presumption but of proof.

Notice—Notice should be served both on the proposed guardian and on the minor and the wishes of the minor should be considered (4). But if there is no fraud or collusion failure to give notice to the minor is an irregularity which does not justify the Court in setting aside the decree (m).

which vitiates the decree (c) The permission to appoint another person as next friend or as guardian ad litem need not be express (d) Failure to record reasons as required by sub r (2) is an irregularity which does not of itself vitiate the appointment (e)

Sub rule (3) consent of guardian ad litem—This sub rule controls both sub rule (1) and sub rule (2) and places a material restriction on the power of the Court. No person competent under either of these sub rules can be appointed guardian ad litem without his consent (f) A guardian who has not consented to act as such is no guardian at all and the decree is invalid irrespective of any question of prejudice because the minor has not been represented in the suit (g) Das J seems to take a different view in Pande Saldeo v Ramayan (h) but that is erroneous as pointed out by Venkatasubba Rao J in Sriramulu v Lakshminarayana (i) and by Rankin CJ in Satis Chandra v Hashem Ali (j) The Allahabad High Court has said that in certain circumstances consent may be presumed when the proposed guardian remains silent and absent (l) But it is submitted that this is incorrect and the proper procedure in such case is in default of any other person fit and willing to act to appoint an officer of the Court (l) But under the Code of 1859 which did not contain any proviso similar to r 4 (3) when a guardian under the Guardian and Ward Act made no response consent was presumed (m) In an Allahabad case where a father and his minor son were sued the Court appointed the mother guardian ad litem in spite of her refusal. The father filed a written statement for the son and defended the suit on his behalf. It is clear that the minor was not represented by his mother but the High Court held that there was substantial representation by the father and there was no prejudice to the minor (n) The consent need not be expressed in writing. Some cases use the phrase express consent but the word express is not in the rule. Consent is a question of fact and the evidence of it may be indirect and circumstantial (o) or it may be proved by conduct (p)

Sub rule (4) Officer of Court as guardian ad litem—In cases under the previous Codes it was held that if an officer of Court was appointed guardian ad litem he should not be paid for his trouble (q) also that if he had no funds to conduct adequately the defence of the minor the Court could relieve him of his position as guardian (r) But under the present code the Court may provide for the costs to be incurred by him in order that he may obtain legal assistance and this is so even when the guardian ad litem is himself a pleader (s) The appointment of an officer of the Court as guardian ad litem on a false affidavit that there is no other person fit and willing is vitiated by fraud and is of no legal effect. A decree so obtained is not binding on the minor (t) But the mere fact that no inquiry has been made by the Court into the question whether there was any other person fit and willing to act as guardian ad litem does not make the decree a nullity. The case is merely one of irregularity (u). The Deputy Registrar who has been appointed guardian of minor respondents in a High Court appeal may also be appointed to represent them in proceedings for obtaining leave to appeal to Privy Council but upon the final admission of the appeal he ceases to represent them (v). The High Court cannot provide for the costs of a guardian ad litem in an appeal to Privy Council (r). As to irregularities in the appointment of a Court guardian see notes under rule 3 above.

5 [Ss 441, 441] (1) Every application to the Court on behalf of a minor, other than an application under rule 10, sub rule (2), shall be made by his next friend or by his guardian for the suit.

Representation of minor by next friend or guardian for the suit

(2) Every order made in a suit or on any application, before the Court in or by which a minor is in any way concerned or affected, without such minor being represented by a next friend or guardian for the suit, as the case may be may be discharged, and, where the pleader of the party at whose instance such order was obtained knew, or might reasonably have known, the fact of such minority, with costs to be paid by such pleader.

6 [S 461] (1) A next friend or guardian for the suit shall not, without the leave of the Court, receive any money or other movable property on behalf of a minor either—

Receipt by next friend or guardian for the suit of property under decree for minor

- (a) by way of compromise before decree or order, or
- (b) under a decree or order in favour of the minor

(2) Where the next friend or guardian for the suit has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be guardian of the property of the minor, or, having been so appointed or declared, is under any disability known to the Court to receive the money or other movable property, the Court shall, if it grants him leave to receive the property, require such security and give such directions as will in its opinion, sufficiently protect the property from waste and ensure its proper application.

Joint Mitakshara family—The Calcutta High Court had held that this rule did not apply when the next friend was the manager of a Mitakshara joint family of which the minor was a member and that qua manager he could receive money.

due on a decree in favour of himself and the minor (w) But this conflicts with the Privy Council ruling in Ganesh Rao v Tuljaram (x) that a manager of a joint family if he is a next friend or guardian is subject to the control of the Court and that he cannot do in his capacity of manager acts that he is debarred from doing as next friend or guardian without the leave of the Court Accordingly when payment under a decree in favour of a minor and of the manager of a joint Hindu family was certified to the Court by the manager alone who was the next friend of the minor the Court refused to record it as the leave of the Court had not been obtained and for the same reason the Court refused to recognize the payment as a valid discharge and granted an execution application for the recovery of the whole amount (y)

Security for protection of minor's property—A bond passed by a surety under sub r (2) cannot be enforced by summary process under s 145 ( )

7 [S 462] (1) No next friend or guardian for the suit shall, without the leave of the Court, expressly recorded in the proceedings, enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of a minor with reference to the suit in which he acts as next friend or guardian

(2) Any such agreement or compromise entered into without the leave of the Court so recorded shall be voidable against all parties other than the minor

Alterations in the rule—The words expressly recorded in the proceedings in sub r (1) and the words so recorded in sub r (2) are new They give effect to the practice established under the old section. See notes below Compromise decrees when binding on a minor

Scope of the rule—This rule contemplates the following steps to be taken in order before a compromise decree is passed in a suit to which a minor is a party namely (1) an application by the next friend or guardian ad litem for leave to compromise the suit (2) the granting of leave by the Court if the Court thinks the case is a fit one for leave and (3) the consent of the next friend or guardian ad litem to the proposed compromise after the Court has granted the leave (a) If the leave is granted and the next friend or guardian ad litem assents to the compromise the parties may apply to the Court under O 23 r 3 for a consent decree in terms of the compromise and if the compromise is lawful it is the duty of the Court under that rule to pass the decree applied for If the next friend of a minor plaintiff agrees to compromise a suit on behalf of the minor subject to the leave of the Court and then withdraws from the compromise before the leave of the Court is applied for the Court will not enforce the compromise at the instance of the defendant even though the terms of the compromise might appear beneficial to the minor The reason is that such compromise is not binding unless it is sanctioned by the Court (b) The Court cannot force a compromise upon a minor against the opinion of the guardian ad litem or next friend (c) But if the guardian or next friend is acting improperly in refusing to consent to a beneficial arrangement the Court may take steps to remove him and substitute some other person (c)

Compromise decree when binding on minor—The provision contained in this rule making it necessary to obtain the leave of the Court is of great importance for the protection of minor's interests (d) and it has been extended to a compromise by a natural guardian who has put herself in the place of a guardian ad litem by applying to the Court to sanction a compromise (e). To render a decree passed in pursuance of a compromise binding on a minor the following conditions must be complied with—

- (a) The next friend or guardian ad litem must apply to the Court for leave to enter into the proposed compromise (f) stating specifically that the compromise is sought to be made on behalf of the minor (g) and also setting forth the terms of the proposed compromise (h)
- (b) On such an application being made to the Court the Court must exercise a judicial discretion as to the propriety in the interests of the minor of the proposed compromise (i) It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what materials a Judge may call for before he is satisfied with the compromise and that is a matter which must be left to his discretion (j) And if the Court sees reason to grant leave it should record an order showing that an application has been made to it that the terms of the proposed agreement or compromise have been considered by it and that having regard to the interests of the minor it has granted leave to make the agreement or compromise (k) It is not sufficient that the terms of a compromise are before the Court There ought to be evidence that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and it ought to be shown by an order on petition or in some way not open to doubt that the leave of the Court was obtained (l) A compromise will be deemed to be beneficial to the interests of a minor if it secures to the minor some demonstrable advantage or averts some obvious mischief (m) A certificate of counsel for the minor that the compromise is for his benefit is according to ordinary practice sufficient (n)

In Bombay it has been held that in sanctioning a compromise as for the benefit of a minor the Court should have before it an affidavit by the next friend or guardian of the minor to that effect and in heavy cases there should be an opinion of counsel or else a statement by counsel at the bar that in his opinion the compromise is for the benefit of the minor. It has also been held that the Court is not bound to pass a decree in the exact form of the terms of the compromise agreed to by the parties and that it may make such alterations as it deems expedient (c)

- (c) The leave must be express not implied. It must in the language of this rule be expressly recorded in the proceedings. From the mere fact that the Court has passed a decree in accordance with a compromise it cannot be inferred that any of the steps preliminary and necessary to the making of the decree have been taken by the Court. The Court by passing a decree in pursuance of a compromise does not ipso facto sanction the compromise (p) The provisions of this rule are complied with if the leave of the Court is expressly recorded it is not necessary that the order granting leave should state that the Court had considered the terms of the compromise and regarded them to be beneficial to the minor (q)

But the non observance of the above conditions does not render the compromise decree void or affect the jurisdiction of the Court to record it (r) The decree is only voidable and that too at the option of the minor No other party to the suit can call the decree in question the minor alone is entitled to call it in question and this he may do either on attaining majority or before then through a next friend (s)

Procedure to set aside compromise decree—A compromise decree may be set aside either in a regular suit or upon an application for review to the Court that passed the decree (t) But it cannot be called in question by way of objection to any proceeding taken in execution of it (u)

It was doubtful whether under the Code of 1859 a compromise decree can be set aside by an appeal from the decree Where an appeal was preferred from a compromise decree on the ground that the lower Court did not consider the question as to whether the compromise was a proper one in the interests of the minor the High Court of Allahabad entertained the appeal (v) in a similar case the High Court of Calcutta refused to entertain the appeal (w) Under the present Code no appeal lies from a consent decree [s 96 sub-s (3)]

Compromise under misapprehension of a material fact—Where a compromise is entered into under a misapprehension of a material fact it will be set aside even though it may have been sanctioned by the Court under this rule (x) See Indian Contract Act 1872 s 20 Something in the nature of fraud must be shown before a compromise sanctioned by the Court is set aside (y)

Minor attaining majority pending suit—If the minor attains majority while the suit is still pending a compromise entered into by his guardian is not binding on him even though it has been sanctioned by the Court (z)

Compromise of execution proceedings—Execution proceedings are a continuation of the suit and a next friend or guardian cannot after decree enter into a compromise or an adjustment of the decree without the sanction of the Court (a) See O 21 r 2 And this is so even though the guardian ad litem had power as natural guardian to sell the minor's property (b) But the rule is confined to an agreement or compromise in the course of the suit A transfer by a guardian ad litem of a decree in favour of a minor made not with reference to the suit or execution proceeding does not require the sanction of the Court (c)

Agreement to be bound by oath under Indian Oaths Act 1873 s 9 not within this rule—An agreement by the next friend (d) or guardian (e) of a minor that an issue in the suit should be determined by the oath of the defendant does not come within the purview of this rule and the sanction of the Court is not necessary. In such a case the minor is bound by the agreement provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend.

Abandonment of issue does not amount to a compromise—A next friend or guardian ad litem may abandon an issue in the course of the trial of the suit and the sanction of the Court is not requisite for that purpose for the abandonment of an issue does not amount to a compromise within the meaning of this rule. The abandonment is binding on the minor provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem (f).

Agreement to refer to arbitration—It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (g) and Bombay (h) and by the Chief Court of the Punjab (i) that an agreement by a next friend or guardian ad litem to refer any matter in controversy in a suit to arbitration is an agreement within the meaning of this rule and that the sanction of the Court is therefore necessary. According to the Allahabad High Court such an agreement is not within this rule and the sanction of the Court is not necessary (j). See schedule II r 1.

The decisions cited above relate to cases where the agreement to refer was made during the pendency of a suit. But cases also occur in which no suit is pending and an agreement to refer is made to which a minor is a party by his guardian. In such cases the application of the rule depends upon whether—

(1) that there should be a pending suit as indicated by the words no next friend or guardian for the suit and

(2) that there should be an agreement to refer.

If either of these conditions is wanting the present rule does not apply and no leave of the Court is necessary. A and B carry on business in partnership. A dies leaving a minor son and a widow. Disputes arise between the parties as to accounts and an agreement is made between the minor through his mother and B to refer the disputes to arbitration. The arbitrators make their award and the minor by his mother applies to file the award under para 20 of Sch II. The application is registered as a suit between the minor applicant as plaintiff and B as defendant [see the 2nd clause of para 20]. Notice is then given as required by the 3rd clause of para 20 to B and no objection to the award having been made by B the award is filed and a decree passed in terms of the award as provided by para 21 of Sch II. Does the agreement to refer require the sanction of the Court under this rule? No because it was not made during the pendency of a suit and the first of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (k). Does the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court? No because the application to file the award being made by the minor as plaintiff it cannot be said that there was an agreement on behalf of the minor not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be passed on the award in this case the second of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (l) Again if the application to file the award was made by B in which case the application would be registered as a suit between B as plaintiff and the minor as defendant would the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court? Ye if the minor's guardian agreed not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be passed on the award in this case both the conditions mentioned above are present namely that there is an agreement on behalf of the minor and the agreement is made in the course of a suit started by the application to file the award (m)

Withdrawal of suit by next friend—If the next friend of a minor plaintiff withdraws from the suit and such withdrawal is in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant the withdrawal must be with the sanction of the Court under this rule if the sanction of the Court is not obtained the order of withdrawal may be set aside at the instance of the minor (n) If an appeal is withdrawn on terms and there are parties concerned who are not suus juris the leave of the Court must be obtained (o) But if the withdrawal is not in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant the sanction of the Court is not necessary and the withdrawal is binding on the minor plaintiff provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend (p)

Where the minor is a member of a joint Hindu family—In a suit brought by some of the members of a joint Hindu family one of whom was a minor a compromise decree was passed after the compromise had been sanctioned by the Court The minor had no separate interest the adult members of the family had taken part in the compromise and assented to it and the Court declared that it was for the benefit of the minor In a suit brought on behalf of the minor to set aside the compromise decree on the ground that the proper materials which were essential to make the compromise and decree binding upon him were not placed before the Court previous to obtaining its sanction it was held that the decree was under the circumstances binding on the minor (q)

When the father of a minor a member of a joint Hindu family of which the father is the managing member is appointed his guardian ad litem his powers as managing member so far as they relate to the minor's interest are controlled by the provisions of the present rule and he cannot without the leave of the Court enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of the minor with reference to the suit Such an agreement is not binding on the minor even if it was a bona fide settlement of a disputed claim (r)

Minor in charge of Court of Wards—The sanction of the Civil Court required by this rule is not necessary having regard to the provisions of ss 18 and 21 of the Court of Ward Act (Beng Act 9 of 1879) to validate a compromise entered into under the authority and by the direction of the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor under its charge (s)

Joint bond by a minor and an adult—In a compromise of a suit two defendants of whom one is a minor enter into a bond by which they jointly agree to pay a certain sum of money to the plaintiff at a future date The leave of the Court is not obtained on behalf of the minor as required by this rule The bond is not enforceable against the minor but it is enforceable to the full amount against the adult promisor (t)

8 [ S 447 ] (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, Retirement of next friend a next friend shall not retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in his place and giving security for the costs already incurred

(2) The application for the appointment of a new next friend shall be supported by an affidavit showing the fitness of the person proposed, and also that he has no interest adverse to that of the minor

Retirement of next friend—A suit is brought by A and B both minors by their mother as their next friend. The mother is also appointed guardian of the person and property of the minors under the Guardian and Wards Act 1890. Subsequently on the application of the mother A who has then attained majority is appointed guardian of the person and property of B in her place. This is not tantamount to A being appointed next friend of B for the suit. The mother therefore cannot retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in her place and giving security for the costs already incurred (u)

9 [ S 446 ] (1) Where the interest of the next friend of a minor is adverse to that of the minor or where he is so connected with a defendant whose interest is adverse to that of the minor as to make it unlikely that the minor's interest will be properly protected by him, or where he does not do his duty, or, during the pendency of the suit, ceases to reside within British India, or for any other sufficient cause, application may be made on behalf of the minor or by a defendant for his removal, and the Court if satisfied of the sufficiency of the cause assigned, may order the next friend to be removed accordingly, and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit

(2) Where the next friend is not a guardian appointed or declared by an authority competent in this behalf, and an application is made by a guardian so appointed or declared, who desires to be himself appointed in the place of the next friend, the Court shall remove the next friend unless it considers, for reasons to be recorded by it, that the guardian ought not to be appointed the next friend of the minor, and shall thereupon appoint the applicant to be next friend in his place upon such terms as to the costs already incurred in the suit as it thinks fit

Alterations in the rule—The words and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit in sub-r (1) are new The words and shall thereupon appoint etc at the end of sub-r (2) are also new

Where the next friend does not do his duty—Where a Court finds that a next friend does not do his duty in relation to a suit it is its duty not to permit him to prejudice the interests of the minor but to adjourn the suit in order that some one interested in the minor may apply on behalf of the minor for the removal of the next friend and for the appointment of a new next friend or that the minor plaintiff himself may on coming of age elect to proceed with the suit or withdraw from it (1) So also if he is acting improperly in refusing to consent to a beneficial compromise (1c)

Appeal after expiry of limitation period—In a suit brought against a minor by his guardian a decree is passed against the minor The interest of the minor requires an appeal but certain events happen after the passing of the decree which render it to the interest of the guardian ad litem that the decree against the minor should stand and hence no appeal is preferred by him from the decree In such a case leave will be granted to the minor on his attaining majority to appeal from the decree though the period of limitation for the appeal may have expired (r)

Non appearance of next friend—When the next friend does not appear the suit should not be dismissed for default even though a reservation is made that such dismissal is without prejudice to the minor The proper course is to stay further proceedings pending the appointment of another next friend (y)

10 [Ss 448 449] (1) On the retirement removal or death of the next friend of a minor, further proceedings shall be stayed until the appointment of a next friend in his place

(2) Where the pleader of such minor omits, within a reasonable time, to take steps to get a new next friend appointed, any person interested in the minor or in the matter in issue may apply to the Court for the appointment of one, and the Court may appoint such person as it thinks fit

11 [Ss 458 459] (1) Where the guardian for the suit desires to retire or does not do his duty, or where other sufficient ground is made to appear, the Court may permit such guardian to retire or may remove him, and may make such order as to costs as it thinks fit

Retirement removal or death of guardian for the suit

(2) Where the guardian for the suit retires, dies or is removed by the Court during the pendency of the suit, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place

The words may permit such guardian to retire in sub-r (1) are new The guardian does not cease to be a guardian merely because he expresses a desire to retire.

Course to be followed by minor plaintiff or applicant on attaining majority

(2) Where he elects to proceed with the suit or application, he shall apply for an order discharging the next friend and for leave to proceed in his own name

(3) The title of the suit or application shall in such case be corrected so as to read thenceforth thus —

“ A B, late a minor, by C D, his next friend, but now having attained majority ”

(4) Where he elects to abandon the suit or application, he shall, if a sole plaintiff or sole applicant, apply for an order to dismiss the suit or application on repayment of the costs incurred by the defendant or opposite party or which may have been paid by his next friend

(5) Any application under this rule may be made ex parte but no order discharging a next friend and permitting a minor plaintiff to proceed in his own name shall be made without notice to the next friend

When title to be corrected—The provisions of this rule which require the title of a suit to be corrected apply to a pending suit and not to a suit in which a final decree has been passed and in which it only remains to proceed in execution (b)

13 [S 454] (1) Where a minor co plaintiff on attaining majority desires to repudiate the suit, he shall apply to have his name struck out as co plaintiff, and the Court, if it finds that he is not a necessary party, shall dismiss him from the suit on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit

Unreasonable or improper suit

(2) Notice of the application shall be served on all the parties concerned, and the Court, upon being satisfied of such unreasonableness or impropriety, may grant the application and order the next friend to pay the cost of all parties in respect of the application and of anything done in the suit, or make such other order as it thinks fit

15 [S 456] The provisions contained in rules 1 to 14, so far as they are applicable, shall extend to persons adjudged to be of unsound mind and to persons who though not so adjudged are found by the Court on inquiry by reason of unsoundness of mind or mental infirmity to be incapable of protecting their interests when suing or being sued

Application of rules to persons of unsound mind

Persons of unsound mind—The present rule makes the provisions of rule 1 to 14 applicable to persons of unsound mind. The result is that where a person of unsound mind is a plaintiff a suit on his behalf must be brought by a next friend and where he is a defendant the suit must be defended by a guardian ad litem. Where a manager has been appointed of the property of a lunatic under the Lunacy Act no person other than such manager should act as the next friend of the lunatic in a suit in respect of the lunatic's property (c) See r 4 sub r (2) above

Persons adjudged to be of unsound mind—A person may be adjudged to be of unsound mind under the Lunacy Act 4 of 1912

Persons of unsound mind not adjudged to be so—The old section did not contain any provision as to persons of unsound mind not adjudged to be so. But it was held that the same procedure applied where a party to a suit was of unsound mind though not adjudged to be so. For the title of suits see App A pleadings, Title of Suits.

Decree against a lunatic—A decree passed against a lunatic not properly represented in the suit cannot be challenged in execution proceedings. The reason is that a lunatic not properly represented is not a party to the suit within the meaning of s 47 above (d)

Revision.—When an application for an inquiry as to whether a party is of unsound mind was dismissed without an inquiry the order was set aside in revision (e). Where during the pendency of a suit in the Court of a Subordinate Judge the defendant's pleader informed the Court that lunacy proceedings were pending in the Court of the District Judge with reference to the mental condition of the defendant and he applied for a stay of the suit until the determination of the question by the District Judge and the application was refused it was held that although no revision lay the case was a fit one for the exercise of the inherent powers of the Court and a stay was granted (f)

ORDER XXXIII

Suits by Paupers

1 [S 401] Subject to the following provisions, any suit may be instituted by a pauper

Suit may be instituted in forma pauperis

Explanation—A person is a "pauper" when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or, where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth one hundred rupees other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject matter of the suit

Scope and object of the order—A plaintiff suing in a civil Court must pay the Court fee prescribed by law for the plaint and subsequent proceedings in the suit. These fees are prescribed by the Court Fees Act VII of 1870. But a person may be too poor to pay the Court fee and the object of this Order is to enable such person to bring and prosecute suits without payment of Court fees (h). There are however certain fees from which even a pauper is not exempted namely fees for service of process, and such fees must be paid by him (r 8). If the pauper succeeds in the suit the Government have a first charge on the subject matter of the suit for the amount of the Court fee which would have been paid by him if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper

(r 10) If the pauper fails in the suit the Court should order him to pay the Court fees due by him (r 11) An order directing a pauper plaintiff to pay the defendant in cash the costs occasioned by an amendment of the plaint and dismissing the suit in default of such payment was held to be wholly improper (v) But the Pangoon High Court has held that a pauper may be ordered to pay costs as a condition of an adjournment (j)

Is not possessed of —These words refer to property over which the petitioner has actual control They do not apply to a dowry debt due by the petitioner's husband (k)

Subject matter of the suit. —In determining whether a person claiming to sue as a pauper is worth Rs 100 neither the value of his necessary wearing apparel nor the value of the property claimed by him in the suit should be taken into consideration The ground for excluding the subject matter of the suit under this rule is that such property is presumably out of the pauper's reach and cannot be made use of by him to carry on his litigation (l)

A applies for leave to sue as a pauper for the recovery of certain ornaments worth Rs. 2000 from B Pending the investigation into pauperism B deposits in Court a portion of the ornaments claimed by A of the value of Rs. 100 as ornaments belonging to A The ornaments deposited in Court being entirely at A's disposal are no longer part of the subject-matter of the suit From the moment of the deposit A becomes entitled to property worth Rs. 100 and hence he is not entitled to sue as a pauper for the rest of the ornaments (m) Macleod J however expressed the opinion that A could not be said in such a case to be entitled to property worth Rs. 100 for otherwise every application for leave to sue as a pauper may be defeated by the respondent paying into Court Rs. 100 out of the amount claimed (n) and has recently given effect to this view in Bai Dalagarr v Motilal (o) the reason given being that the property does not cease to be the subject matter of the suit because of defendant's admission or payment

In a Madras case the petitioner had obtained a decree for maintenance and sought to appeal in forma pauperis for higher maintenance but the defendant paid Rs. 571 arrears of maintenance into Court to her credit and the petition was dismissed on the ground that she had sufficient means to pay the Court fee on the memorandum of appeal (p)

A who has mortgaged his property to B sues B for redemption A's equity of redemption is no part of the subject-matter of the suit Its value therefore should be taken into consideration in determining whether A is a pauper (q)

Sons sued as paupers to set aside an alienation of joint family property by the father but when it was found that there was a share of the property that had not been alienated they were not allowed to continue the suit as paupers (r)

Other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject matter of the suit —These words do not qualify that part of the Explanation which requires that the person should not be possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law but only the conditions that the applicant is not entitled to property worth Rs. 100 (s) Ornaments which a woman ordinarily wears are of the same class as her wearing apparel (t)

thereof, shall be annexed thereto, and it shall be signed and verified in the manner prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings

Procedure—Rules 2 to 8 prescribe the procedure to be followed when a suit is proposed to be instituted in forma pauperis

Death of applicant—Where an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis has been made but the applicant dies pending the hearing of the application the application cannot be continued by the legal representative of the deceased applicant. The reason is that the right to apply for leave to sue as a pauper is a personal right and it does not survive to the representative of the deceased applicant. But the legal representative may present a fresh application for leave to sue in forma pauperis if he himself is a pauper (h)

3 [S 404] Notwithstanding anything contained in these rules, the application shall be presented to the Court by the applicant in person, unless he is exempted from appearing in Court, in which case the application may be presented by an authorized agent who can answer all material questions relating to the application, and who may be examined in the same manner as the party represented by him might have been examined had such party attended in person

Presented to the Court—Presentation need not be to the Court itself. Presentation to the proper officer of the Court is sufficient (i)

Purda nashin woman—A purda nashin woman exempted from appearing in Court under s 13, above may present the application for leave to sue as a pauper by a duly authorized agent (j)

Pauper appeals—The provisions of this rule apply also to applications for leave to appeal as a pauper. See O 44 r 1

4 [S 406] (1) Where the application is in proper form and duly presented, the Court may, if it thinks fit, examine the applicant, or his agent, when the applicant is allowed to appear by agent, regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant

(2) Where the application is presented by an agent, the Court may, if it thinks fit order that the applicant be examined by a commission in the manner in which the examination of an absent witness may be taken the merits of the claim and (b) pauperism and (2) the examination of persons other than the applicant which should be confined to pauperism only as indicated by the provisions of rr 6 and 7 below. Persons other than the applicant cannot be examined on the merits of the applicant's claim (1)

5 [Ss 405, 407] The Court shall

Rejection of application reject an application for permission to sue as a pauper—

- (a) where it is not framed and presented in the manner prescribed by rules 2 and 3, or
- (b) where the applicant is not a pauper, or
- (c) where he has, within two months next before the presentation of the application, disposed of any property fraudulently or in order to be able to apply for permission to sue as a pauper, or
- (d) where his allegations do not show a cause of action, or
- (e) where he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter

Alteration in the rule—The expression cause of action in cl. (d) has been substituted for the words right to sue in such Court. See notes below under the head Clause (d) cause of action

Clause (a) application not framed as required by rule 2.—Failure to calculate the Court fee value in accordance with the provisions of the Court Fees Act and O 7 r 1 of the Code is a non-compliance with the provisions of Clause (a) of this rule and the application must be rejected (1)

Clause (c) fraudulent disposal of property—Thus if a person has property worth Rs 1000 and he disposes of it in August 1915 to enable himself to sue as a pauper and applies for leave to sue as a pauper in September 1915 the application should be rejected under this rule

Clause (d) cause of action—The corresponding clause of the old section ran thus That his allegations do not show a right to sue in such Court. It was contended that the words sue in such Court referred to the jurisdiction of the Court and not to the cause of action disclosed in the application. But this contention was rejected and it was held that the clause did not limit the Court to an inquiry whether the right to sue arose within the jurisdiction but that it had a more extended meaning and that the Court was to ascertain if the application showed a good subsisting cause of action capable of enforcement in Court and calling for an answer and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law (m). It was accordingly held that the application to sue as a pauper must be rejected if the right to sue was barred by the law of limitation (n).

or as res judicata (o) or if it did not disclose a good cause of action as where the application was for leave to sue on a contract which was void as being immoral and opposed to public policy (p). The expression cause of action has been substituted for the words right to sue in such Court to give effect to these decisions. The Court must as stated above consider the question of limitation to see if the applicant has a subsisting cause of action (q). But this does not mean that the Court should at this preliminary stage decide a question of limitation as to which there has been a considerable difference of judicial opinion (r).

Rule 4 provides that where the application is in proper form and duly presented the Court may examine the applicant regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant. The expression the merits of the claim has reference to r 5 (d) which says that the Court shall reject the application if the allegations of the applicant do not show a cause of action. It has accordingly been held that it is the duty of the Court to consider not only the statements made in the plaint but also the statements made by the applicant in his examination in order to determine whether his allegations do or do not show a cause of action (s) and further to determine at the preliminary stage whether the plaintiff is or is not entitled to succeed on the basis of the alleged cause of action. In some cases it was contended that in order to determine whether there was a cause of action the allegations in the plaint were the sole matters to be looked to. As to this the Allahabad High Court (t) said. If the allegations in the plaint were the sole matters to be looked to and the applicant were admittedly a pauper the granting of this application to sue as a pauper would depend not on whether he had any merits to go upon but on the skill of the gentleman who drafted his petition and his plaint, and the examination as to the merits under sec 406 (r) would be superfluous.

In an Allahabad case it was held that the Court had no power under cl (d) of this rule to reject an application on the ground that the matter in dispute was res judicata (u). This decision it is submitted is erroneous for a cause of action means a valid and subsisting cause of action not barred by limitation or res judicata.

Insolvency is not one of the grounds on which an application can be rejected under this rule (v).

Clause (e) transfer of interest in subject matter of proposed suit.—The interest transferred may be either vested or contingent. Thus an agreement authorising a pleader to recover his fees out of the revenues of a village forming the subject matter of the proposed suit in the event of the applicant failing to pay the fees to the pleader is an agreement under which the pleader obtains a contingent interest in the subject matter of the suit. If such an agreement is proved the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis must be rejected (w).

Revision.—An order rejecting an application under this rule is not appealable (x) but it is open to revision in a proper case (y) though the Allahabad High Court has in a later case held that no revision lies (z).

Letters Patent appeal—No appeal is allowed by the Code from an order made under this rule. But the Madras High Court has held that an appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from an order allowing or refusing to allow a plaintiff to sue as a pauper on the ground that such an order is a judgment and that it is neither interlocutory nor made in the exercise of discretion (a).

6 [ S 408 ] Where the Court sees no reason to reject the application on any of the grounds stated in rule 5, it shall fix a day (of which at least ten days' clear notice shall be given to the opposite party and the Government under) for receiving such evidence as the applicant may produce in proof of his pauperism, and for hearing any evidence which may be adduced in disproof thereof.

Notice of day for receiving evidence of applicants for permit

Notice —As to form of notice see App H form no 12

7 [ S 409 ] (1) On the day so fixed or as soon there after as may be convenient, the Court shall examine the witnesses (if any) produced by either party, and may examine the applicant or his agent, and shall make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence.

Procedure at hearing

(2) The Court shall also hear any argument which the parties may desire to offer on the question whether, on the face of the application and of the evidence (if any) taken by the Court as herein provided, the applicant is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in rule 5

(3) The Court shall then either allow or refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper

Sub rule (2) —The Court when issuing notice under r 6 for receiving evidence in proof of pauperism has presumably decided ex parte that none of the prohibitions in r 4 exists. But this does not preclude the Court from deciding whether the allegations of the applicant do or do not show a cause of action on the evidence of the applicant though it may be taken after the issue of the notice. This question however cannot be decided on the evidence of witnesses called to give evidence on the issue of pauperism, not even the evidence of the applicant's own witnesses. It has accordingly been held that the Court has no power to determine on the evidence of witnesses as distinguished from the evidence of the applicant himself that the applicant has no cause of action (b) or that his claim is barred by limitation (c). This rule enables the parties to argue the question if they so desire whether the application is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in r 5 above. It does not preclude the Court if no argument is offered from considering that question (d) O

Review—An order under this rule refusing leave to sue as a pauper is subject to review (e). The application for review is not liable to any Court fee (f).

Propriety of order allowing applicant to sue in forma pauperis—Where after due consideration of an application for leave to sue as a pauper the Court of first instance has allowed the suit to be instituted in forma pauperis and has passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff it is not open to the defendant in appeal from the decree to question the propriety of the order permitting the plaintiff to sue as a pauper. S 10 does not apply to such an order (g).

Legal representative—If the applicant dies before the application is granted and registered as a suit there is no suit pending and his legal representative cannot be brought on the record to continue the application (h).

Limitation where application granted—Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is granted the date on which the application is filed will be deemed to be the date on which the pauper suit is instituted for all purposes of limitation and not the date on which the application is numbered and registered as a suit [Limitation Act 1908 s 4]. Therefore when the rate of Court fee was enhanced between the date of filing and the date of granting the application the Court fees were in the calculation of costs assessed at the former rate (i).

Limitation where application refused—Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is refused and the applicant subsequently institutes a suit in respect of the same subject matter in the ordinary way (r 15) the suit will be deemed for the purposes of limitation to have been instituted on the date on which the plaint is presented and not the date on which the rejected application was filed. The reason is that upon an order of refusal under this rule the proceedings instituted under r 2 come to an end (j).

Limitation where application is converted into a plaint on payment of court fees—A person who has applied for leave to sue as a pauper may at any time before an order is made under this rule convert his application into a plaint by paying into Court the necessary Court fees. In such a case if the application was made bona fide the suit would be deemed to have been instituted for the purposes of limitation on the day on which the application was filed and not the day on which the Court fees were paid. But if it is found that the application was made in bad faith the suit would be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the Court fees were paid and not on the day on which the application was filed (k).

day on which the application was filed and not on the day on which the Court fees were paid

2 On the last day of the period of limitation prescribed for the institution of a suit A applies for leave to sue as a pauper. The application is heard a fortnight later. It transpires at the hearing of the application that A was possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the Court fees. Before an order is made under this rule rejecting the application A pays the necessary Court fees into Court and the application is thereupon converted into a plaint. The application not having been made in good faith the suit will be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the Court fees were paid and not on the day on which the application was filed. The Court fees having been paid after the expiration of the period of limitation the suit is time barred.

Limitation where plaintiff dispaupered—Where a plaintiff is dispaupered under r 9 and he pays the Court fees as provided by r 11 he is entitled to continue the suit and no question of limitation arises (i) instituted in the ordinary manner, except that the plaintiff shall not be liable to pay any Court fee (other than fees payable for service of process) in respect of any petition, appointment of a pleader or other proceeding connected with the suit

9 [S 414] The Court may, on the application of the defendant, or of the Government pleader, of which seven days' clear notice in writing has been given to the plaintiff, order the plaintiff to be dispaupered—

Dispaupering

- (a) if he is guilty of vexatious or improper conduct in the course of the suit,
- (b) if it appears that his means are such that he ought not to continue to sue as a pauper, or
- (c) if he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter

Clause (a).—Non disclosure by the plaintiff of a life policy worth Rs. 225 in a suit where the Court fees were over Rs 500 was held not to justify his being dispaupered (m)

Clause (b)—Receipt of interim maintenance during the suit is not a ground for dispaupering the plaintiff if it is not enough to enable her to save the amount required for Court fees (n) Nor can she be dispaupered because she is living with a rich relation and appearing by amice counsel (o)

Limitation where plaintiff dispaupered—See notes to r 7 under the same heading

10 [S 411] Where the plaintiff succeeds in the suit, the Court shall calculate the amount of Court fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper such amount shall be recoverable by the Government from any party ordered by the decree to pay the same, and shall be a first charge on the subject matter of the suit

Cost where pauper succeeds:

See rr 12 and 13

Amount of Court fees shall be a first charge—The charge is to be enforced by an application for the attachment and sale of the subject matter of the suit A separate suit for the sale of the subject matter to realise the Court fees is now barred see r 13 below and s 47 (p) The application for execution by the Government must be made within three years from the date of the decree in the pauper suit (q)

Recovery of Court fees by Government from party ordered to pay the same—If the plaintiff is directed to pay the Court fees the Government may realize the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the plaintiff and if the defendant is directed to pay the Court fees the Government may realise the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant

Mode of realization of Court fees by Government—The plaintiff in a suit in forma pauperis obtains a decree against the defendant for possession of certain property It is declared by the decree that the amount of Court fees shall be a first charge on the property and that the same shall also be recoverable by the Government from the defendant In such a case if the defendant fails to pay the Court fees the Government may at its option realize the Court fees either by attachment and sale of the property which was the subject matter of the suit or it may realize the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant (r) The former right is not lost merely because the property for the recovery of which the pauper suit was brought has passed from the hands of the judgment debtor into the hands of the pauper decree holder (s) The Government however have no lien upon the decree for the amount of the Court fees (t) hence if the amount of Court fees is not paid the Government are not entitled to sell the decree obtained by the plaintiff for the purpose of recovering such amount (u) In a case where a successful plaintiff's property was confined to a right to future maintenance a receiver was appointed to collect it and to pay the Government by instalments (v)

r 10 Effect of first charge.—Since the amount of Court fees recoverable by Government is a first charge on the subject matter of the suit (w) it follows that a sale held in execution of such charge must prevail against a subsequent sale (x). For the same reason the defendant against whom the decree is passed cannot set off against the subject matter of the suit any sum that may be due to him under a cross-decree held by him against the plaintiff. A obtains a decree against B for Rs 1,000 in a suit brought by him against the plaintiff. A obtains a decree against B for Rs 1,000 in a suit brought by him against the plaintiff. A is directed by the decree to pay the Court fees but he fails to pay the same. Thereupon the Government apply to attach and sell the judgment debt of Rs 1,500 due to A from B. B claims to set off Rs 1,400 due to him under a decree held by him against A. B is not entitled to the set-off claimed by him for the Government has a first charge on Rs 1,500 that being the subject matter of the suit (y).

Crown's prerogative of precedence in respect of Court fees.—If the plaintiff succeeds in the suit and the amount payable under the decree by the defendant is paid into Court the Government is entitled to payment of the Court fees out of the fund in the Court on a mere application for payment without attaching the fund in the first instance. This is because the Crown is entitled to precedence in respect of a Crown debt over all other creditors of the pauper decree holder. A obtains a decree against B for specific performance and costs in a suit brought in forma pauperis. It is directed by the decree that B should pay the Court fees to Government and the Court fees are also declared to be a first charge on the property directed to be conveyed by B to A. B fails to pay A's costs. A thereupon applies for attachment and sale of certain property belonging to B for payment of his costs. The property is sold and the sale proceeds amounting to Rs 1,000 are paid into Court. Thereafter A's solicitor C applies to the Court for payment to him out of the Rs 1,000 of the costs incurred by him on behalf of A. At the same time a claim is made by the Government Solicitor for payment of the Court fees out of the Rs 1,000 in priority to C's claim. The Government are entitled to precedence in respect of the Court fees and C is entitled only to the balance left after payment of the Court fees (z).

It is to be observed that in the Calcutta case cited above C was a creditor of A inasmuch as he was entitled to be paid his costs by A. But he was merely an ordinary creditor as distinguished from a secured creditor. It is also to be observed that Court fees form a Crown debt and the Crown was to that extent a creditor of A. It has to be borne in mind that it is only when claims of the Crown and claims of ordinary creditors or common persons (to use an old expression) concur or come into competition that the Crown is preferred. The Crown has no more right than a common person to seize A's property and apply it in or towards discharge of a debt due from A. It was so observed by Lord Macnaghten in a case in which the Privy Council held that where a money decree is obtained by a pauper in a suit by him against B and B is directed by the decree to pay the Court fees the Government are not entitled to realize the Court fees by a sale of B's property previously mortgaged by him to C so as to defeat the right of C (a). All that could be sold by the Government in such a case is the equity of redemption of B in the property (b).

Appeal.—Questions arising between the Government and any party to the suit under this rule would be questions relating to the execution discharge and satisfaction of a decree within the meaning of s. 47. And it is provided by r. 13 below that they should be deemed to be questions arising between the parties to the suit.

within the meaning of s 47. It follows that an order deciding any such question is appealable as a decree [see s 2 cl (-) and s 96] (c). Under the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Courts of Bombay and Madras that the Government not being a party to the suit such questions could not be said to be questions arising between the party to the suit within the meaning of s 244 [now s 47] and that orders determining such questions were not appealable as decrees (d). On the other hand the High Court of Allahabad held that such orders were appealable (e). Rule 13 (which is new) sets this conflict at rest by providing that though the Government is not a party to the suit the Government shall be deemed to be a party to the suit for the purposes of s 47.

Costs where pauper partly succeeds and partly fails—Rule 10 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who succeeds in the suit. Rule 11 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who fails in the suit. There is no separate provision for the case in which a pauper plaintiff has partly succeeded and partly failed. Presumably the Court is intended to deal with such a case by combining the provisions of the two rules. In such a case therefore the Court fees payable on the plaint should be apportioned between the plaintiff and the defendant. The Madras and Allahabad High Courts have held that it is illegal to lay upon the defendant in such a case a larger proportion of the Court fee leviable from the plaintiff than would have been payable by the plaintiff if the claim had been limited originally to that portion which was successful (f). But the Calcutta High Court considers that the Court has a discretion and is not bound by any hard and fast rule of apportionment (g). In a suit for Rs 3,000 the plaintiff got a decree for Rs 88 15-0 and was ordered to pay the defendant's costs amounting to Rs 151. The Court held that as plaintiff was precluded by O 21 r 19 from executing his decree the case fell under rule 11 (h). Again when a pauper appeal was allowed on a point that did not touch merits of the case the Court ordered the Court fees to be paid by the appellant and respondent in equal moieties (i).

11 [S 412] Where the plaintiff fails in the suit or is dispaupered, or where the suit is withdrawn or dismissed.—

(a) because the summons for the defendant to appear and answer has not been served upon him in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the Court fees or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, or

Alterations in the rule

- 1 The word withdrawn has been newly added See notes below under the head Withdrawn.
- 2 Besides the liability to pay the Court fees the plaintiff was under the old section subject to a further penalty of fine or imprisonment if the Court found that the suit was frivolous or vexatious This provision has been omitted in the present rule

Scope of the rule —An order under this rule directing the pauper plaintiff to pay the Court fees can only be made in the following four cases —

- (1) where the plaintiff fails in the suit
- (2) where the plaintiff is dispaupered under r 9
- (3) where the suit is withdrawn or
- (4) where the suit is dismissed under the circumstances specified in cl (a) or cl (b)

If follows from what has been stated above that where an application to leave to sue in forma pauperis is returned under O 7 r 10 for want of jurisdiction to be presented to the proper Court no order can be made under this rule directing the applicant to pay the Court fees It cannot be said in such a case that the plaintiff has failed in the suit (j) The decision may also be put on the ground that the present rule does not apply until the application is granted and is numbered and registered under r 8 above But a dismissal of the suit at the request of the plaintiff and the defendant on the suit being settled out of Court amounts to a failure within the meaning of this rule (i)

Withdrawn. —This word has been newly added Under the old section there was a conflict of decisions as to whether the Court could order the plaintiff to pay the Court fees if the suit was withdrawn (i) The insertion of the word withdrawn makes it clear that the Court has the power under this rule to order the plaintiff to pay the Court fees if the suit is withdrawn whether the withdrawal is without the leave of the Court or with leave to bring a fresh suit under O 23 r 1

Costs —This rule does not preclude the Court from awarding a successful defendant his costs in a pauper suit The Court has full power under s. 35 to give and apportion costs in any manner it thinks fit Nothing in this rule limits or otherwise affects the power conferred upon the Court by s. 35 to give and apportion costs (m)

Omission to make an order for payment of Court fees —The Government has the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of the Court fees (r 12) If the order is refused the Government may by virtue of the provisions of r 13 (which is new) prefer an appeal from the order of refusal Under the Code of 1882 it was held that the Government not being a party to the suit had no right of appeal and it could therefore proceed only by an application for revision (n).

Refusl to allow applicant to sue as pauper to bar subsequent application of like nature

Order refusing to allow applicant to sue as pauper—This rule provides that an order refusing to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue. The words "order refusing to allow the applicant to sue" have given rise to the question whether an order rejecting an application under r 5 above is an order refusing to allow the applicant to sue within the meaning of this rule or whether those words refer to an order made under r 7 where the words used are also "refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper". It has been held in some cases that there is no distinction between an order of rejection made under r 5 and an order of refusal made under r 7. Rejection of an application under r 5 is a bar to a subsequent application for leave to sue (o). On the other hand it has been held that there is a distinction between orders made under r 5 and those made under r 7 and that the refusal of an application under r 5 is no bar to a subsequent application (p).

Dismissal of application for default or for want of prosecution.—It has been held in some cases that the dismissal of a pauper application for default (g) or dismissal owing to the applicant's failure to prosecute the application is a bar to a subsequent application (r) while in some that it is not (s)

Bar to subsequent application.—The bar to a subsequent application being a bar to the jurisdiction of the Court the Court is competent and bound to take notice of it at any stage of the suit (t)

Right to sue.—There is no substantial distinction between the words right to sue in this rule and the words cause of action in rule 5. It has accordingly been held that the dismissal of an application to sue in forma pauperis for maintenance for a particular period is no bar to a subsequent application for maintenance for a different period (u).

ORDER XXXIV

Suits relating to Mortgages of Immovable Property

1 [New Act 4 of 1882 s 85] Subject to the provisions of this Code, all persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption shall be joined as parties to any suit relating to the mortgage

Explanation—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or for sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit, and a prior mortgagee need not be joined in a suit to redeem a subsequent mortgage

Suits relating to mortgages.—This Order is new. It is a re enactment with some alteration of sections 8, 90, 92, 94, 96, 97 and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 relating to suits on mortgage. The Transfer of Property Act did not contain any provision for the passing of a final decree in cases where payment was made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree. This omission has now been remedied and provision has been made in rules 3, 5 and 8 for the passing of a final decree in such cases. The object of transferring the provisions relating to mortgage suits from the Transfer of Property Act to the Code is explained in the notes to r 3 below. Limitation for application for final decree

Transfer of Property Act, 1882 s 85.—This rule is a reproduction with some alterations of s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act which ran as follows

Subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure s 437 [now O 31 r 1] all persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage must be joined as parties to any suit under this chapter relating to such mortgage provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest.

A comparison of the present rule with s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act will shew that the words in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption have been substituted for in the property comprised in the mortgage. An Explanation has been added and the proviso relating to notice is omitted. The explanation was added as it was generally thought that s 85 made it imperative on a puisne mortgagee to make a prior mortgagee a party to his action for foreclosure. The substitution of the words in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption have made it clear that an adverse claimant who is a stranger to the security or the equity of redemption need not be joined (1) see notes below. Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption

Scope and object of the rule—The object of this rule requiring all persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption to be joined as parties is to avoid multiplicity of suits (w). The rule applies only to suits relating to a mortgage that is to say to suits for foreclosure sale and redemption as indicated by the marginal note to the rule. The rule therefore does not apply to suits by a mortgagee for a personal decree against the mortgagor (as to which see r 6 below).

Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption—The corresponding words in the Transfer of Property Act s 80 were persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage. The words gave rise to a conflict of views. According to one view which coincides with the English law and the law as enunciated in the present rule those persons only should be joined as parties to a suit relating to a mortgage who were either interested in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption. A person who sets up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee should not be joined as a party to such suit for he is neither interested in the mortgage security nor in the right of redemption (x). Thus if A lets his property on a lease to B and B mortgages the leasehold to C A holding the property by title paramount should not be joined as a party defendant to a suit by C to enforce the mortgage (y). Similarly if A and B are co owners of certain property and B mortgages his undivided share to C A should not be joined as a party to a suit for sale by C as A has no interest in the right of redemption (z). According to the other view which prevailed in Allahabad all persons must be joined as parties if they had an interest in the property though they might have no interest either in the mortgage security or in the equity of redemption. The word property according to the Allahabad High Court means the actual immovable property mortgaged and not merely particular rights and interests in such property such as a bare right to redeem (a). The view held by the Allahabad High Court is no longer tenable. The present rule gives effect to the former view which as already stated is in accord ance with the English law.

But though the Allahabad High Court held that all persons interested in the mortgage property must be joined as parties to a suit on mortgage that Court agreed with the other High Courts in holding that a person who claimed adversely to the mortgagor and the mortgagee is not a necessary party to such suit. Thus if A mortgages certain property to B and B sues A for sale of the mortgaged property and C claims the property as his Official Assignee or Receiver of the assets of the mortgagor in insolvency (l) or by voluntary alienation as the transferee of the equity of redemption (m) should be made parties to a suit relating to a mortgage (n). In other words persons mentioned in s 91 of the Transfer of Property Act as persons entitled to redeem the mortgaged property should be joined as parties (o). If not joined as plaintiffs they should be joined as defendants (p). But a person not having any interest in the mortgage at the date of the suit need not be joined as a party (q).

If a mortgagee suing on his mortgage either for sale or foreclosure thinks fit to exempt from his suit some portion of the mortgaged property and to sell or to foreclose the mortgage in respect of the remainder there is nothing in law to prevent his doing so. If he exempts a portion of the mortgaged property from his suit he is not obliged to make parties to the suit persons interested in the portion so exempted (r). The same rule applies where a part of the property originally mortgaged has been absolutely released from the mortgage and has become excluded from the operation of the security (s). If the mortgagee by his laches loses his remedy against the owner of part of the equity of redemption and does not make him a party to the suit that part of the property is treated as released from the mortgage and the mortgagee must submit to a deduction from his claim (t).

Where there are two or more mortgagors that is two or more persons interested in the equity of redemption any one of them may sue for redemption but then the other mortgagors must be made party defendants (u). Where there are two or more encumbrances created on the same property the mortgagor seeking to redeem the first mortgage must join the subsequent mortgagees as parties. Similarly a second mortgagee seeking to redeem a prior mortgage must join the mortgagor as a party (s). But the prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to a suit by the mortgagor to redeem a subsequent mortgage see Explanation to the rule.

All persons interested in the mortgage security either (1) primarily as the mortgagee or (2) derivatively (i) by operation of law as the Official Assignee or Receiver of the assets of the mortgagee in insolvency or (ii) by voluntary alienation as the transferee of the security or debt should be made parties to a suit relating to the mortgage (w). If not joined as plaintiffs they should be joined as defendants.

A mortgagor mortgages his property to B. B sues A on the mortgage. During the pendency of the suit A executes a second mortgage of his property to C. C is not a necessary party to A's suit the mortgage to him having been executed subsequently to the institution of the suit (x).

for suits concerning property vested in a trustee executor or administrator Having regard to the provisions of that rule a suit for redemption (y) or foreclosure ( ) or sale may be brought by trustees without making the beneficiaries parties.

Benamidar —A benamidar can maintain a suit on a mortgage. Thus if a mortgage is executed ostensibly in favour of A but the real mortgagee is B, A may sue the mortgagor on the mortgage. It is not open to the mortgagor to contend that A being merely the benamidar he cannot maintain the suit (a).

Sub mortgagee—A mortgagee may create such estates as he pleases. He may convey by way of sub mortgage to whom and in as many parcels as he pleases (b) It has been held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court that when a mortgagor has sub mortgaged his interest in the property mortgaged to him the sub mortgagee is entitled to sell the interest in the property of his sub mortgagor without impeaching the mortgagor and foreclosing his equity of redemption in other words he is entitled to sell the sub mortgagor's interest leaving the equity of redemption outstanding in the mortgagor (c) In an earlier case (d) the Allahabad High Court took the view that a sub mortgagee is entitled only to a decree for money against the sub mortgagor but this was doubted in later cases (e) and it is not good law See notes to r 2 below Sub mortgagee

A person cannot be both plaintiff and defendant.—In a foreclosure action by a first mortgagee where the plaintiff also joined himself as a defendant as one of the junior mortgagees his name was struck out as a co defendant (1)

Consequences of non joinder—Under the corresponding section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act it was held by the Allahabad High Court that the non joinder of a person who ought to have been made a party to a suit on a mortgage was a defect fatal to the suit and that the suit should therefore be dismissed but that the Court if it sees fit to do so may add him as a party under s. 32 of the Code of 1882 [O 1 r 10 (2)]. Those decisions proceeded on what the Court said was the imperative character of the word must in section 85 of that Act (7). In a recent case under the present rule the same Court held that the result of non joinder of a subsequent mortgagee in a suit on a prior mortgage though intentional would not be the dismissal of the whole suit but only as much of it as relate to the property affected by the subsequent mortgage (8). The High Courts of Bombay (1) and Calcutta (3) took the same view as the Allahabad High Court.

The word must which occurred in a 8. of the Transfer of Property Act having been dropped and the section having been transferred into the Code the question as to the effect on non joinder is it is submitted governed by the provisions of the Code. O 1 r 0 provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of non joinder of parties and O 34 r 1 is subject to O 1 r 9 (1) Under O 1 r 10 (2) the Court has the power to add parties at any stage of the suit By s 99 of the Code it is enacted that no decree shall be reversed or substantially varied in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties [which include non joinder (1)] unless it affects the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court The result is that no suit on a mortgage should be dismissed by reason of non joinder of parties unless the parties are necessary parties and the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties If the parties are merely proper parties as distinguished from necessary parties (m) the Court may though the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties proceed under O 1 r 9 to deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interest of the parties actually before it This was in effect held by the High Court of Bombay in Shahasheb v Sadashiv (n) a case under the present rule In that case a suit was brought by a mortgagee against the widow and daughters of the deceased mortgagor for sale of the mortgaged properties The deceased was a Mahomedan and besides the widow and daughters he left a brother as one of his heirs It was contended on behalf of the defendants that the brother having an interest in the right of redemption he ought to have been joined as a defendant and that the plaintiff having omitted to join him as a defendant the suit should be dismissed in its entirety At the date when the objection as to non joinder was taken by the defendants the period of limitation as against the brother had expired It was held overruling the contention that the brother was not a necessary party and that a decree could be passed against the widow and the daughters to the extent of their interest in the properties So in a mortgage suit a second mortgagee is a proper party but not a necessary party and the suit should not be dismissed because he has not been joined (o)

Where a person who ought to have been joined as a party under this rule is not joined as a party and a decree is passed in the suit the decree cannot affect his rights (p) [see notes below Mahomedan co heirs] To take a case which frequently occurs if a second or subsequent mortgagee who ought to be but is not joined as a party to a suit by the prior mortgagee the proceedings in the suit are not binding on him so as to affect his rights under the second mortgage (q) As second mortgagee he could have sued the mortgagor for a sale of the property subject to the first mortgage or he could have redeemed the first mortgage and then sued the mortgagor for sale on both the mortgages The point to be noted is that the second mortgagee does not lose either of these rights merely because a decree has been passed in the prior mortgagee's suit and the mortgaged property has been sold in execution of the decree The sale has not the effect of displacing the second mortgagee and leaving him with nothing but a claim against the balance (if any) of the sale proceeds of the property after satisfying the first mortgagee (r) The omission to implead the second mortgagee does not in any way

1 of the Privy Council (p) that where a suit is brought on a mortgage by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity the other members of the family are not necessary parties to the suit and that the suit will not fail by reason of the non joinder of those members. It makes no difference whether the manager is a father or collateral relation such as an uncle or a brother

According to the Bombay decisions it would seem that the other co parceners are necessary parties to a suit brought on a mortgage by or against the manager (q) But if they are not joined as parties and a decree is passed for the sale of the joint family property against the manager in his representative character and the property is sold in execution of the decree the sale it has been held passes the interest of the other co parceners also in the property the mere fact that they were not parties to the mortgage suit is no ground for setting aside the sale unless it be shown by them that the debt contracted by the manager was one for which they are not liable (r)

According to the Calcutta High Court the other co parceners are necessary parties to a suit on a mortgage of joint family property and if a decree is passed in such a suit without their being joined as parties the decree is not binding on them and they may by suit obtain a declaration that not being parties to the suit their interests are not bound by the decree in the suit (s)

In another case before the Privy Council governed by the Transfer of Property Act 1882 where a foreclosure decree was passed against the manager of a joint Hindu family and the other members brought a suit to set aside the decree on the ground of their non joinder as persons interested in the equity of redemption under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act their Lordships held that the decree was in the circumstances of the case binding upon them though they were not parties to the suit. Their Lordships said There seems to be no doubt upon the Indian decisions (from which their Lordships see no reason to dissent) that there are occasions including foreclosure suits when the managers of a joint Hindu family so effectively represent all other members of the family that the family as a whole is bound. It is quite clear from the facts of the case and the findings of the Courts upon them that this is a case where this principle ought to be applied There is not the slightest ground for suggesting that the manager of the joint family did not act in every way in the interests of the family its lf and no question arises under s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act [O 34 r 1] because the mortgagee had no notice of the plaintiff's interests (t) Note that the words provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest which occurred in s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act do not occur in the present rule

The recent Privy Council case of Ganpat Lal v Bindabans Prasad (u) is an authority for the proposition that in a suit on a mortgage against the manager of a joint Hindu family all the other members of the family are represented by the manager The mortgage was by the manager and the mortgagee obtained a decree for sale joining as parties the manager and the other members of the family The mortgagee purchased the property himself But one of the members of the family who was a minor was wrongly described in the suit as an adult. He sued to redeem on the ground that not having been represented in the suit by a guardian ad litem he was not a party to the mortgagee's suit. This claim would have been unanswerable if he had not been represented by the manager in the suit. But the Privy Council held that as he had not sued to set aside the sale and did not impeach the mortgage or the decree the suit was not maintainable. In other words he was represented by the manager and it did not matter whether he was a party or not. The only ground which he could take was that he was not liable for the mortgage debt contracted by the manager and that he had not done. The same rule was applied by the High Court of Bombay in a suit for sale on a mortgage against the grandfather who was the manager (1).

Where parties are not governed by the Hindu law and the only interest which a son has under the customary law is a reversionary interest in the property and a right to protect that interest by interfering to prevent unnecessary alienations the son has no such interest in the property as is contemplated by the present rule and he is not therefore a necessary party to a suit on a mortgage against his father (2).

2 [New Act IV of 1882, sec 86] (1) In a suit for Preliminary decree in foreclosure suit foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what was due to the plaintiff at the date of such decree for—

- (i) principal and interest on the mortgage,
- (ii) the costs of suit, if any, awarded to him, and
- (iii) other costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him up to that date in respect of his mortgage security, together with interest thereon, or

(b) declaring the amount so due at that date, and

(c) directing—

- (i) that, if the defendant pays into Court the amount so found or declared due on or before such date as the Court may fix within six months from the date on which the Court confirms and countersigns the account taken under clause (a), or from the date on which such amount is declared in Court under clause (b), as the case may be, and thereafter pays such amount as may be adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges and expenses as provided in rule 10, together with subsequent interest on such sums respectively as provided in rule 11, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as the defendant appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re-transfer the property to the defendant at his cost free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall also, if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property, and

- (1) that, if payment of the amount found or declared due under or by the preliminary decree is not made on or before the date so fixed, or the defendant fails to pay, within such time as the Court may fix, the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the property

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared to be due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged to be due in respect of subsequent costs and interest

(3) Where, in a suit for foreclosure, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from, or subrogated to the rights of any such mortgagees are joined as defendants the preliminary decree shall provide for the adjudication of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No 9 or Form No 10, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require

The old rule —The above rule has been substituted for old r 2 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule will be in operation till the above date. It is as follows —

- 2 In a suit for foreclosure if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a decree—
  - (a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to or
  - (b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree and directing—

- (c) that if the defendant pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant or to such person as he appoints all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property and shall if so required re transfer the property to the defendant free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him or where the plaintiff claims by derived title by those under whom he claims and shall also if necessary put the defendant in possession of the property but
- (d) that if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court the defendant shall be debarred from all rights to redeem the property

Transfer of Property Act 1882 s 85—This rule corresponds to s 86 of the Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars —

- 1 The words to the plaintiff or which occurred in s 86 after the word pays in cl (c) have been omitted the object being that in every case the defendant should pay the money into Court
- 2 In cl (c) the words if so required have been added before the words re transfer the property as according to mofussil practice a re transfer is not ordinarily required

The old rule and the new rule —

- 1 The new rule expressly states that the decree to be passed under it is a preliminary decree
- 2 The old rule was not clear as to the date up to which accounts were to be taken The new rule makes it clear that the Court should direct accounts to be taken up to the date of the preliminary decree
- 3 The new rule expressly provides that in taking accounts the amount to be spent by a mortgagee for necessary costs charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security together with interest thereon should be taken into account
- 4 The old rule was not clear as to the day on which payment was to be made by the mortgagor in cases where accounts were directed to be taken This is now made clear in sub rule (1) (c) (i)
- 5 The provision in new sub rule (1) (c) (i) as to subsequent interest is new See rule 11 (b)
- 6 New sub rule (1) (c) makes it clear that the costs of re transfer are to be borne by the mortgagor
- 7 New sub rule (1) (c) (u) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagor in payment of the amount due under the preliminary decree the mortgagee has to apply to the Court for a final decree
- 8 New sub rule (2) relates to the power of the Court to extend the time for payment It is in substance a reproduction of old rule 3 (2) See note below Power to extend time in foreclosure suits
- 9 New sub rule (3) draws specific attention to the forms of decrees to be passed where subsequent mortgagees are joined as parties to a suit for foreclosure

Form of preliminary decree for foreclosure—See Appendix D Form No 3 when accounts are directed to be taken and Form No 3A when no accounts are taken and the Court declares the amount due

Foreclosure and sale—Until 1st April 1930 i.e. until the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act 1929 comes into operation a suit for foreclosure can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale. After that date it is no longer open to the holder of an English mortgage to sue for foreclosure. In the case of a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds in Bombay where the remedy by way of foreclosure was held to be open to such a mortgagee s. 10 (2) of the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act allows a period of two years i.e. upto 1st April 1931 to such a mortgagee to enforce his remedy by way of foreclosure. Under the Transfer of Property Amending Act 1929 the remedy by way of foreclosure is allowed only (1) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale and (2) an anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf. A suit for sale can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage.

The holder of a mortgage by conditional sale cannot institute a suit for sale. A simple mortgagee cannot institute a suit for foreclosure. A usufructuary mortgagee cannot institute a suit either for foreclosure or sale [Transfer of Property Act s. 6]. Rules 2 and 3 provide for decrees for foreclosure. Rules 4 and 5 provide for decrees for sale.

The Transfer of Property Amending Act 1929 places a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds on the same footing as a simple mortgage. In the case therefore of a mortgage by deposit of title deeds the only remedy open to the mortgagee is by way of sale except in Bombay where the mortgagee is allowed a further period of two years as stated above. See secs. 67, 96 and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 and r. 15 below.

Right of redemption—The mortgagor has at any time after the mortgage money has become payable by him a right on payment of deposit in Court or tender of the mortgage money to require the mortgagee to deliver up to him all documents in the mortgagee's possession relating to the mortgaged property and to re-transfer the property to him. This right is called the right of redemption. The right to redeem subsists so long as a mortgage subsists (r. 1) [Transfer of Property Act s. 60]. Rules 7 and 8 provide for decrees for redemption.

Account against mortgagor—Whether the suit be one for foreclosure, sale or redemption, the preliminary decree in each case must either declare the amount due or direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee for principal, interest and costs, and for other costs, charges and expenses in respect of the mortgage security. Where the same property is mortgaged to several persons in succession and the subsequent mortgagees are joined as parties to the suit, they are entitled, if they appear and prove their mortgages, to ask for a decree for an account on each of their mortgages and a declaration of their right in a suit for sale to participate in the surplus sale-proceeds in order of priority. An account is then taken of what is due on each mortgage, the sums so found due to each mortgagee are included in one report, and the sale proceeds are subsequently divided between the plaintiff and the puisne mortgagees in accordance with their claims as found by the report (9). See Appendix D Forms of Decrees Nos 9 to 11. Where the mortgagee is in possession an account is to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee for principal and interest and also of the income derived by him from the property. Whatever may be the nature of the suit, it lies upon the mortgagor to prove what is due to him for principal and interest. If the mortgage-deed is not put in evidence, as where it is not stamped and the mortgagee refuses to pay the penalty, he can only be credited in the account with the sum which the mortgagor admits was the amount of the principal ( ).

Principal.—The amount of principal and the rate of interest payable thereon are almost invariably stated in the instrument of mortgage. Such statement amounts to an admission on the part of the mortgagor that he has received the amount mentioned in the instrument. But an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted (a) and it is open to the mortgagor to show that a smaller consideration or no consideration at all passed under the instrument of mortgage (b). But the burden of proof in that case lies on the mortgagor (c). But though an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted it may operate as an estoppel so as to preclude the mortgagor from asserting that a smaller consideration or no consideration passed under the instrument of mortgage (d). This is so in cases where the mortgagee transfers his interest in the mortgage to a third party who has no notice that the full amount acknowledged to have been received on the face of the mortgage deed has not been received. In such a case the mortgagor is not entitled to redeem except on payment to the transferee of the amount stated in the mortgage deed to have been received by the mortgagor (e).

Interest.—See r 11 below and notes. See also notes to sec 34. The rule of dampnat.

Costs of suit.—Whether the suit is one for foreclosure sale or redemption the mortgagee is entitled to all costs properly incurred (f) by him including costs subsequent to decree (r 10). This right resting substantially upon contract can only be lost or curtailed by such inequitable conduct on the part of the mortgagee as may amount to a violation or culpable neglect of his duty under the contract (g). Thus costs incurred by the mortgagee after a proper tender has been made have been disallowed (h). And where in a suit for redemption the mortgagee though he had been fully paid contended that a large amount was still due to him he was directed to pay costs of the suit (i).

Other costs charges and expenses.—Sec 72 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 enables the mortgagee to spend such money as is necessary for the preservation of the mortgaged property from destruction, forfeiture or sale for supporting the mortgagor's title to the property for making his own title thereto good against the mortgagor etc. and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal. Sec 63A enables the mortgagee in possession to make such improvements as are necessary to preserve the property from destruction or deterioration and to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal. These are the costs charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iii) and they are to be taken into account in determining the amount payable by the mortgagor to the mortgagee (j). Rule 10 below provides for payment by the mortgagor to the mortgagee of similar costs charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee after the date of the preliminary decree up to the time of actual payment.

Subsequent interest.—There was no provision either in old r 2 or in old r 3 for payment of interest by the mortgagor subsequent to the day fixed under the decree for payment of the amount due. Provision has now been made for it in r 11 (b) below.

2 Plaintiff to apply for final decree for sale—Sub rule (1) (c) (ii) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagor in payment of the amount due the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale. In one case the application was made by the transferee from the mortgagee and it was contended that the decree made on his application was a nullity but it was held that the decree having been passed in the presence of the mortgagor he was bound by it (k)

Account against mortgagee in possession—Where under the terms of a usufructary mortgage the mortgagee is to enjoy the rents and profits in lieu of interest, or the rents and profits are to be taken as an equivalent of the interest and of specific portions of the principal there is no obligation on the mortgagee to render any accounts (l). In other cases a mortgagee in possession is bound to render an account of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property (m). As to annual rents against a mortgagee in possession see the undermentioned cases (n).

Power to extend time in foreclosure suits.—The proviso to old r 3 (*) empowered the Court upon good cause shown and upon such terms as it thought fit from time to time to postpone the day fixed for payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage money. This proviso has now been transferred to sub rule (2) of the present rule with some alterations. Sub rule (2) empowers the Court upon good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court from time to time at any time before a final decree is passed to extend the time fixed for payment. The power to extend the time is discretionary and the mortgagor is not entitled to an extension as of right (o). It is not a good ground for extending the time that the mortgagee was under a misconception or payment in time was unnecessary (p). It was held under the old rule that the application for extension of time need not be made before the expiry of the time originally fixed for payment and that it could be made even after the expiry of that time provided it was made before a final decree for foreclosure was passed (q). This is now made clear by substituting the words extend the time for the words postpone the day.

It was held under the old rule that even if there was no order postponing the day fixed for the payment of the mortgage-money a payment into Court by the mortgagor of the mortgage money before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure was an effectual payment (r). Effect has been given to these decisions by substituting in r 3 (1) the words before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed for the words on or before the day fixed which occurred in old r 3 (1).

Appeal from order refusing to extend time—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 (1) (c)

Sub mortgage.—A sub mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale to the same extent as the mortgagee himself (s). Where the sub mortgagee is a party to the suit the preliminary decree must direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee and of what is due to the sub mortgagee. As to the form of decree in a suit by a sub mortgagee against the mortgagee and mortgagor see Appendix D form No. 11. As to the form of decree in a suit for redemption by the mortgagor against the

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 3 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on 1st April 1930. The old rule will be in operation till the above date. It is as follows—

3 (1) Where on or before the day fixed the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid, together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10 the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the document which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up and if so required—

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree

and also if necessary—

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made the Court shall on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff pass a decree that the defendant and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also if necessary ordering the defendant to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

Provided that the Court may upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any)

Power to enlarge time as it thinks fit from time to time postpone the day fixed for such payments

Discharge of debt. (3) On the passing of a decree under sub-rule (2) the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged.

Transfer of property Act, 1882 s 87—This rule corresponds to s 87 of the Transfer of Property Act except in two particulars:— (1) sub r (1) provides for the passing of a decree where payment is made s 87 of the Transfer of Property Act contained only the words the defendants shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property (2) Sub r (2) again provides for the passing of a decree where no payment is made Under s 87 the Court had merely to pass an order See as to this distinction notes to r 3 below Final decree for sale Limitation

The old rule and the new rule—

(1) The new rule makes it clear that the decree to be passed under it is a final decree

(2) The words before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed in new sub rule (1) have been substituted for the words on or before the day fixed which occurred in old sub-rule (3).

(3) The defendant mortgagor has to apply to the Court for a decree after paying the amount into Court

(4) The proviso to old sub rule (2) regarding the power of the Court to extend the time for payment has been transferred to new rule 4

(5) In sub rule (3) it is made clear that on the passing of the final decree for foreclosure not only the mortgage debt is extinguished but all liabilities of the defendant in respect of the mortgage and on account of the suit are discharged.

Final decree for foreclosure—For form see Appendix D new form No 4 [old form No 10]. Where the mortgagor fails to pay the amount due by him on the date fixed by the preliminary decree the mortgagee may apply under sub r (2) for a final decree declaring that the mortgagor is debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property. No formal notice of such application is necessary to a mortgagor who is sui juris but notice is necessary where the mortgagor is a minor absence of notice however will not invalidate the final decree unless prejudice is caused to the minor (r) until a final decree is passed the mortgagor may apply under rule (2) for an extension of the time for payment. He may even without an extension at any time before the final decree is passed pay the money into Court and so avert foreclosure (x). See note to r 2 above. Power to extend time in foreclosure suits.

Only one final decree for foreclosure.—The law contemplates the passing of only one final decree and that a final decree can be made only after the Appellate Court has decided the appeal from the preliminary decree. Thus if A sues B for foreclosure of a mortgage comprising two properties and a preliminary decree for foreclosure is passed as regards one of the properties but the suit is dismissed as regards the other and A appeals from that part of the decree by which his suit was dismissed and pending the appeal applies for and obtains a final decree for foreclosure in respect of the property ordered to be foreclosed he cannot afterwards if he succeeds in the appeal obtain another final decree for foreclosure of the other property (y). See note to r 5 below. Only one final decree in a suit for sale.

Payment into Court.—The payment into Court may be made by the mortgagor at any time before the final decree for foreclosure has been passed. See notes to r 4 above. Power to extend time in foreclosure suits.

Effect of appeal on time for payment.—A preliminary decree is passed in a foreclosure suit fixing a period of six months from the date of the decree for payment by the mortgagor of the amount due. The mortgagor prefers an appeal from the decree but the decree is confirmed in appeal. The decree of the appellate Court is silent as to the time allowed for redemption. This does not operate as an extension of the time for payment so as to enable the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage within six months from the date of the appellate decree. The mortgagor is entitled to a final decree for foreclosure after the expiration of six months from the date of the original decree though six months may not have expired from the date of the appellate decree. The appellate decree simply confirming the original decree cannot be read as giving the mortgagor six months from the date of the decree on appeal (z). Nor does the summary dismissal of an appeal extend the time for payment (a). This is in accordance with the general principle that where time is prescribed by the decree of the lower Court for the performance of a condition precedent and the appellate Court simply confirms the decree of the lower Court or summarily dismisses the appeal it cannot be regarded as enlarging the time fixed by the original decree for the performance of the condition (b). The result is the same where the appeal is withdrawn and no decree is passed in appeal. The withdrawal does not give the mortgagor a fresh period for redemption (c). To avoid the difficulty arising in such cases the mortgagor should take care to have a fresh date fixed for payment by the appellate Court offering at the same time to pay interest up to that date (d) or he should apply under r 2 (2) for an extension of the time for payment. See note under s 34. Time for payment fixed by decree.

Sub rule 3 Discharge of debt etc on foreclosure.—Old sub rule (3) provided that on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged. The present sub rule (3) provides that

The liabilities in respect of the mortgage refer not only to the mortgage debt but also to the other costs charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iv). The liabilities on account of the suit include costs of the suit awarded against the mortgagee.

Where no payment is made by the mortgagor of the amount due on or before the day fixed the mortgagee may apply for a final decree. The procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act in suits for foreclosure redemption and sale was in the first place to pass a decree and then an order absolute. This phraseology gave rise to conflicting decisions. In some cases it was held that an application for an order absolute for sale under s 59 of the Transfer of Property Act was an application to execute the decree and that the period of limitation was three years from the date of the decree as provided by art 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 [Limitation Act 1908 art 181]. In other cases it was held that such an application was one to obtain a further decree that the only article of the Limitation Act that could possibly apply to it was the general article 138 [now art 181] but that even that article could not apply as it applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure and that there being no other article there was no period of limitation at all for an application for an order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act. [It is interesting to note that the former view was taken by the Privy Council in cases under the Transfer of Property Act decided in 1914 (e)]. To put an end to this conflict of decisions it is now provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree is one to obtain a final decree [see r 3 (2) r 5 (3) r 8 (1)] so as to bring it within the purview of art 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908 [old art 178] and not one to execute the decree (f). Further the provisions relating to mortgage suits have been transferred from the Transfer of Property Act to the Civil Procedure Code so that it is no longer possible to contend that these applications are not under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (g). The result is that an application for a final decree for foreclosure sale or redemption is now governed by the residuary article 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 and the period of limitation is three years from the date on which the right to apply accrues (h). Where an appeal is preferred from the preliminary decree the right to make such an application accrues not on the expiry of the time limited by the preliminary decree but on the date of the decree of the Court of appeal (i). This rule applies although the decree of the Appellate Court has been made three years after the time fixed for redemption by the decree of the trial Judge (j). Where a decree was passed before the new Code came into force and the application for a final decree was made after the new Code came into force it was held that the right to apply never having accrued to the decree holder until the new Code conferred it upon him the period of limitation under art 181 did not begin to run until the new Code came into force that is until 1st January 1909 (l) If the preliminary decree directs the mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage but fixes no period for such payment the starting point for limitation for an application for a final decree is at the expiry of six months from the preliminary decree (l) In a case where the Court erroneously expressed an opinion that a puisne mortgagee could not sell the property without paying off a prior mortgage it was held that limitation was suspended for the time spent in ascertaining the balance due to him (m) An omission to draw up a final decree has been treated as an irregularity and in a case where the Court erroneously made an order absolute instead of a final decree for sale execution was allowed to proceed (n)

Application for execution of final decree—Limitation for an application for execution of a final decree is under art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 (o)

4 [New Act 4 of 1882, s 88] (1) In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) (1) of sub rule (1) of rule 2, and further directing that, in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what has been found or declared under or by the preliminary decree due to the plaintiff, together with such amount as may have been adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, and the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before a final decree for sale is passed, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

(3) In a suit for foreclosure in the case of an anomalous mortgage, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court may, at the instance of any party to the suit or of any other person interested

3 on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure all liabilities to which the defendant is subject in respect of the mortgage or on account of the suit shall be deemed to have been discharged. The liabilities in respect of the mortgage refer not only to the mortgage debt but also to the other costs charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iii). The liabilities on account of the suit include costs of the suit awarded against the mortgagee.

Limitation for application for a final decree—The period of limitation for an application for a final decree in a suit for foreclosure sale or redemption is three years under art 181 of the Limitation Act 1908. As to limitation for execution of a final decree for foreclosure sale or redemption see note below. Limitation for execution of final decree.

Where no payment is made by the mortgagor of the amount due on or before the day fixed the mortgagee may apply for a final decree. The procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act in suits for foreclosure redemption and sale was in the first place to pass a decree and then an order absolute. This phraseology gave rise to conflicting decisions. In some cases it was held that an application for an order absolute for sale under s 89 of the Transfer of Property Act was an application to execute the decree and that the period of limitation was three years from the date of the decree as provided by art 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 [Limitation Act 1908 art 18]. In other cases it was held that such an application was one to obtain a further decree that the only article of the Limitation Act that could possibly apply to it was the general article 178 [now art 181] but that even that article could not apply as it applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure and that there being no other article there was no period of limitation at all for an application for an order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act. [It is interesting to note that the former view was taken by the Privy Council in cases under the Transfer of Property Act decided in 1914 (e)]. To put an end to this conflict of decisions it is now provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree is one to obtain a final decree [see r 3 (2) r 5 (3) r 8 (1)] so as to bring it within the purview of art 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908 [old art 178] and not one to execute the decree (f). Further the provisions relating to mortgage suits have been transferred from the Transfer of Property Act to the Civil Procedure Code so that it is no longer possible to contend that these applications are not under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (g). The result is that an application for a final decree for foreclosure sale or redemption is now governed by the residuary article 181 of the Limitation Act 1908 and the period of limitation is three years from the date on which the right to apply accrues (h). Where an appeal is preferred from the preliminary decree the right to make such an application accrues not on the expiry of the time limited by the preliminary decree but on the date of the decree of the Court of appeal (i). This rule applies although the decree of the Appellate Court has been made three years after the time fixed for redemption by the decree of the trial Judge (j). 4 in the mortgage-security or the right of redemption, pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit, including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum fixed by the Court to meet the expenses of the sale and to secure the performance of the terms

(4) Where, in a suit for sale or a suit for foreclosure in which sale is ordered, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from, or subrogated to the rights of, any such mortgagees are joined as parties, the preliminary decree referred to in sub rule (1) shall provide for the adjudication of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No 9, Form No 10 or Form No 11, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 4 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule is as follows—

4 (1) In a suit for sale if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a) (b) and (c) of rule 2 and also directing that in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is declared due to the plaintiff as aforesaid together with subsequent interest and subsequent costs and that the balance (if any) be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) In a suit for foreclosure if the plaintiff succeeds and the mortgage is not a mortgage by conditional sale the Court may at the instance of the plaintiff or of any person interested either in the mortgage money or in the right of redemption pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum fixed by the Court to meet the expenses of sale and to secure the performance of the terms

Transfer of Property Act s 88—This rule corresponds with sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. The reference to subsequent interest and subsequent costs is new

The old rule and the new rule—(1) The new rule expressly says that the decree to be passed under it is to be a preliminary decree

(2) The new rule says that on default in payment by the mortgagor the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

(3) The new rule makes it clear that the mortgagee has to pay not only subsequent interest and subsequent costs as under the old rule but also subsequent costs charges and expenses. See r 10 below

(4) Sub rule (2) of the new rule empowers the Court to extend the time for payment. There was no such provision in the old rules

(5) Sub rule (4) of the new rule provides for decrees in suits to which subsequent mortgagees are parties

Preliminary decree for sale—A suit for sale of mortgaged property can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage or a mortgage by deposit of title deeds or where the property is subject to a charge within the meaning of sec 100 of the Transfer of Property Act (see r 10 below). The preliminary decree to be passed in a suit for sale corresponds to the preliminary decree in a suit for foreclosure in all respects except that instead of a direction providing for foreclosure the decree is to contain a direction providing for sale of the mortgaged property. The notes therefore on r 2 above as to the taking of accounts and the determination of principal interest and costs apply equally to this rule.

Sub rule (1) Subsequent costs charges expenses and interest—See rr 10 and 11 below.

Sub rule (2) Power to extend time in suit for sale—This sub rule is new. It empowers the Court in a suit for sale to extend the time fixed for payment of the amount due by the mortgagor on good cause shown. There was no such provision in the old rule enabling the Court to extend the time for payment in a suit for sale. It was therefore held that if the mortgagor failed to pay on or before the day fixed the Court had no power to extend the time for payment and that it was bound to pass a final decree for sale (p). At the same time it was held that even if time was not extended the mortgagor was entitled under O 21 r 69 to stop the sale by payment of the amount due and costs (q) and further if the property was sold to have the sale set aside on making the deposit as provided by O 21 r 89 (r). In the cases cited above the Court held that the provisions of the Code relating to execution of decrees applied to sales under mortgage decrees. There were however cases in which it was held that the sections of the Code relating to execution did not apply to sales under mortgage decrees (s). But the latter view is no longer tenable and it was to negative that view that the sections of the Transfer of Property Act relating to decrees in mortgage suits were transferred to the Code. As to O 21 r 83 it is expressly provided that nothing contained therein applies to a sale in execution of a mortgage decree (t). See notes to r 5 below. Mortgagor's rights before confirmation of sale.

Form of decree—As to the form of a preliminary decree for sale see App D Form No 5 [old form No 4]. On referring to the form it will be observed that it does not contain any declaration of personal liability of the defendant for principal interest or costs. Such a declaration in fact ought not to be included in the decree for sale. If the sale proceeds are not sufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee the mortgagee may apply for a personal decree against the mortgagor under r 8 below (u). See Appendix D Form No 8 [old Form No 11].

Subsequent incumbrancers—For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by the first mortgagee (v) see Appendix D Form No 9 [old Form No 7]. For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by a second mortgagee see Appendix D Form No 10 [old form No 8].

Rights of second mortgagee in a suit for sale by first mortgagee—If mortgages his property first to A and then to B. A sues M for a sale of the mortgaged property making B a party defendant. In such a suit the only right of B the second mortgagee is to redeem A's mortgage or to receive his mortgage money out of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfaction of A's mortgage. He is entitled to treat the suit brought by A the first mortgagee as one for his benefit. It follows therefore that B cannot ask for a sale of the property if A's claim is satisfied by M before sale. Also if a decree for sale is passed in A's suit B cannot ask for a decree for sale of another property of M included in his mortgage. In either case B must bring a separate suit for sale on his mortgage (w).

Award and consent decree—An arbitrator is not bound by this rule. A decree in terms of an award may order the sale of the property mortgaged although no preliminary decree under this rule or final decree under rule 5 has been passed (x). So also if the decree is a consent decree (y). In Kashi Chandra v Priyanath (z) Mookerjee J. directed that before execution an order absolute should be obtained under O 34 r 5 but the consent decree in that case was in the form of a preliminary decree.

Sub rule (3) Power to decree sale in a foreclosure suit—Under the Transfer of Property Amending Act 1929 foreclosure is allowed in the case only of anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf and in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale. The remedy by way of foreclosure is no longer open in the case of an English mortgage. The words in the case of an anomalous mortgage have accordingly been added after the words in a suit for foreclosure in new sub-rule (3) which corresponds to old r 4 (2). In the case of a mortgage by conditional sale the only remedy open to the mortgagee is foreclosure and there is no scope for an alternative decree for sale.

Appeal from order refusing to extend time—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 r (1) (o). The provision for extension of time contained in sub rule (2) of this rule is now and so is the provision for an appeal from an order refusing to extend the time under sub rule (2). See O 43 r (1) (o) and notes clause (o).

5 [New Act 4 of 1882, s 89] (1) Where, on or before the day fixed or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the defendant makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub rule (1) of rule 4, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(2) Where the mortgaged property or part thereof has been sold in pursuance of a decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub rule (1) of this rule unless the defendant, in addition to the amount mentioned in sub rule (1), deposits in Court for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to five per cent of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by the purchaser

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by him together with a sum equal to five per cent thereof

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf pass a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with in the manner provided in sub rule (1) of rule 4

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 5 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule is as follows—

5 (1) Where on or before the day fixed the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10 the Court shall pass a decree—

- (a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up

and if so required—

- (b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree

and also if necessary—

- (c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made the Court shall on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff pass a decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with as is mentioned in rule 4

Transfer of Property Act 1882 s 89—This rule corresponds with sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars—

- 1 The provision contained in sub r (1) for the passing of a decree in the case where payment is made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree is new

- 2 By sub rule (2) it is provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree for sale is not for an order for sale as it was in sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act but for a decree for sale See notes below Final decree for sale Limitation
- 3 The words to the plaintiff or which occurred in sec 89 after the word pays (see 1 2 of this rule) have been omitted See notes below Payment into Court
- 4 The words and thereupon the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished which occurred at the end of sec 89 have been omitted. See notes to r 1 above Consequences of non joinder

The old rule and the new rule —

- (1) The words or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule in sub rule (1) are new
- (2) If the mortgagor pays the amount due into Court he has to apply for a final decree for a re transfer of the mortgaged property to him and if a final decree has already been passed and the amount is deposited before confirmation of sale for an order for a re transfer
- (3) Sub rule (2) is new There was no such provision in the old rule
- (4) Sub-rule (3) makes it clear that if the mortgagor fails to pay the amount into Court the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

Consent decree providing for payment in instalments—Where in a suit for sale on a mortgage the consent decree provides for payment of the mortgage money in instalments and does not provide for payment on a fixed date within six months from the date of declaring the amount due as provided by r 4 r 4 has no application and consequently it is not necessary for the mortgagee to apply for a final decree in terms of the present rule (a)

No power to go behind preliminary decree—On an application of the mortgagee for a final decree the Court has no power to go behind the preliminary decree Its powers are limited to those mentioned in this rule (b)

Only one final decree for sale—In Gajadhar v Kishen (c) Banerji J said It seems to me that this rule i.e. the rule regulating applications for final decrees in mortgage actions— contemplates the passing of only one final decree in a suit for sale upon a mortgage The essential condition to the making of a final decree is the existence of a preliminary decree which has become conclusive between the parties Where an appeal has been preferred it is the decree of the Appellate Court which is the final decree in the cause This statement of the law was approved by the Judicial Committee in Jowad Hussain v Gendun Singh (d) From this it is concluded by the Allahabad High Court (e) though not without a note of dissent (f) that if the mortgagee obtains a final decree for sale pending an appeal from the preliminary decree the decree is invalid and incapable of execution though the mortgagee may apply for a final decree on foot of the preliminary decree as passed by the Appellate Court In a Patna case (g) however a final decree in exactly similar circumstances prior to the dismissal of the mortgagor's appeal from a preliminary decree was treated as valid though operative only from the date of dismissal of the appeal

Mortgagor's rights before confirmation of sale—In sub rule (1) the words or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this rule are new. They enable the mortgagor to pay the amount due into Court even after sale provided the sale is not confirmed under O 21 r 92. The mortgagor may exercise this right even if no order has been made extending the time for payment. Where the deposit of the amount due is made after the property has been sold the mortgagor must also deposit for payment to the purchaser a sum equivalent to five per cent of the purchase money as provided by sub rule (2). If he does so the sale becomes ineffective and the purchaser is entitled to repayment of the purchase money paid by him into Court together with the deposit of five per cent. On the mortgagor depositing the amount due and the five per cent he is entitled to an order under sub rule (1) ordering the mortgagee to deliver up the title deeds and to re transfer the mortgaged property to him. See notes to r 4 above. Power to extend time in suit for sale.

Payment into Court—Under sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act the defendant was at liberty to pay the amount to the plaintiff or into Court. Under the present rule [sub r (1)] the payment has to be made into Court. If the money is not paid into Court the Court must pass a final decree for sale [sub rule (3)]. It has been held in some cases that if money payable under the preliminary decree is paid out of Court but the payment is not certified as required by O 21 r 2 the Court should not take any notice of the payment and no credit should be given to the mortgagor in respect thereof (h). On the other hand it has been held that an application for a final decree is not an application for execution and O 21 r 2 does not apply (i) and this seems to be the correct view. In a Patna case (j) the High Court held that O 23 r 3 applied to such a case and directed the trial Court to take an account of the money alleged to have been paid by the mortgagor after the date of the preliminary decree. If the decree is a consent decree or one which is not passed under rr 4 and 5 there is no obligation to pay into Court and the Court can inquire into the payment or adjustment whether certified or not (k).

Dismissal of mortgagee's application for final decree for default—Where an application is made by the mortgagee for a final decree it should not be dismissed for his subsequent absence. If it is dismissed the order of dismissal must be set aside and a final decree must be passed (l).

Sufficient part thereof—It is not necessary to sell all the properties mortgaged at once. Ordinarily the right of selling in a particular order rests with the decree holder but in view of equities arising in favour of various parties the Court may direct the order in which they should be sold (m).

Effect of sale under mortgage decree—By a sale of property in execution of a decree for the payment of money the interest of the judgment debtor alone passes to the purchaser (n). By a sale of mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage decree the interest both of the mortgagor and mortgagee passes to the purchaser (o). See notes to r 1 above under the head Consequences of non joinder.

Injunction restraining mortgagor from receiving income of mortgaged property—It has been held in Allahabad that it is not competent to the Court after a final decree for sale has been passed to restrain the mortgagor by an injunction from

- (1) The words or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule' in sub-rule (1) are new
- (2) If the mortgagor pays the amount due into Court he has to apply for a final decree for a re transfer of the mortgaged property to him and if a final decree has already been passed and the amount is deposited before confirmation of sale for an order for a re transfer
- (3) Sub rule (2) is new There was no such provision in the old rule
- (4) Sub rule (3) makes it clear that if the mortgagor fails to pay the amount into Court the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

Consent decree providing for payment in instalments—Where in a suit for sale on a mortgage the consent decree provides for payment of the mortgage money in instalments and does not provide for payment on a fixed date within six months from the date of declaring the amount due as provided by r 4 r 4 has no application and consequently it is not necessary for the mortgagee to apply for a final decree in terms of the present rule (a)

No power to go behind preliminary decree—On an application of the mortgagee for a final decree the Court has no power to go behind the preliminary decree Its powers are limited to those mentioned in this rule (b)

Only one final decree for sale—In Gajadhar v. Aishan (c) Banerji J said It seems to me that this rule i.e. the rule regulating applications for final decrees in mortgage actions— contemplates the passing of only one final decree in a suit for sale upon a mortgage The essential condition to the making of a final decree is the existence of a preliminary decree which has become conclusive between the parties Where an appeal has been preferred it is the decree of the Appellate Court which is the final decree in the cause This statement of the law was approved by the Judicial Committee in Jowad Hussain v. Gendan Singh (d) From this it is concluded by the Allahabad High Court (e) though not without a note of dissent (f) that if the mortgagee obtains a final decree for sale pending an appeal from the preliminary decree the decree is invalid and incapable of execution though the mortgagee may apply for a final decree on foot of the preliminary decree as passed by the Appellate Court In a Patna case (g) however a final decree in exactly similar circumstances prior to the dismissal of the mortgagee's appeal from a preliminary decree was treated as valid though operative only from the date of dismissal of the appeal

Mortgagor's rights before confirmation of sale—In sub rule (1) the words or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule are new. They enable the mortgagor to pay the amount due into Court even after sale provided the sale is not confirmed under O 21 r 2. The mortgagor may exercise this right even if no order has been made extending the time for payment. Where the deposit of the amount due is made after the property has been sold the mortgagor must also deposit for payment to the purchaser a sum equivalent to five per cent of the purchase money as provided by sub rule (2). If he does so the sale becomes ineffective and the purchaser is entitled to repayment of the purchase money paid by him into Court together with the deposit of five per cent. On the mortgagor depositing the amount due and the five per cent he is entitled to an order under sub-rule (1) ordering the mortgagee to deliver up the title deeds and to re-transfer the mortgaged property to him. See notes to r 4 above. Power to extend time in suit for sale.

Payment into Court.—Under sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act the defendant was at liberty to pay the amount to the plaintiff or into Court. Under the present rule [sub r (1)] the payment has to be made into Court. If the money is not paid into Court the Court must pass a final decree for sale [sub rule (3)]. It has been held in some cases that if money payable under the preliminary decree is paid out of Court but the payment is not certified as required by O 21 r 2 the Court should not take any notice of the payment and no credit should be given to the mortgagor in respect thereof (h). In a Patna case (j) the High Court held that O 23 r 3 applied to such a case and directed the trial Court to take an account of the money alleged to have been paid by the mortgagor after the date of the preliminary decree. If the decree is a consent decree or one which is not passed under rr 4 and 5 there is no obligation to pay into Court and the Court can inquire into the payment or adjustment whether certified or not (k).

Appeal—Under the present Code a party aggrieved by a preliminary decree passed under r 4 of this Order may appeal from it. If he does not appeal from it he is precluded from disputing its correctness in an appeal which may be preferred from the final decree passed under this rule [s 97] (q). Even under the old Code the correctness of the decree under sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act [now O 34 r 4] could not be questioned in an application for an order absolute under sec 89 [now O 34 r 5] or in an appeal from an order absolute made on such an application (r).

An adjudication dismissing an application under this rule for a final decree for sale is not an order under s 47 but a decree and is appealable as such under s 96 (s) and is therefore not open to revision (t).

Dekkan Agriculturists Relief Act 17 of 1879—As to the applicability of this rule to cases under the Dekkan Agriculturists Relief Act see the undermentioned case (u).

Court fees Act—An appeal from a final decree for sale under this rule requires an ad valorem court fee and cannot be stamped as an appeal from an order (i).

Costs not recoverable from mortgagor personally—In a mortgage decree for sale costs are part of the amount due upon the mortgage and are recoverable from the mortgaged property and not personally from the mortgagor unless the decree itself so directs (w).

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 6 by Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule is as follows—

6 Where the net proceeds of any such sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff if the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold the Court may pass a decree for such amount.

The old rule and the new rule—The words any sale held under the last preceding section in the new rule have been substituted for the words any such sale. It is thus made clear that this rule applies to a sale held in execution of a decree passed under rule 5 which rule 8 A applies to a sale held in execution of a decree passed under rule 8.

Personal Decree for balance against mortgagor—Where after the sale of the mortgaged property there is still a balance due to the mortgagee and that amount is legally recoverable from the mortgagor the mortgagee may apply for and obtain a decree under this rule against the mortgagor personally which he may execute against the person of the mortgagor or by attachment and sale of his other properties (x). A decree under this rule is a decree to be passed in the original suit and not in a fresh suit (y). The object of the rule is to obviate the necessity of a fresh suit to recover the balance (z). Such a suit in fact could not be brought except where the mortgagee had reserved his right to do so with the leave of the Court under O 2 r 2 (a). A personal decree under this rule for the balance should not be passed until after the mortgaged property had been sold and the proceeds found insufficient to pay the mortgage money in other words the Court should not while passing a decree for sale under r 5 pass a personal decree for the balance and a personal decree can only be passed when the sale proceeds are found to be insufficient to satisfy the mortgagee's claim (b). In a recent case the Judicial Committee held that a decree for sale under sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 can validly provide that if the proceeds of sale are not sufficient to pay the mortgage debt the mortgagor should pay the balance personally though the personal decree could not be executed until after the property was sold and the nett sale proceeds were found to be insufficient to satisfy the debt (c). But the form of the decree to be passed under this rule Appendix D Form No 11 makes it clear that a personal decree cannot be passed until after the sale is held and the balance ascertained. If it is passed before sale and the mortgagor does not object he is estopped from doing so at a later stage (d). When the decree only gives the mortgagee a remedy against the mortgaged property the personal remedy having become time barred the mortgagee can only recover against the mortgaged property (e). See App A Form No 45 and App D Form No 4.

A personal decree cannot be passed under this rule unless all the properties directed to be sold under rr 4 and 5 have been sold. This is because the remedy of the mortgagee in the first instance is against the properties mortgaged and such properties should in the first instance be exhausted before a personal liability can be imposed upon the mortgagor. But this does not mean that if a portion of the properties is destroyed or has ceased to be available for sale through no fault of the mortgagee there can be no decree for personal liability against the mortgagor (f). It has similarly been held that the omission to include in the plaint a portion of the mortgaged property does not debar the mortgagee from obtaining a personal decree under this rule provided the omission was not intended to prejudice and has not prejudiced the mortgagor (g). In a case of a mortgage by the father of a joint Hindu family not being one for necessity the High Court of Madras held that the mortgagee was entitled to a conditional decree under this rule against the father personally and against the joint family property of himself and his undivided sons for the recovery of the balance in case the sale proceeds of the father's share of the mortgaged property was insufficient (h). Where a sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage by a Hindu lady was set aside at the instance of her grandson who was the real owner the Allahabad High Court passed a personal decree against her under this rule saying that the mortgagee having been compelled to refund the purchase money to the purchaser the net proceeds of the sale were nil and therefore insufficient to pay the amount due (i). The absence of any reservation in the preliminary decree of liberty to the decree holder to apply for a personal decree does not disable him from doing so later (j).

Where net proceeds of any such sale held under r 5 are found insufficient.—A personal decree under this rule can only follow the mortgage decree under which the sale is held. Therefore if a sale has taken place under a decree on a prior mortgage that would not entitle a subsequent mortgagee who has also obtained a decree for sale to apply for and obtain a decree under this rule. The reason is that the sale was not held under his decree (k). Similarly where a person holding two mortgages over the same property brings two suits on those mortgages and obtains two decrees and the mortgaged property is sold under one of those decrees the fact that the sale proceeds after discharging that decree are not sufficient to pay the amount due under the other decree would not entitle him to apply for and obtain a personal decree under this rule for the balance due under the other decree. The reason is that the property was sold not under that decree but under the first decree (l).

Amount due.—A personal decree under this rule can only be passed where the net proceeds of the sale are insufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee. The expression amount due includes costs (m) [see r 4 (1)]. It also includes when a puisne mortgagee is plaintiff the amount paid by him in satisfaction of prior mortgages (n).

Personal obligation to pay a question of construction.—In India a mortgage does not necessarily import a personal obligation to repay. Prima facie this obligation is present in simple mortgages and of course in English mortgages. Prima facie it is not present in mortgages by conditional sale and in usufructuary mortgages. In each case the question is one of construction of the mortgage instrument and the personal liability to repay may become barred before the right of recourse to the mortgaged property is barred (o).

Legally recoverable.—No decree can be passed for the balance under this rule unless the balance is legally recoverable. The balance is not legally recoverable if the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is barred by limitation at the date of the suit for sale. It would be barred in the case of an unregistered instrument after the expiration of three years from the date on which it is repayable and in the case of a registered instrument after the expiration of six years from that date (p) unless the right is kept alive by acknowledgment as provided by s 19 of the Limitation Act 1908 or by payment of interest or part payment of principal as provided by s 20 of that Act. If the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is not barred at the date of the suit for sale the mortgagee is entitled if there is a deficiency to a personal decree for the balance though the application under this rule may be made after the expiry of the period of limitation for a suit for a personal decree (2). The mortgagee however is not entitled to wait indefinitely for a personal decree after the deficiency has been ascertained. He must apply for a personal decree within three years from the date when the deficiency is ascertained as provided by Art 181 of the Limitation Act otherwise the application will be time barred (r).

Legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold.—These words mean by way of illustration that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded by the terms of the mortgage from realizing otherwise than out of the property sold (s).

Personal liability of purchaser from mortgagor.—The transferee of the equity of redemption in mortgaged property who has agreed with the mortgagor to pay to the mortgagee the amount due to him is not a person from whom the balance is legally recoverable within the meaning of this rule there being no contract between him and the mortgagee. Hence no personal decree can be passed against the transferee under this rule at the instance of the mortgagee (f).

Costs against puisne mortgagee.—A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a decree under this rule against a puisne mortgagee for the amount of his costs. The present rule does not apply to such a case (u).

Limitation.—See notes above. Legally recoverable.

Consent decree.—A consent decree may provide for personal recovery from the mortgagor by execution of the decree if the sale proceeds are insufficient and in that case no further decree under this rule is necessary (t).

Appeal.—An appeal from a decree under this rule lies to the District Judge and not to the High Court notwithstanding that the decree be for a sum exceeding Rs 5 000 if the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs 5 000 (w). See notes to sec 98 Forum of appeal.

Limitation Act 1908 or by payment of interest or part payment of principal as provided by s 20 of that Act. If the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is not barred at the date of the suit for sale the mortgagee is entitled if there is a deficiency to a personal decree for the balance though the application under this rule may be made after the expiry of the period of limitation for a suit for a personal decree (q). The mortgagee however is not entitled to wait indefinitely for a personal decree after the deficiency has been ascertained. He must apply for a personal decree within three years from the date when the deficiency is ascertained as provided by Art 181 of the Limitation Act otherwise the application will be time barred (r).

Legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold.—These words mean by way of illustration that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded by the terms of the mortgage from realizing otherwise than out of the property sold (s).

Personal liability of purchaser from mortgagor.—The transferee of the equity of redemption in mortgaged property who has agreed with the mortgagor to pay to the mortgagee the amount due to him is not a person from whom the balance is legally recoverable within the meaning of this rule there being no contract between him and the mortgagee. Hence no personal decree can be passed against the transferee under this rule at the instance of the mortgagee (t).

Costs against puisne mortgagee.—A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a decree under this rule against a puisne mortgagee for the amount of his costs. The present rule does not apply to such a case (u).

Limitation.—See notes above. Legally recoverable.

Consent decree.—A consent decree may provide for personal recovery from the mortgagor by execution of the decree if the sale proceeds are insufficient and in that case no further decree under this rule is necessary (v).

Appeal.—An appeal from a decree under this rule lies to the District Judge and not to the High Court notwithstanding that the decree be for a sum exceeding Rs 5 000 if the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs 5 000 (w). See notes to sec 98 Forum of appeal.

  - (ii) that, if payment of the amount found or declared due under or by the preliminary decree is not made on or before the date so fixed, or the plaintiff fails to pay, within such time as the Court may fix, the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, the defendant shall be entitled to apply for a final decree—
    - (a) in the case of a mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale, or an anomalous mortgage the terms of which provide for foreclosure only and not for sale, that the mortgaged property be sold, or

- (b) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or such an anomalous mortgage as aforesaid, that the plaintiff be debarred from all right to redeem the property

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale, as the case may be, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 7 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule is as follows—

7 In a suit for redemption if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a decree—

- (a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the defendant for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to or

- (b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree and directing—

- (c) that if the plaintiff pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff or to such person as he appoints all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property and shall, if so required, retransfer the property to the plaintiff free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him or where the defendant claims by derived title by those under whom he claims and shall if necessary put the plaintiff in possession of the property but

- (d) that if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court the plaintiff shall (unless the mortgage is simple or usufructuary) be debarred from all right to redeem or (unless the mortgage is by conditional sale) that the mortgaged property be sold

The old rule and the new rule—

1 The general changes in this rule are on the lines of those in new rules 2 and 4 above. See note to r 2 and to r 4. The old rule and the new rule

2 In sub rule (1) (c) (u) the cases in which a decree for sale and the cases in which a decree for foreclosure can be passed have been specifically mentioned. See Transfer of Property Act sec 67

3 Sub rule (2) empowers the Court to extend the time for payment until a final decree for foreclosure or sale has been passed.

Preliminary decree for redemption—This rule excepting sub rule (1) (c) (u) corresponds with r 2 above which relates to a preliminary decree for foreclosure. The notes on that rule apply mutatis mutandis to this rule. For the form of a preliminary decree for redemption see Appendix D form no 5

Other costs charges and expenses—See notes to r 2 above under the same head

Subsequent costs, charges and expenses —See r 10 below

Subsequent interest —See r 11 below

Power to extend time in suit for redemption—The proviso to old r 8 was in these terms provided that the Court may upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit from time to time postpone the day fixed for payment. Under the present rule the Court has the power to extend the time at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale. It is clear that the new sub rule 7 ( ) applies in every case where a decree for redemption has been passed whatever may be the nature of the mortgage (x). When in a partition suit an alienation of part of the property was held binding for a certain amount only and the alienee was ordered to give possession on payment being made of that amount in a certain time this was held to be an effect a decree for redemption and subject to the power of enlargement of time (y). But this decision is of doubtful authority. See notes to r (2) above. Power to extend time in foreclosure suit. The application for extension of time should be made to the Court of the first instance even if the decree for redemption was passed by the appellate Court (z).

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 r 1 (o).

8 [New Act 4 of 1892, s 93] (1) Where, before a final decree debarring the plaintiff from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed or before the confirmation of a sale held in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the plaintiff makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub rule (1) of rule 7, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree, and, if necessary,—

(b) ordering him to re-transfer at the cost of the plaintiff the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,

and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub rule (1) of this rule, unless the plaintiff, in addition to the amount mentioned in sub rule (1), deposits in Court for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to five per cent of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by the purchaser

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by him, together with a sum equal to five per cent thereof

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf —

- (a) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or of such an anomalous mortgage as is hereinbefore referred to in rule 7, pass a final decree declaring that the plaintiff and all persons claiming under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and, also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the mortgaged property, or
- (b) in the case of any other mortgage not being a usufructuary mortgage, pass a final decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and the balance, if any, be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same "

The old rule —The above rule has been substituted for old r 8 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule is as follows —

8 (1) Where on or before the day fixed, the plaintiff pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10 the Court shall pass a decree—

- (a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up and, if so required —
- (b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree and also if necessary —
- (c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made and the mortgage is not simple or usufructuary the Court shall on application made in that behalf by the defendant pass a decree that the plaintiff and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also if necessary ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the property.

(3) On the passing of a decree under sub rule (2) the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged.

(4) Where such payment is not so made and the mortgage is not by conditional sale the Court shall on application made in that behalf by the defendant pass a decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant and that the balance (if any) be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same.

Provided that the Court may upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit from time to time postpone the day fixed for payment.

The old rule and the new rule.—The changes in this rule have been made on the lines of those in rules 3 and 5 above. See notes to rr 3 and 5. The old rule and the new rule.

The provision regarding the power of the Court to extend the time for payment which appeared as a proviso to old rule 8 (4) has been transferred to new rule 7.

Sub rule (1) decree for mortgagor.—Sub rule (1) of this rule corresponds with sub rule (1) of rules 3 and 5. See notes to rules 3 and 5. Where the amount declared due in a decree for redemption is paid by the mortgagor into Court the mortgagor does not lose his right to a decree under sub rule (1) because he has attached and withdrawn from Court a portion of the sum so paid in execution of that portion of the decree which awarded him costs against the mortgagee (a). If time for payment has been extended payment within the time so extended gives the mortgagor a right to a decree (b). The mortgagee is not entitled under O 21 r 1 (c) to notice of payment into Court (c).

Sub rule (2) decree for foreclosure.—The mere fact that the preliminary decree for redemption does not contain a direction for foreclosure or sale in default of payment on the day fixed does not disentitle the mortgagee to a decree for foreclosure or sale as the court may do. The omission of the Court to draw up the proper decree under r 7 does not deprive the mortgagee of the relief provided by this rule (d). The decree for foreclosure or sale under this rule should be passed by the Court which passed the preliminary decree for redemption notwithstanding that the latter decree has been varied by the appellate Court (e).

8A [New] Where the net proceeds of any sale held under the last preceding rule are found insufficient to pay the amount due to the defendant, the Court on application by him, may, if the balance is legally recoverable from the plaintiff otherwise than out of the property sold, pass a decree for such balance.

Personal decree in suit for redemption—This rule is new. It has been added by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929. Rule 6 provides for a personal decree against the mortgagor in a suit for sale brought by the mortgagee. The present rule provides for a personal decree in a suit for redemption brought by the mortgagee.

9 Notwithstanding anything heretofore contained if it appears upon taking the account referred to in rule 7, that nothing is due to the defendant or that he has been overpaid, the Court shall pass a decree directing the defendant if so required, to retransfer the property and to pay to the plaintiff the amount which may be found due to him and the plaintiff shall, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property.

This rule provides for cases where nothing is found due to the mortgagee and for cases where the mortgagee has been overpaid as may well happen where he is in possession. There was no such provision in the Transfer of Property Act but the practice followed under that Act was the same as that prescribed by this rule (f).

10 [New Act 4 of 1882 s 94] In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a foreclosure sale or redemption the Court shall, unless in the case of costs of the suit the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him thereto, add to the mortgage money such costs of the suit and other costs, charges and expenses as have been properly incurred by him since the date of the preliminary decree for foreclosure, sale or redemption up to the time of actual payment.

The old rule—The above rule has been substituted for old r 10 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929 which comes into operation on 1st April 1930. The old rule is as follows—

10 In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a foreclosure or sale or redemption the Court shall unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs add to the mortgage money such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure or sale or redemption up to the time of actual payment.

Other costs charges and expenses—The words "and other costs charges and expenses" are new. The addition of these words makes it clear that all costs charges and expenses properly incurred by a mortgagee subsequent to the passing of the preliminary decree are to be added to the mortgage money and the mortgagor has to pay them before he can redeem the mortgage. Such cost charges and expenses were added to the mortgage money even before the amendment of the present rule by the Act of 1929 (g).

(f) See Fau v. Lish (1901) Bom 115; Yad v. Dattaji (1907) 6 Bom 661.

(g) Allahabad Bank v. Motilal Barmen (1917) 44 Cal 418.

But costs of a successful appeal by the mortgagee from an order striking off execution proceedings cannot be so added. The mortgagor is liable for them personally (h) If the costs of an appeal from a preliminary decree have by mistake been omitted in the final decree the Court of execution cannot include them (i) Subsequent interest not mentioned in the final decree must be taken as refused (j)

11 [New] In any decree passed in a suit for foreclosure, sale or redemption, where interest is legally recoverable, the Court may order payment of interest to the mortgagee as follows, namely —

(a) Interest up to the date on or before which payment of the amount found or declared due is under the preliminary decree to be made by the mortgagor or other person redeeming the mortgage—

(i) on the principal amount found or declared due on the mortgage,—at the rate payable on the principal, or, where no such rate is fixed at such rate as the Court deems reasonable

(ii) on the amount of the costs of the suit awarded to the mortgagee,—at such rate as the Court deems reasonable from the date of the preliminary decree, and

(iii) on the amount adjudged due to the mortgagee for costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security up to the date of the preliminary decree and added to the mortgage money,—at the rate agreed between the parties or failing such rate, at the same rate as is payable on the principal, or failing both such rates, at nine per cent per annum, and

(b) Subsequent interest up to the date of realization or actual payment at such rate as the Court deems reasonable—

(i) on the aggregate of the principal sums specified in clause (a) and of the interest thereon as calculated in accordance with that clause, and

(ii) on the amount adjudged due to the mortgagee in respect of such further costs, charges and expenses as may be payable under rule 10

The old rule—This rule relates to interest. The old rule had nothing to do with interest. It gave a right to a mesne mortgagee to redeem and foreclose. It is not transferred to the Transfer of Property Act as sec 94. It was as follows—

11 Where property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees any mesne mortgagee may institute a suit to redeem the interests of the prior mortgagee and to foreclose the rights of those that are posterior to himself and of the mortgagor.

Interest in mortgage suits—This rule is new. It has been added by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1930. It comes into operation on 1st April 1930. It gives effect to judicial decisions under the Transfer of Property Act 1882 and under O 34 of the Code. Summarising those decisions it may be said that in a suit on a mortgage the Court awarded—

- (1) interest on the principal prior to the date of the suit at the rate provided by the mortgage (Usury Laws Repeal Act 1850 s 2) unless the rate is penal in which case the Court may award such interest as it deems proper (A) [Indian Contract Act 1872 s 74] or the interest is excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair in which case also the Court may reduce it (Various Loans Act 1918 s 3) and
- (2) interest on the principal from the date of the suit up to the date fixed by the Court for payment of the mortgage debt also at the rate provided by the mortgage [Transfer of Property Act ss 86 88 now O 34 rr 1 and 4] unless the rate is penal in which case the Court may award interest at such rate as it deems proper (b) or the interest is excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair in which case also the Court may reduce it (c)
- (3) interest on the aggregate amount of principal interest and costs from the date fixed for the payment of the mortgage debt up to the date of redemption or actual payment at such rate as the Court deems proper. It may be allowed at the Court rate that is 6 per cent per annum (n) or at any other rate (o). The Court is not bound to award it at the contract rate (p).

As to item (3) above it was contended on behalf of the mortgagor before their Lordships of the Privy Council in Maharaja of Bharatpur v Lanno Desai (q) that according to the true construction of s 88 of the Transfer of Property Act the Court had no power to award interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment of the mortgage debt but this contention was overruled and it was held that that section did not preclude the payment of such interest and this view was reiterated by their Lordships in Sunder Rao v Ras Sham Kishen (r) and Raja Gokuldas v Sheth Glasiram (s). O 34 r 4 which is in substance a reproduction of sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act now contains an express provision for payment of subsequent interest.

11 On a preliminary decree for foreclosure or sale under rr 2 and 4 a mortgage is entitled to interest at the rate and with the rests stipulated in the mortgage down to the date fixed for redemption by the decree and if the decree is varied on appeal down to the date fixed for redemption by the Appellate Court (f)

Although a mortgage for ample security provides for excessive and usurious interest no presumption arises that it was induced by undue influence in the absence of proof by the mortgagor that the mortgagee was in a position to dominate his will (u)

There was a considerable conflict of decisions as to whether if there was no express provision in the mortgage deed for payment of interest after the due date for payment specified in the deed the Court could allow interest subsequent to that date. It was held in some cases that if on an examination of the deed the Court came to the conclusion that there was an intention to pay interest not only up to the due date but also after that date and up to the date of payment the Court should allow interest on the footing that the deed contained a provision for the payment of such interest (v). Where the deed contained a stipulation for periodical payment of interest and there was nothing in the deed to suggest that the liability in respect of interest should cease on the due date it was presumed by the Court that there was an intention to pay interest up to the date of payment (w). If on the other hand the Court came to the conclusion that there was no intention to pay interest after the due date the practice was to allow interest by way of damages at the contract rate. At the same time it was recognised that the contract rate was not necessarily the measure of damages (x). Where interest was allowed by way of damages it was held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that it could be added to the mortgage money and recovered out of the mortgaged property (y). The High Court of Allahabad held that it could not be recovered out of the mortgaged property and that there could only be a personal decree against the mortgagor for such interest (z). It was thought in some cases that the claim for interest by way of damages being a claim for compensation for breach of contract the claim would be barred unless it was made in a suit on a mortgage within three years from the due date fixed for payment of the mortgage money in the case of an unregistered instrument and six years in the case of a registered instrument (a). In the undermentioned case (b) however the Judicial Committee observed that such a claim was a recurring one within the meaning of sec 23 of the Limitation Act and that so long as the principal was not barred interest for three or for six years as the case may be could be recovered. These nice distinctions have been done away by the present rule and provision is made in sub rule (b) for interest subsequent to the date of the preliminary decree and the rate of interest is left to the discretion of the Court.

12 [Act 4 of 1882, s 96] Where any property the sale of which is directed under this Order is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, direct that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage
 Sale of property free from prior mortgage—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit [see the Explanation to r 1] In such a case as also where the prior mortgagee is joined as a party and his mortgage is admitted (c) the prior mortgagee may consent to the property being sold free from his mortgage in which case he acquires the right to have his claim satisfied first out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property [see r 13 below]

Where the prior mortgagee is a usufructuary mortgage—A holds two mortgages on the same property the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage Can A sue for sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage free from the usufructuary mortgage and claim to be paid out of the sale proceeds the amount due upon the usufructuary mortgage under this and the next rule? Yes according to the Madras ruling (d) No according to the Allahabad rulings unless the two mortgages are in favour of different persons (e)

The High Court of Patna has held that where a person holds two mortgages on the same property the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage he is entitled to sue for the sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage subject to his prior usufructuary mortgage and also that he is entitled to have the prior mortgage notified at the sale in execution of the decree obtained on the subsequent mortgage for the information of bidders at the sale though the prior mortgage was not mentioned in his plaint The omission to mention the prior mortgage in the plaint does not preclude him from keeping alive that mortgage by notifying it at the sale (f)

first in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale, secondly, in payment of whatever is due to the prior mortgagee on account of the prior mortgage, and of costs, properly incurred in connection therewith thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made, fourthly, in payment of the principal money due on account of that mortgage, and lastly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proving himself to be interested in the property sold, or if there are more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein or upon their joint receipt

(2) Nothing in this rule or in rule 12 shall be deemed to affect the powers conferred by section 57 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882

Application of proceeds—Compare s 73 proviso (c) which relates to subsequent and not prior incumbrances. See notes to s 73 Clauses (a) (b) and (c)

Whatever is due to the prior mortgagee—This includes interest on the mortgage up to the date of the confirmation of the sale (g)

Persons interested in the property sold—It is provided by the last clause of sub r (1) that the residue of the sale proceeds should be paid to persons interested in the property sold. This expression includes subsequent incumbrances (h). But it does not include unsecured creditors who cannot be said to be interested in the property sold; they are at liberty however to enforce their claims against any surplus payable to the mortgagee (i).

14 [Act 4 of 1882, s 99] (1) Where a mortgagee has obtained a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage, he shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage, and he may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in Order II, rule 2

(2) Nothing in sub rule (1) shall apply to any territories to which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has not been extended

Scope and object of the rule—This rule corresponds with s 99 of the Transfer of Property Act except that the words claim arising under the mortgage have been substituted for the words any claim whether arising under the mortgage or not. The effect of this alteration is to confine the operation of the present rule to cases where a mortgagee has obtained a personal decree against the mortgagor on the mortgage debt. In such a case the rule provides that the mortgagee shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree; he can have the property sold only by instituting a regular suit for sale (j) and obtaining a decree for sale under rules 4 and 5. It is clear that where a mortgagee brings a regular suit for sale and a decree is passed in such suit what would be sold is the mortgaged property free from the mortgage while in the other case where the suit is not for sale but on the mortgage debt only what would be sold is the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage in other words it is only the mortgagor's equity of redemption that would be sold. The object of the present rule is to prevent mortgages from suing their mortgagors on the mortgage debt as such and in the execution selling the bare equity of redemption thereby depriving the mortgagor of the right of redemption that would be given to him by the decree for sale (l) [see r 4 above]. A mortgages his property to B to secure repayment of Rs 5000 B sues A to recover Rs 5000 and obtains a personal decree against A. B then applies for attachment and sale of A's interest in the mortgaged property in execution of the decree. The property may be attached for there is nothing in this rule to bar the attachment (l) but the sale must be refused under this rule. B cannot bring the property to sale except by means of a regular suit for sale. Suppose now that B sues A on a debt unconnected with the mortgage and obtains a decree against A. Is he entitled to have A's interest in the mortgage sold in execution of such decree? Yes for the rule only precludes B from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage. Under sec 99 of the Transfer of Property Act however B could not bring the mortgaged property to sale even if the decree was for a debt unconnected with the mortgage debt (m). The scope of that section was very wide for it precluded a mortgagee from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the satisfaction of any claim whether arising under the mortgage or not. It may here be stated that the present rule is a rule of procedure and not a rule of substantive law it has therefore a retrospective operation (n).

Sale made in contravention of this rule is voidable not void—It was at one time thought that a sale made in contravention of this rule was absolutely void (o) and that the purchaser at such sale was not therefore entitled to recover possession from the mortgagor (p) and that if he did acquire possession he was bound to account for the rents and profits realized from the mortgaged property during the term of his possession (q). But this view is no longer tenable and it has been held in recent cases that a sale in contravention of this rule is not void but only voidable at the instance of the mortgagor or any other person interested in the equity of redemption (r). The sale in other words is valid until it is set aside. The procedure to set aside the sale is by way of application under sec 47 a separate suit is barred under that section. The application must be made before confirmation of the sale unless the applicant proves that owing to fraud or other reasons he was kept in ignorance of the sale proceedings preliminary to sale. The sale cannot be set aside after it is confirmed by the Court (s). Nor is it open to the mortgagor after confirmation of the sale to redeem the mortgage whether the property has been purchased by a third person (t) or by the mortgagee himself (u).

Decree —An order directing a person who has stood surety on behalf of a judgment debtor for the performance of a decree to pay the amount specified in the surety bond is not a decree within the meaning of this rule. It is therefore competent to the decree holder to have the property secured by the bond for the performance of the decree sold in execution under sec 145 without instituting a regular suit for sale (1)

Decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage —This rule does not apply unless the decree obtained by the mortgagee is for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage. The mortgage referred to in this rule must be a mortgage existing prior to the date of the decree and not one created by the decree [ills (1) and (2)]. Further it must be a subsisting mortgage and not one which by reason of the efflux of time or any other like circumstance has ceased to be enforceable at law [ill (3)]. Again the rule is not applicable when a usufructuary mortgagee has leased to the mortgagor and sues for rent (4) unless the lease was part of the mortgage transaction (5). Nor does the rule prevent a mortgagee purchasing with leave of the Court the equity of redemption at a Court sale in execution of his money decree on a claim independent of the mortgage (y)

Further the rule does not prevent a mortgagee who has two distinct mortgages one on property A and another on property B from selling B in execution of a money decree on a claim arising out of the mortgage on A and selling A in execution of a money decree on a claim arising out of the mortgage on B ( )

Illustrations

(1) A mortgages certain property to B which was then in the possession of X and agrees to deliver possession thereof to B after recovering possession thereof from X. A recovers possession of the property from X but does not deliver possession thereof to B. B sues A for possession and a decree is made in B's favour for possession and for costs. In execution of the decree for costs B applies for attachment and sale of the mortgaged property. Is B entitled to the order applied for? Yes for the claim in respect of cost is not a claim arising under the mortgage within the meaning of this rule. It arises under the decree passed for costs (a)

(2) In a suit for money a decree is passed by consent whereby the defendant is directed to pay to the plaintiff Rs 30,000. It is further declared by the decree that the plaintiff should have a first charge on certain immovable property belonging to the defendant. Is the plaintiff entitled to have the property sold in execution of the decree without instituting a regular suit for sale on the charge? Yes because their being no mortgage or charge prior to the decree the decree cannot be said to have been obtained for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage within the meaning of this rule. The immovable property must have been made security for the payment of the money before the decree was obtained otherwise the provisions of this rule do not apply (b)

(3) A mortgages two properties X and Y to B. Subsequently by reason of the wrongful act of A B is deprived of part of his security namely property Y. B thereupon sues A under sec 68 of the Transfer of Property Act and obtains a personal decree for the mortgage debt against A. In execution of the decree B applies for sale of property X. At this date B's remedy on the mortgage had become barred by limitation. The mortgage not being a subsisting mortgage [and A not having to redeem it] B is entitled to have property X sold in execution without bringing a regular suit for sale on the mortgage (c).

(4) A executes a usufructuary mortgage in favour of B to secure a debt of Rs 8 000 whereby he mortgages a fixed rate holding and his right to receive offerings at a temple. By a subsequent agreement between him and B A binds himself to pay annually Rs 100 to B in lieu of the offerings. Subsequently B sues A on that agreement and obtains a decree against A for Rs 3 200 being the arrears of the annual payments. This is a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage within the meaning of this rule, and B is not entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree. B's right to receive the money rested on his position as mortgagee (d).

He may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in O 2 r 2. —See notes to O 2 r 2 under the head Exceptions to the rule against the pitting of reliefs.

Charge—This rule applies not only to mortgages but also to charges (e). In a Calcutta case the holder of a charge on certain properties brought a suit on the charge and obtained a decree against the defendant personally with a declaration that the plaintiff was entitled to a charge on the properties. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to sell the properties in execution but must file a suit to enforce the charge as provided by this rule (f). But where in a suit on a mortgage bond a decree was passed by consent in the terms that the plaintiff will be entitled to realise the whole amount by taking out execution the property mortgaged shall remain charged under the mortgage. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to sell the property in execution (g).

In Patna it has been held that where in a suit for maintenance a decree is passed for the plaintiff directing the defendant to pay a fixed sum every month and declaring that the allowance fixed by the decree shall be a charge on certain property the plaintiff is entitled to sell the property in execution and no separate suit is necessary (h). In a Bombay case the suit was for money and a consent decree was passed directing the defendant to pay a sum of money to the plaintiffs and declaring a charge on certain properties belonging to the defendant. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to sell the property in execution and that it was not necessary to bring a separate suit for sale (i).

Security bond—A security bond given during the pendency of an appeal creating a charge on the sureties' property can be enforced by summary procedure and this rule does not apply when no person is named as mortgagee for the Court is not

ORDER XXXV

Interpleader

1 [S 471] In every suit of interpleader the plaintiff shall, in addition to the other statements necessary for plaints, state—

Plaint in interpleader suits

- (a) that the plaintiff claims no interest in the subject-matter in dispute other than for charges or costs,
- (b) the claims made by the defendants severally, and
- (c) that there is no collusion between the plaintiff and any of the defendants

Interpleader suits —See s 88 and notes thereto

2 [S 472] Where the thing claimed is capable of being paid into Court or placed in the custody of the Court the plaintiff may be required to so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit

Payment of thing claimed into Court

May be required to so pay or place it —These words have been substituted for the words must so pay or place it in view of the addition of the words immovable property in s 88 The procedure by payment or deposit is plainly not applicable to immovable property

3 [S 47] Where any of the defendants in an interpleader suit is actually suing the plaintiff in respect of the subject matter of such suit the Court in which the suit against the plaintiff is pending shall, on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted, stay the proceedings as against him, and his costs in the suit so stayed may be provided for in such suit but if, and in so far as, they are not provided for in that suit, they may be added to his costs incurred in the interpleader suit

Procedure where defendant is suing plaintiff

Alteration in the rule —The words on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted have been substituted for the words on being duly informed by the Court which passed the decree in the interpleader suit in favour of the stakeholder that such decree has been passed Under the old section proceedings in other litigation relating to the same subject matter could only be stayed on the passing of a decree in the interpleader suit Under the present rule they can be stayed on the very instituted of the interpleader suit

Appeal —An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O 43 r 1 cl (p)]

Procedure at first hearing 4 [S 473, R.S.C., O 57, r 7] (1) At the first hearing the Court may—

- (a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed, award him his costs, and dismiss him from the suit, or
- (b) if it thinks that justice or convenience so require, retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit

(2) Where the Court finds that the admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it to do so, it may adjudicate the title to the thing claimed

(3) Where the admissions of the parties do not enable the Court so to adjudicate, it may direct—

- (a) that an issue or issues between the parties be framed and tried, and
- (b) that any claimant be made a plaintiff in lieu of or in addition to the original plaintiff, and shall proceed to try the suit in the ordinary manner

Non appearance of claimant defendants—Where the claimants do not appear at the first hearing the Court may if the suit is properly instituted declare under sub r (1) that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the money claimed award him his costs and dismiss him from the suit (p)

Sub rule 3—This sub rule has been taken from O 57 r 7 of the English Rules.

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O 43 r 1 cl (p)]

5 [S 474] Nothing in this Order shall be deemed to enable agents to sue their principals, or tenants to sue their landlords, for the purpose of compelling them to interplead with any person other than persons making claim through such principals or landlords

Agents and tenants may not institute interpleader suits

(a) A deposits a box of jewels with B as his agent. C alleges that the jewels were wrongfully obtained from him by A and claims them from B. B cannot institute an interpleader suit against A and C.

(b) A deposits a box of jewels with B as his agent. He then writes to C for the purpose of making the jewels a security for a debt due from himself to C. A afterwards alleges that C's debt is satisfied and C alleges the contrary. Both claim the jewels from B. B may institute an interpleader suit against A and C.

Interpleader suit by Agents—In ill (a) C does not claim through A (principal) but adversely to him hence no interpleader suit can be brought In ill (b) C claims through A hence B may institute interpleader suit against A and C

Interpleader suit by tenants—A lets certain lands to B C alleges that the lands never belonged to A and claims the rent from B B cannot institute an interpleader suit against A and C this is because C claims adversely to A (landlord) But if C claims the rent alleging that the lands were sold to him by A after the same were let to B B may institute an interpleader suit against A and C the reason is that in this case C claims through A that is as purchaser from A The result is that an interpleader suit by a tenant can only be maintained if the defendant other than the landlord claims through the landlord (g) The following is a peculiar case A grants a perpetual lease of certain villages to his wife B B sub lets the villages to C A alleging that the lease granted by him to B was executed by him benami in the name of B gives notice to C claiming the rents of the villages B denies that the transaction was benami and she also claims the rents from C C can maintain an interpleader suit against A and B The reason given is that A must be deemed to claim through B (r) See Indian Evidence Act s 116

(s) Chh. Ganial v B. B. d. C. I. Fy (191) 17 Bom L R 339 28 IC 948

(b) some property, movable or immovable, specified in the agreement, shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or

(c) one or more of the parties shall do, or refrain from doing, some other particular act specified in the agreement

(2) Every case stated under this rule shall be divided into consecutively numbered paragraphs, and shall concisely state such facts and specify such documents as may be necessary to enable the Court to decide the questions raised thereby

2 [S 528] Where the agreement is for the delivery of any property, or for the doing, or the refraining from doing, any particular act the estimated value of the property to be delivered, or to which the act specified has reference, shall be stated in the agreement

Where value of subject matter must be stated

3 [S 529] (1) The agreement, if framed in accordance with the rules hereinbefore contained, may be filed in the Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit, the amount or value of the subject matter of which is the same as the amount or value of the subject matter of the agreement

Agreement to be filed and registered as suit

(2) The agreement when so filed, shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the other or the others of them as defendant or defendants, and notice shall be given to all the parties to the agreement, other than the party or parties by whom it was presented

4 [S 530] Where the agreement has been filed, the parties to it shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court and shall be bound by the statements contained therein

Parties to be subject to Court's jurisdiction

5 [S 531] (1) The case shall be set down for hearing as a suit instituted in the ordinary manner, and the provisions of this Code shall apply to such suit so far as the same are applicable

Hearing and disposal of case

(2) Where the Court is satisfied, after examination of O 3 the parties, or after taking such evidence as it thinks fit, —

- (a) that the agreement was duly executed by them,
- (b) that they have a bona fide interest in the question stated therein and
- (c) that the same is fit to be decided,

it shall proceed to pronounce judgment thereon, in the same way as in an ordinary suit, and upon the judgment so pronounced a decree shall follow

Summary Procedure on Negotiable Instruments

Application of order 1 [s 538] This Order shall apply O 3 only to—

- (a) the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay,
- (b) the Chief Court of Lower Burma,
- (c) the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind, and
- (d) any other Court to which sections 532 to 537 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, have been already applied

Courts of Small Causes in Calcutta Madras and Bombay — The corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882 applied also to Presidency Small Cause Courts Cl (c) of s 538 of the Code which expressly mentioned those Courts has been omitted in this rule the reason given being that its appropriate place would now be in rules under the Presidency Small Cause Act See O 51 r 1

Clause (d) — Although sections 532 to 537 have been applied to a subordinate Court yet the subordinate Judge of that Court when exercising Small Cause Court powers has no jurisdiction under this order (t)

Lahore High Court. — The Lahore High Court is not mentioned in clause (a) of this rule See as to this the undermentioned case (w)

2      2 [S 532] (1) All suits upon bills of exchange, hundis or promissory notes may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed hereunder, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed, but the summons shall be in Form No 4 in Appendix B or in such other form as may be from time to time prescribed

Institution of summary suits upon bills of exchange etc

(2) In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms, respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from a judge as hereinafter provided so to appear and defend, and, in default of his obtaining such leave or of his appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted, and the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree—

(a) for the principal sum due on the instrument and for interest calculated in accordance with the provisions of section 79 or section 80, as the case may be, of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, up to the date of the institution of the suit, or for the sum mentioned in the summons, whichever is less, and for interest up to the date of the decree at the same rate or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit, and

(b) for such subsequent interest, if any, as the Court may order under section 34 of this Code, and

(c) for such sum for costs as may be prescribed

Provided that, if the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum for costs, the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way

(3) A decree passed under this rule may be executed forthwith

Old section—This rule corresponds with s 532 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

- 1 The explanation to s 532 has been omitted and in lieu thereof the words the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted have been added into sub r (2) See notes below under the head The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted

- The fourth paragraph of s 53<sup>1</sup> which provided that the Court should not require the defendant to pay the amount claimed into Court or to give security therefor unless the Court thought that the defendant had not a prima facie case or that the defence was not made in good faith has been omitted See r 3 sub r (2) below

3 See also notes below Changes in sub r (2)

Changes in sub rule (2) —Clauses (a) (b) and (c) of sub r (2) and sub rule (3) were substituted after the words shall be entitled to a decree in sub r (2) for the following words by Act 30 of 1926 s 4 — for any sum not exceeding the sum mentioned in the summons together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of the decree and such sum for costs as may be prescribed unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way and such decree may be executed forthwith

See notes below Interest

Points of difference between summary suit and ordinary suit on negotiable instruments

- (1) A plaintiff enforcing a negotiable instrument may either bring a summary suit or he may bring a suit in the ordinary manner The advantage of a summary suit is that the defendant is not as in a suit brought in the ordinary manner entitled as of right to defend the suit The defendant in a summary suit must apply for leave to defend within 10 days from the service of the summons upon him (see Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 159) and such leave will be granted only if the affidavit filed by the defendant discloses such facts as would make it incumbent on the plaintiff to prove consideration or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient for granting leave to the defendant to appear and defend the suit If no leave to defend is granted the plaintiff is entitled to a decree
- (2) A summary suit must be brought within one year from the date on which the debt becomes due and payable [Limitation Act 1908 sch I art 6] The period of limitation for a suit brought in the ordinary manner on a negotiable instrument is 3 years Article 5 of the Limitation Act 1908 as it originally stood referred to suits under the summary procedure referred to in section 128 (2) (f) of the Code and this was construed as not including suits under O 37 (z) That article was accordingly amended by Act 30 of 1925 by adding to the entry in the first column the words where the provision of such summary procedure does not exclude the ordinary procedure in such suits and under O 37 of the said Code At the same time the period of limitation was extended from six months to one year
- (3) A summary suit can only be brought in the Courts mentioned in r 1

A negotiable instrument means a promissory note bill of exchange or cheque expressed to be payable to a specified person or his order or to the order of a specified person or to the bearer thereof or to a specified person or the bearer thereof (Negotiable Instruments Act 26 of 1881 s 13)

A bill of exchange is an instrument in writing containing an unconditional order signed by the maker directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money only to or to the order of a certain person or to the bearer of the instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act s 5)

2 A promissory note is an instrument in writing (not being a bank note or a currency note) containing an unconditional undertaking signed by the maker to pay a certain sum of money only to or to the order of a certain person or to the bearer of the instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act s 4)

Illustrations

(a) A executes an instrument whereby he promises to pay Rs 5 000 to B on demand. By the same instrument it is provided that B should not be entitled to call for payment of the said sum unless A fails to deliver certain goods to B within six months. The instrument is not a promissory note for the undertaking to pay Rs 5 000 is conditional upon A's failure to deliver the goods. Simon v Hakim Mahomed (1896) 19 Mad 368

(b) A executes an instrument whereby he promises to pay Rs 5 000 to B on demand. At the same time a separate agreement is made between the parties whereby B agrees not to demand payment of the sum of Rs 5 000 unless A fails to deliver certain goods to him within six months. The instrument is a promissory note. Simon v Hakim Mahomed (1896) 19 Mad 368

Limitation for suit—See notes above. Points of difference between summary suit and ordinary suit on negotiable instruments

Limitation for application for leave to defend—The period of limitation for an application for leave to appear and defend is 10 days from the date when the summons is served. Limitation Act sch 1 art 129. The Court has no power to extend the time (g) unless the Court has by a rule framed in that behalf made sec 3 of the Limitation Act applicable to such application as has been done by the High Court of Bombay. See App IV below [Rules made by the High Court of Bombay]

Form of summons in a summary suit—The summons in such a suit requires the defendant to obtain leave from the Court within 10 days from the service thereof to appear and defend the suit and within such time to cause an appearance to be entered on his behalf. see Appendix B Form No 4

Defendant shall not appear unless he obtains leave—This rule provides that a defendant who has failed to obtain leave to defend cannot be allowed to appear while the hearing is proceeding. It is therefore irregular for the Court to pass at his instance an order for the payment of the decretal amount by instalments under O 20 r 11 (1) above (2)

Interest—Sub rule (2) before it was amended by Act 30 of 1926 was in almost the same terms as s 33 of the Code of 1887. The sub rule has now been amended and provision has been made for interest first up to the date of the institution of the suit secondly up to the date of the decree and thirdly after the decree. As to interest up to the institution of the suit it is to be calculated in accordance with the provisions of sec 19 or sec 80 as the case may be of the Negotiable Instruments Act 1881. As to interest from the date of the institution of the suit to the date of the decree it may be awarded at the discretion of the Court at the same rate as aforesaid or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit. As to interest from and after the date of the decree the same may be awarded under sec 31 of the Code. Sec 79 of the Negotiable Instruments Act provides that when interest at the specified rate is expressly payable on a promissory note or bill of exchange interest shall be calculated at the rate specified on the amount of the principal money due thereon from the date of the instrument. Sec 80 of that Act was amended by Act 30 of 1926 being the same Act by which sub rule (2) was amended. By that section as amended it is provided that when no rate of interest is specified in the instrument interest on the amount due thereon shall notwithstanding any agreement relating to the interest between any parties to the instrument be calculated at the rate of six per centum per annum from the date at which the same ought to have been paid by the parties charged. This excludes oral agreements to pay interest (a)

The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted—These words have been substituted for the explanation to the old section. The explanation was inserted to negative the effect of a Calcutta decision (b). But the Explanation was characterized as wholly unintelligible and meaningless by Amir Ali J in the undermentioned case (c) and it has accordingly been replaced by the words cited in the head note. The effect of those words is to enable the plaintiff to succeed on his own allegations though the allegations may be of such a nature that if the defendant appear and denied them they would have to be proved by the plaintiff.

Suit against firm—The question whether when a summary suit is brought against a firm and service is effected upon a person as an alleged partner and such person appears under protest denying that he was a partner he could appear without obtaining leave under this rule is discussed in the undermentioned case (d).

3 [S 533] (1) The Court shall, upon application by the defendant, give leave to appear and to defend the suit upon affidavits which disclose such facts as would make it incumbent on the holder to prove consideration, or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application.

(2) Leave to defend may be given unconditionally or subject to such terms as to payment into Court giving security, framing and recording issues or otherwise as the Court thinks fit.

Alterations in the rule—Under the old sections it was obligatory upon the Court to grant leave to the defendant to appear and defend if he paid into Court the amount claimed by the plaintiff and mentioned in the summons. It is no longer so under the present rule. The words upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons or which occurred in s 533 after the word suit in the third line have been omitted.

Limitation—The application for leave to appear and defend must be made within 10 days from the date of service of the summons on the defendant. The date shown in the Sheriff's return as the date of service is the only date to which reference could be made to determine the question of limitation arising on an application under this section (e).

Sub rule (2)—As a rule leave to defend should be given unconditionally if the defendant shows a prima facie case or raises a triable issue. Leave should be made conditional if the Court doubts the bona fides of the defendant or thinks the defence is only put in to gain time (f).

Appeal—No appeal is allowed under the Code from an order under this rule. It has been recently held by the High Court of Calcutta that an order under this rule directing a defendant to give security as a term on which leave to defend should be

ORDER XXXVIII

Arrest and Attachment before Judgment

Arrest before judgment.

1 [Ss 447, 478] Where at any stage of a suit, other than a suit of the nature referred to in section 16, clauses (a) to (d) the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise,—

Where defendant may be called upon to furnish security for appearance

(a) that the defendant, with intent to delay the plaintiff, or to avoid any process of the Court or to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that O 3 may be passed against him,—

- (i) has absconded or left the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or
- (ii) is about to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or
- (iii) has disposed of or removed from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or
- (b) that the defendant is about to leave British India under circumstances affording reasonable probability that the plaintiff will or may thereby be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant in the suit, the Court may issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not furnish security for his appearance

Provided that the defendant shall not be arrested if he pays to the officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant any sum specified in the warrant as sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, and such sum shall be held in deposit by the Court until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court

The proviso to the rule is new

Scope of the Order—Order 21 deals with the arrest of a judgment debtor and the attachment of his property in execution of a decree passed against him. The present Order lays down rules for the arrest of a defendant and the attachment of his property before judgment. The object of these rules is to secure the plaintiff against any attempt on the part of the defendant to defeat the execution of any decree that may be passed against him

Reasonable probability—Where the defendant is about to leave British India it is not necessary to prove any intent on his part to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him. It is enough of the circumstances under which he is about to leave British India afford a reasonable probability that any decree that may be passed against him in the suit will thereby be obstructed or delayed in execution (h). The Court must be satisfied on two points (1) that the plaintiff has a cause of action which is prima facie unimpeachable subject to his proving the allegations in his plaint and (2) that the Court should have reason to believe on adequate materials that unless jurisdiction is exercised there is real danger that the defendant will remove himself from the ambit of the powers of the Court (i)

(i) C. I. v. P. v. P. v. P. (18 0) 2 N. P. 3
(i) Ch. Ch. v. M. v. P. v. P. (19 ) 0 |

The suit must be bona fide—In every case where an application is made under this rule the Court must be satisfied that the suit is bona fide. Where the plaintiff is indisputably entitled to a part of the relief claimed in the plaint the mere circumstance of the rest of the plaintiff's claim being of a disputable character does not render the suit mala fide (j)

Consequences of obtaining arrest on insufficient grounds—See e 93

Form—For form of warrant of arrest before judgment see App F form no 1

2 [S 479] (1) Where the defendant fails to show such cause the Court shall order him either to deposit in Court money or other property sufficient to answer the claim against him, or to furnish security for his appearance at any time when called upon while the suit is pending and until satisfaction of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit, or make such order as it thinks fit in regard to the sum which may have been paid by the defendant under the proviso to the last preceding rule

(2) Every surety for the appearance of a defendant shall bind himself, in default of such appearance, to pay any sum of money which the defendant may be ordered to pay in the suit

Rateable distribution—Insolvency of defendant—Where money is deposited by the defendant in Court under this rule it is a payment into Court to the general credit of the action and charged with a lien in favour of the plaintiff on the latter obtaining a decree in his favour. Where after payment into Court other judgment creditors of the defendant attach the money or the defendant becomes an insolvent the plaintiff on obtaining his decree is entitled to priority over the claims respectively of the attaching creditors and the Official Receiver. The reason is that the amount so paid cannot be taken to have been ordered and levied as security for the defendant's appearance (k). See notes to r 5 below. Rateable distribution Insolvency of defendant

Money sufficient to answer the claim—In a Calcutta case (l) Rankin C J said: "When one looks at Order 38 Rule 2 and Form 2 of Appendix F one does not find it contemplated that a defendant on failing to make deposit is to give security for appearance in a particular sum to be fixed by the Judge but that if this security takes the form of a bond by a surety it is to be the whole amount of the decree. If the defendant can give the security himself he will give it for the claim by deposit of money or property. Otherwise he will get some one to go bail for his appearance. This is I think the scheme of Order 38."

Form—For form of summons to defendant see App F form no 3

Provided that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule in any case for a longer period than six months, nor for a longer period than six weeks when the amount or value of the subject matter of the suit does not exceed fifty rupees

Provided also that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule after he has complied with such order

Appeal—An order for arrest is appealable (m) under section 104 (b) though it is not specified under O 43 r 1

Form—For form of order for committal see App F form no 4

Attachment before Judgment

5 [Ss 483, 484] (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise, that the defendant, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,—

Where defendant may be called upon to furnish security for production of property

(a) is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property, or

(b) is about to remove the whole or any part of his property from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court may direct the defendant, within a time to be fixed by it, either to furnish security, in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security

(2) The plaintiff shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached and the estimated value thereof

(3) The Court may also in the order direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property so specified

Alterations in the rule—The words or has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court leaving therein property belonging to him which occurred in the old section after cl (b) of sub r (1) have been omitted

Object of the rule—The main object of an attachment before judgment is to enable the plaintiff to realize the amount of the decree if one is eventually passed from the defendant's property (n)

The Court is satisfied—Vague allegations are insufficient (o) The power to attach is not to be exercised lightly and without clear proof of the mischief aimed at (p)

Is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property—The expression property includes property of every description whether movable or immovable (q) The expression his property refers to the property of the defendant It does not refer to property which is the joint property of the plaintiff and the defendant Thus where A sued B for partnership accounts and applied for an attachment before judgment of the Partnership property on the allegation that B was about to dispose of the same it was held that the case was not one for an attachment before judgment but for the appointment of a receiver under O 40 below (r) A man is not debarred from dealing with his property because a suit is filed against him and an attempt to sell a small portion of a large estate does not warrant the inference that the defendant intends to obstruct or delay execution (s)

Effect of order of adjudication on attachment before judgment—See notes to r 10 below under the same head

Rateable distribution—Where money is paid into Court by the defendant under this rule the plaintiff acquires no charge on the money and it passes to the Official Assignee

Liability of surety—The Rangoon High Court holds that the liability of the surety ceases with the dismissal of the suit and does not continue during the appeal (v) The Bombay High Court makes the liability continue during the appeal (u) If the defendant dies pending the suit and the cause of action survives against his legal representatives and the legal representatives are brought on the record the death of the defendant does not operate as a discharge of the surety (x)

Mortgage suit—An attachment before judgment may be granted in a suit on a mortgage (y)

Principle of sec 64 applies to attachment before judgment—Sec 64 of the Code provides that when property is attached in execution of a decree any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment The same principle applies to the case of attachment before judgment provided that a decree is ultimately passed for the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made This clearly appears from r 9 below which provides that an attachment before judgment shall be removed when the suit is dismissed (z)

Property situated outside jurisdiction—Where the property sought to be attached is outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court the proper course to follow is to transmit the order for attachment to the Court in whose jurisdiction the property is situated (a) See s 136 above

Provincial Small Cause Court—See r 13 below

Divorce proceedings—An order for attachment before judgment will not be made in divorce proceedings governed by the Indian Divorce Act 4 of 1869 (b)

Forms—For form of attachment before judgment with order to call for surety see App F form no 5 For form of security for productions of property see App F form no 6

Property specified—That is the property specified by the plaintiff as required by r 5 sub r (2). Such property may be within or without the jurisdiction of the Court. The words in sec 483 of the Code of 1882 were property within the jurisdiction of the Court. It was accordingly held by the High Courts of Madras and Bombay that the only property that could be attached before judgment was property within the jurisdiction of the Court (c). On the other hand it was held by the High Court of Calcutta and recently also by the Madras High Court that sec 483 was to be read with sec 648 [now s 136] and that the two sections read together enable the Court to attach before judgment property situate beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction (d). The omission of the words within the jurisdiction of the Court clearly shows that the Court may attach property before judgment even though it may be situated beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction (e).

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule in so far as it directs an attachment. The portion of the order which demands security is not appealable (f). See O 43 r 1 cl (q).

Form—For form of attachment before judgment see App F form no 7.

7 [S 486] Save as otherwise expressly provided, the attachment shall be made in the manner provided for the attachment of property in execution of a decree.

Mode of attachment—See O 21

8 [S 487] Where any claim is preferred to property attached before judgment, such claim shall be investigated in the manner herein before provided for the investigation of claims to property attached in execution of a decree for the payment of money.

Investigation of claim to property attached before judgment

Investigation of claim—The claim is investigated as under O 21 r 58 and the property is either released from attachment or the claim disallowed. The party against whom such summary order is passed may institute a suit as under O 21 r 63. Limitation is under article 120 but if the claim is preferred in execution proceedings article 11 applies (g).

9 [S 488] Where an order is made for attachment before judgment, the Court shall order the attachment to be withdrawn when the defendant furnishes the security required, together with security for the costs of the attachment, or when the suit is dismissed.

Removal of attachment when security furnished or suit dismissed

(g) Ar coach lam v Periasami (19 1) 41 Mal 902 70 I C 439 (-1) A M 163 (f B).

Removal of attachment where suit dismissed—The latter part of the rule which requires that the attachment shall be removed when the suit is dismissed is no more than directory. Hence even if no order is made withdrawing the attachment the attachment falls to the ground on dismissal of the suit (A) or if the suit abates the attachment dies with it (1). A sues B and obtains an attachment before judgment. The suit is dismissed but the Court omits to make an order withdrawing the attachment. A then appeals from the decree. Pending the appeal B sells the property that was attached before judgment to C. Thereafter the suit is decreed on appeal. A then applies for execution of the decree by the sale of the property on the footing that the attachment before judgment subsisted and that it was not therefore necessary to re-attach it. A is not entitled to have the property sold. The attachment before judgment came to an end on the dismissal of A's suit though no order was made withdrawing the attachment (2). Thus the reversal of the order dismissing of the suit does not revive the attachment and in this respect the rule differs from that in regard to attachment after judgment. For in the case of attachment in execution a decree in a suit under O 21 r 63 setting aside a release from attachment operates to revive the attachment and a private transfer made after release from attachment under O 21 r 60 will be void under sec 64 if the right to attach is subsequently established by suit (3). See notes to O 21 r 60. Effect of order of release

10 [S 489] Attachment before judgment shall not affect the rights, existing prior to the attachment, of persons not parties to the suit, nor bar any person holding a decree against the defendant from applying for the sale of the property under attachment in execution of such decree.

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of strangers nor bar decree holder from applying for sale

Effect of order of adjudication on attachment before judgment—Attachment before judgment does not confer any priority as against the Official Assignee though the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made may ultimately obtain a decree in the suit. A sues B and attaches B's property before judgment. A decree is then passed for A. Between the date of the attachment and the date of the decree B's property vests in the Official Assignee under a vesting order. The Official Assignee applies to the Court for removal of the attachment on the ground that the property has vested in him. A contends that the attachment being prior to the date of the vesting order his claim has a priority over that of the Official Assignee. A's contention will not be upheld and the attachment will be removed (1). See notes to s 64 under the head Effect of order of adjudication on attachment on p 213 above.

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of persons not parties to the suit—A and B are members of a joint Hindu family. C sues A and obtains an attachment before judgment of A's interest in the joint family property. C then obtains a decree against A. A dies after the decree. On A's death his interest in the property passes by survivorship to B and C is not entitled to have A's share

1 sold in execution of the decree (m) But according to the Madras High Court attachment before judgment followed by a decree does operate to defeat the right of survivorship (n)

Attachment before judgment not to bar rights of other decree holders — A institutes a suit against B and obtains an attachment before judgment of B's property. Subsequently C another creditor of B obtains a decree against B. C is entitled to have the property attached and sold in execution of this decree. The attachment before judgment does not confer any right upon A to have his decree satisfied in priority to that of C (o)

11 [ S 490 ] Where property is under attachment by virtue of the provisions of this Order and a decree is subsequently passed in favour of the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary upon an application for execution of such decree to apply for a re attachment of the property

Property attached before judgment not to be re attached in execution of decree

Scope of the rule — The effect of this rule is merely to do away with the necessity for a re attachment of the property. But it does not exempt the plaintiff when a decree follows the attachment from making the usual application for execution under O 21 r 11 (7) (p). This is now made clear by the substitution of the words "it shall not be necessary upon an application for execution of such decree to apply for re attachment of the property" for the words "it shall not be necessary to re attach the property in execution of such decree". The rule was applied when the property attached before judgment was attached and brought to sale by another decree holder. The judgment debtor paid the amount of the second decree and on the sale being set aside it was held that the attachment before judgment revived and that the first decree holder could in execution bring the property to sale without a fresh attachment (q). The rule does not give the decree holder at whose instance the property was attached before judgment any right to preferential treatment over other decree holders who may have applied for a rateable distribution under s 73 (r). Again if the execution application is dismissed O 21 r 57 applies and the attachment ceases (s).

Whether re attachment in execution operates as a waiver — Re attachment in execution of a decree though no re attachment is necessary under this rule is not of itself a waiver or abandonment of the attachment before judgment. The case is different whether there is an express or manifest abandonment (t).

Objection that property attached before judgment is not saleable — The defendant's omission to object to an application for attachment before judgment on the ground that the property is not saleable within the meaning of s 60 does not preclude him from raising that objection when an application is made for execution of the decree passed in the suit (u).

ORDER XXXIX

Temporary Injunctions and Interlocutory Orders

Temporary Injunctions

Cases in which temporary injunction may be granted

1 [S 402] Where in any suit it is proved by affidavit or otherwise—

O 39, r 1

(a) that any property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree, or

(b) that the defendant threatens, or intends, to remove or dispose of his property with a view to defraud his creditors

the Court may by order grant a temporary injunction to restrain such act, or make such other order for the purpose of staying and preventing the wasting, damaging, alienation, sale, removal or disposition of the property as the Court thinks fit, until the disposal of the suit or until further orders

Temporary and perpetual injunctions—Injunctions are of two kinds temporary and perpetual Temporary injunctions are regulated by rr 1 and 2 of this order perpetual injunctions are regulated by ss 55 57 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877 A party against whom a perpetual injunction is granted is thereby restrained forever from doing the act complained of A perpetual injunction can only be granted by final decree made at the hearing and upon the merits of the suit A temporary or interlocutory injunction on the other hand may be granted on an interlocutory application at any stage of the suit The injunction is called temporary for it endures only until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court (w) Thus if A's neighbour commences to build on a plot of land belonging to him a house which if completed, would obstruct the access of light and air over the said plot to the windows of A's house in respect of which A claims an easement he may sue his neighbour for a perpetual

Effect of temporary injunction—A temporary injunction granted under this rule has not the effect of making a subsequent alienation of the property void. Hence if a party against whom a temporary injunction is granted restraining him from alienating the property sells or mortgages the property pending the injunction the sale or mortgage is not void. The only penalty A incurs by alienating the property in spite of the injunction is that prescribed by r 2 (3) namely that other property belonging to him may be attached and sold in order to award out of the sale proceeds compensation to the party on whose application the injunction was granted and he may also be detained in the civil prison. In this respect a temporary injunction has a different effect from an attachment for it will be seen on referring to s 64 that when property is attached any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment is void against all claims enforceable under the attachment (f).

Property in dispute in a suit—Note that the property in respect of which an injunction may be granted in the circumstances mentioned in cl (a) of this rule must be property in dispute in the suit and no other (g) for you cannot get an injunction to restrain a man who is alleged to be a debtor from parting with his property (h). Where a plaintiff who is out of possession claims possession the Court will not grant an injunction against the defendant in possession under a claim of right unless the threatened injury will be irreparable and an injunction may be granted as to the user of premises which the plaintiff has leased to the defendant (i). In any event the plaintiff must show a prima facie case in support of the title asserted by him (j). For this reason the Court will as a rule refuse interim injunctions to protect patents of recent origin (k). See notes to r 7 below.

An application for an injunction restraining a party to the suit from interfering with the applicant's right to worship in and to have free access to a temple which was the subject matter of the suit pending the disposal of the suit does not fall either under cl (a) or cl (b) of this rule (l).

Disposal of property in fraud of creditors—The threat or intent to remove or dispose of property with a view to defraud creditors must be proved by definite evidence (m).

Property in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree—Certain property attached in execution of a decree obtained by A against B is notified for sale at the instance of A. C alleging that the property belongs to him and not to B sues A and B for a declaration of his title to the property and applied for an injunction under this rule to restrain A from bringing the property to sale until the suit is disposed of. Has the Court power to grant the injunction under this rule? Yes for the case is one in which the property in dispute in the suit is in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of the decree. It is immaterial that the Court in which the suit is brought is different from the Court executing the decree or so long as it has jurisdiction to entertain the suit that it is a Court of lower grade than the Court executing the decree. Thus if the Court executing the decree is the Court of a District Judge and the Court in which the suit is brought is the Court of a Subordinate Judge the latter Court though a Court of inferior grade has power under this rule to stay the sale and execution proceedings pending before the District Court (n).
